WEALTH AND POVERTY IN TORONTO.

Toronto is one of the wealthiest cities in Canada, but there is also want and suffering there, chiefly due to the shortening of employment and the influx of immigrants. The Toronto papers are making urgent appeals for help and these appeals are being responded to. Says The News: "The hundreds of mothers and babies who are suffering from privation and want to the starvation point in Toronto today must be helped." In another column of the same paper we read: A man called up over the telephone—"Do you mean to tell me 100 babies died of starvation in Toronto in four weeks? It can't be true babies dying for lack of food!" "It is only too true; the figures are not exaggerated," was the reply. It is painful to learn that such conditions exist in Canada. It is pleasing to read that energetic and efficient steps are now being taken to extend relief.

THE LIABILITY OF TRAIN MEN.

While serious railway accidents have been fortunately few in Prince Edward Island they have been very numerous and fatal in Western Canada within a few years past. This has brought to the front the liability of the conductors and train crews in cases where persons or property suffer by such accidents. As the law stands every employee of a railway who willfully or negligently violates any by law, rule or regulation of the company, or order or notice of the Minister of Railways or board of Railway Commissioners is liable to fine or imprisonment of such violation leads to personal injury or property loss.

The other day a deputation of Railway men asked that this section of the law be amended so as to limit its operation to cases of wilful violation, and that mere negligence should not render the employee liable to punishment. There are doubtless some cases in which what might seem to be a very slight degree of negligence has led to severe punishment because of the gravity of the resulting accident, but in view of the alarming list of fatalities in the railway records of the past two or three years the present is hardly a fit time for relaxing any of the safeguards which make for the security of the travelling public. It would seem to be a time for extending rather than restricting the liability for such acts of omission and negligence.

While such are the broader aspects of the question the trainman's side of it is not without support among those who have made themselves familiar with it. Some the multitude of rules and regulations are not possible to be kept on all occasions. The conductor who through rigid observance of all the rules habitually brings his train in late, soon finds himself in disfavor and compelled to make explanations. And get to make all the stops required and go slow around curves may make it impossible to be on time. The rules may be disobeyed an hundred times for the purpose of making time and if nothing happens the transgression is not heard of, but if an accident occurs the rules are put in evidence against the train crew and the penalties exacted.

It is impossible to make rules which will fit every condition and emergency that may arise in the operation of railway trains, and it is probably impossible to strictly observe all the rules laid down on all occasions. We doubt whether there is a conductor on the road today who has not knowingly or negligently departed from some regulation of his railway or of the higher authority in cases where he felt fully justified because the rule was either impossible of observance, or was a misfit on that particular occasion. But yet he took dangerous chances in doing so if anything went wrong.

What we have said is intended to apply generally without any special local application. The train hands of the P. E. Island Railway have a most excellent record in regard to carrying persons and property safely and it speaks volumes for their alertness and caution.

THE CIVIC ELECTIONS.

Today is nomination day in the civic elections, and following the discussion at the citizens' meeting last night in Market Hall it may be expected that during the week to come, down to and including polling day, a considerable interest may be awakened. So far the campaign has been remarkably tame and uneventful down to last night, both in the Mayoralty and Ward contests. Perhaps more activity, more public discussion and general interest than have so far been shown would have been a healthful symptom.

The citizens should realise that they are about to choose their civic rulers for two years to come and that upon the judiciousness of their choice the material and moral welfare of the city during that time will very largely depend. During the past two years we have had an exceedingly quiet, orderly and sober community, unexcelled if not unequalled throughout Canada in that regard, while satisfactory progress has been made in building up, improving and beautifying our city. Good citizens must desire these favorable conditions to continue and will no doubt realize the importance of so placing their votes as to contribute to that end.

The white plague, tuberculosis was responsible for 1,933 deaths in Ontario during 1907. This was nearly twice the number of deaths (1,018) due to smallpox scarlet fever, enteric fever, diphtheria, measles and whooping cough combined.

A bill is now before the New York Legislature to prohibit under heavy penalties all trading in stocks on margin. Should it become law, which is improbable, ninety per cent of the business transacted on the New York Stock Exchange would cease.

AT LEISURE.

When the 'Varsity Professor
  Trims his study light,
Digs and delves among the classics
  Nearly half the night,
So that on the morrow in his
  Fervid peroration
All the lads who hear his voice may
  Gain an inspiration,

What is Mrs. Shallow doing,
  Pretty Social Queen,
While the wise Professor labors?
  —Playing bridge, I ween.

When the banker, sane and careful,
  Labors all the night
To protect a thousand people
  From a sudden fright,
When the savings of the widow
  Might be swept away,
And the battle has been won before we
  Greet another day.

What is Mrs. Shallow doing,
  Airy little midge?
While the banker toils for others
  She is playing bridge.

When the nurse, clear-eyed and cheerful,
  Smooths the patient's brow
Smiles at him and murmurs softly
  "You'll be better now,"
When the housemaid sweeps the parlor,
  Toils without cessation,
Or the bright stenographer
  Taketh our dictation.

What is Mrs. Shallow doing?
  Useless little midge,
When the whole blamed world is working.
  She is playing bridge.

—Exchange.
