INSPIRING SERMON YESTERDAY MORNING

Rev. R. G. Fulton Gives an Eloquent Address to the Island Battery on the Moral Equipment of the Soldier

A church parade of the Island Heavy Battery was held yesterday morning at the First Methodist Church under ideal conditions. The men marched with the Fourth Regiment Band to the church, where they occupied the centre seats. Several patriotic selections, with bell accompaniment were given by Prof. Thompson and Miss Nicoll rendered the solo "Jesus, Lover of my Soul," with fine feeling and expression.

Taking as his text Samuel I, 17, 40th verse "And he chose him five smooth stones," Rev. Mr. Fulton gave an inspiring address on the equipment of the soldier, dividing his sermon into five heads, representing the five stones.

"It is not necessary that I should describe the scene which the text depicts," said the preacher, "but only to say that in the trying times that lie before us these round smooth stones which had been burnished by the course of the waters may have some lessons for us in this present day. These little water brooks ran north and south and on every side of the army of Israel. For 40 days this giant had walked up and down in front of his army and demanded that the Israelites should send over their champion to meet him but no man had answered the challenge.

For some reason Israel could not find a man who would face this giant of the Philistine army and it must have been with great humiliation that these Israelites, who had great and glorious traditions, and who had had many triumphs in their national history, found they had no man who was willing to do battle with this enemy. But there was a shepherd lad, a young fellow from the hills, who was dismayed at their giant adversary. He had asked the reason for Israel being downhearted, and when informed he had asked if there was not a man who was prepared to accept the challenge.

The reply was that no man had offered, then David said that he would go and his brothers tried to persuade him to go back home to tend the few sheep he herded on the mountain side. The claims of home were urged by his brothers, but David would not listen to them. He recognized that the honour of his country, the honour of his nation, the honour of his God was at stake. He recognized that it was not essentially the preparation but the quality of the man who was to champion their cause that counted. True manhood must be the inherent quality if success is to be attained.

I want to speak to you of the equipment of the man. The education that a man receives is essential to a certain degree, but unless he possess other qualities and unless the equipment of the man is complete, our training shall fail, our cause will perish; in the hour of testing we shall sink, and failure and the stigma shall be ours. After all, whilst education might do much for a man, unless he had manhood to build upon, there was small hope of success. These months of preparation had a great deal to do with their ultimate success; to add power to their arms when the day of battle came. Unless they had manhood in the men they sought to train there was small hope of success in the trying hour. There must be manhood, courage and power and fortitude in the man before he could be relied on. These were God's gifts. Some of them had read the account in the newspapers of the Russian peasant who was seized by the Austrians, who demanded of him that he should become their guide to the camp of the Russian enemy. He agreed that he would lead them through a pass in the mountains to the place to which they were going. The man was put at the head of the army. A terrible storm came on, but with a sense which seemed to be inspired, the man led them on and on through the mountain fastnesses. Then suddenly the Austrians found themselves in the midst of their Russian foes. The peasant had led them into the enemy's lines. And then the Russian guns boomed out their message of death. It is true that the peasant disappeared almost instantly by the Austrians, but for generations to come the name of that Russian peasant would go down to posterity as one of the nation's heroes and martyrs. They would tell of his faithfulness to the last. Only a poor peasant, untrained, illiterate, acquainted with the greatest qualities of manhood which placed him among the immortals.

David went forth with a sling and with five small stones from the brook. The first stone we may call the stone of honesty or candour. Here is an old score shepherd of the hills, a man of whom evidently little is known, who comes to Saul and Saul the King is prepared to give unto him his armour, to send him forth to do battle with the giant. David finds himself in an uncomfortable position. He tries the armour on and rejects it; he tries the sword and rejects it; he discards them all and tells Saul, "I am not prepared to undergo battle with such weapons as these," and we find him laying aside with candour and honesty the arms of Saul and preparing to go forth with his own weapons to do battle with the giant Philistine. I assert that if most would only use this stone of honesty and candour it would save them from many serious situations.

There are new conditions that surround a young man in a new sphere when he first enters. He is utterly ignorant of the conditions that surround him. Suddenly he finds that his manliness is at stake—that his reputation is at stake. He finds that if he takes part in some of his companions' pleasures that he is going to lose his manhood, his strength of character. I would ask you in such circumstances does not your nature rebel against the conditions that are put upon you? I cannot stay here, I cannot indulge in these things, I cannot participate in these so-called pleasures. It means the loss of my character, the loss of my manhood. Does it not bring out all one's manhood to say, "No, these things must not and will not appear to me." In their desire to cultivate friends and develop sociability along some lines men find it easy to spend too much money.

This is one of the things that weaken a man. In his desire to travel with those whom he has chosen as his companions he feels the need of more money. Oftentimes it will involve him in debt. He will do things which will afterwards demoralise him. Oh, for a man who can turn to these friends and say "I cannot afford to indulge in these things, I am not going to have anything to do with leather goods, timber and miscellaneous stores amount to $6,142.25. Some $10,665,490 of clothing and textiles has been ordered here. As regards food and forage the total is $23,397,385, and wagons, etc., to the amount of $228,183,180. Orders for which $228,183,180 have been purchased in the Dominion. A great part of the orders has already been shipped and paid for, while a larger part is still under contract for delivery.

Orders for munitions of war placed in this country, according to the statement, totals $188,183,180. Orders for leather goods, timber and miscellaneous stores amount to $6,142.25. Some $10,665,490 of clothing and textiles has been ordered here. As regards food and forage the total is $23,397,385, and wagons, etc., to the amount of $228,183,180. Orders for which $228,183,180 have been purchased in the Dominion. A great part of the orders has already been shipped and paid for, while a larger part is still under contract for delivery.

I find that this young man equipped himself with the stone of determination. David must have been a most marvellous man, when you read the account of him, when you read his own brethren—laughed at by his own relatives. I think they said, "It is far better for you to go back to the sheep. You are not a man of war." They piled ridicule on him. They laughed at him. In spite of the laughter, sarcasm and ridicule, David went on. He was heaping ridicule upon his own race, and his only desire was to redeem his nation from disgrace and defeat at the hands of the Philistines. This is one of the strongest qualities a man can possess. Sarcasm—we get it from the Greek word Sarkas, an instrument which cuts. Sarcasm cuts, and oh how deep a mark it makes upon us. And for this reason some of us fail and lose our powers of determination. We are tossed hither and thither as the surf of the sea, and become unstable and lose our determination. We speak of the building courage of the British. No one thinks that it is an unreasonable courage. When we speak of this, we mean tenacity of purpose, something which eventually will bring honour and glory to the British Empire.

You remember the story of Nelson when he was only a captain of a man-of-war. If it had not been for the success which attended the battle of the Nile Nelson would have lost his place in history. His superior officer had given the order to cease fire, but when Nelson saw the signal, with the immortal words, "I am not a man of war," he said that three or four more shots would turn the tide of victory in our favour. To cease fire would mean the loss of the battle. You remember Nelson placed the telescope to his blind eye and said: "I cannot see the signal." It is true he faced court martial, but his foresight and courage gained him honour and glory. It was the power to see further than the other man. The determination to win the battle under any circumstances. This is what lends a halo to Nelson's name as long as the British Empire shall last.

We must have the courage that holds us to the right. I like to think of this shepherd lad as possessing a great courage, a courage which faces every obstacle. When they told him of the size of this giant, whose head weighed at least fifty pounds, whose sword weighed fifty pounds, David faced them and said, "Did I not fight the lion and the bear, and shall not the Lord of Israel be my defence? It is not my battle. It is the battle of the Lord." And with a courage which would not be set at naught he resolved to do or die. This reminds us of the thought that there are men whose purposes have been misapprehended,

RUSSIAN ARMY OPPOSING GERMANS

(Special to the Guardian.)
PETROGRAD, Aug. 15.—Russian armies having steadily extricated themselves from the Warsaw sack in which the Germans tried to enclose them, are now stubbornly opposing German advances toward Bialystok on a line 70 miles east of Warsaw on both sides of the railroad between the Polish capital and Bialystok. The Baltic campaign appears to be at a standstill, with the Russians astride the highway between Vitkimir and Poneviesch, and threatening communications between the invaders army. The Germans are approaching, slightly nearer to Kovno. They are pounding the position with their heavy artillery guns, to which Russian artillery is replying frequently. Peasants who escaped from German labor gangs have described deliberate preparations for assault on Kovno which began three months ago. The Germans imported an enormous mass of structural materials, built paved roads from the westward, dug foundations fifteen feet deep for mortars, taking endless pains in preparing concrete platforms. When the refugees escaped no 40 centimetre gun had arrived, but those of similar calibre, each requiring three large tractors, were being hauled into position.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT'S ORDERS IN CANADA

(From our own correspondent.)
OTTAWA, Aug. 15.—Orders placed in Canada by the British Government in reference to war supplies and now executed or under execution total the vast sum of $230,000,000, according to an official statement issued today, in which details are given of the different articles purchased and their amounts. The Trade and Commerce Department is also collecting information as to orders placed in the Dominion by the other Allies. While it is possible to obtain statistics as to supplies directly purchased there is much difficulty in coming at even approximate values in connection with the large amount of indirect buying done here, but the data will be collected if possible.

Orders for munitions of war placed in this country, according to the statement, totals $188,183,180. Orders for leather goods, timber and miscellaneous stores amount to $6,142.25. Some $10,665,490 of clothing and textiles has been ordered here. As regards food and forage the total is $23,397,385, and wagons, etc., to the amount of $228,183,180. GERMANS TO HALT IN RUSSIAN ADVANCE

(Special to the Guardian.)
BUDAPEST, Aug. 15.—All signs indicate that the Austro-German armies will not follow up their advantage any further than the second line of Russian defences after the fall of the Russian fortresses, but will reorganise themselves behind Warsaw and await further developments there strengthening and rebuilding defences behind them. This theory is not only borne out by the fact that further advance would be suicidal, owing to marshes, but also by the statement of General Marwitz, commander of the tenth German army corps, who is undergoing a cure in Hungary at present.

SUMMARY OF WAR SITUATION

LONDON, Aug. 15.—Having recovered from the check inflicted on him during the week by the Russians, Von Buelow, commander of portion of the army operating on the west of the River Dvinsk, has again taken the offensive, and according to an official report published at Berlin to-day has beaten the Russians in a battle in the vicinity of Kublasko and pushed them back in a north-easterly direction, taking over two thousand prisoners. To the south, before Kovno, the Russians, according to the same source of information, made an unsuccessful sortie from Kovno, which the Germans are approaching. In the Polish sector the various German armies are slowly drawing in their line and advancing from north-west and south on Brest-Litovsk. While they continue to take comparatively small batches of prisoners, they make no claim to capture of artillery or booty, which is considered by military observers as a fair proof of their intention to retreat and that for a long time will be able to prevent the Germans from detaching any part of their army for large ventures elsewhere. The only evidence of activity outside of Poland and the Baltic provinces is on the Serbian frontier, where the bombardment of Belgrade by the Austrians, and counter bombardment of Semlin and Panscova by Serbians, has been resumed. According to a Nish despatch Austrian attempts to cross the Danube near Scriban and Romanian borders were repulsed. It is believed by military experts that this region will be the scene of the next Austro-German offensive. Speculation is rife in military circles as to whether Roumania as well as Serbia will be attacked because of Roumania's refusal to allow munitions of war to pass to Turkey, which is being pressed on the Caucasus and Dardanelles fronts. There is no news from the Dardanelles, but information is expected of a new movement, of which the landings by the Allies last week were preliminary. At Artois, the Forest of Argonne and the Vosges mountains continue to be scenes of activity on the western front, but no serious battles are in progress.

SERBIAN CAPITAL BEING BOMBARDED

(Special to the Guardian.)
LONDON, Aug. 15.—The bombardment of Belgrade, the Serbian capital, has been resumed by the Austrians, according to official statement issued at Nish on Friday. There is said to have been no loss of life.

NEW POSITIONS OF GERMANS AND AUSTRIANS

(Special to the Guardian.)
PETROGRAD, Aug. 15.—The new positions occupied by the Germans and Austrians were outlined with approximate accuracy on good authority to-day for the first time since the fall of Warsaw. The line starting from the vicinity of Ossowetz, near the Prussian border, crosses Mazurian Lakes region, curves south and east, running through Sokolov, Siedlee, Lukow, Ostrowa and Wladowa. Concentration of the Austro-German forces in the direction of the fortress of Brest-Litovsk is proceeding along three roads.

PAN-AMERICAN APPEAL TO MEXICO

(Special to the Guardian.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—A Pan-American appeal to Mexico, now being delivered to the chiefs of factions and governors of states, was made public here last night. Without even an intimation of armed intervention, it calls upon the leaders to meet somewhere in Mexico on neutral ground in a conference "to adopt the first steps necessary to constitutional reconstruction of the country" and to issue a call for immediate elections. The services of the United States or any other Pan-American conferees are offered as intermediaries.

RAILWAY SMASH MANY KILLED

LONDON, Aug. 15.—A Havas despatch from Nish under date of August 12, and delayed in transmission, contains what apparently is a Serbian official statement issued on August 9th. The text is as follows—Serbian troops destroyed by artillery fire the Austrian attempts to fortify points on the left banks of Save and Danube Rivers. During the night of the 9th our artillery opened fire occasionally on the enemy's supply transports on the Berchereva-Orsoval road near the village of Tisevita, in the neighbourhood of Skelevats. The same night the enemy's artillery opened fire on Dogni Milanovate, beyond Tekia, killing a child, after opening a vigorous artillery and infantry fire on our bank of the river. The Serbian artillery immediately reduced the enemy to silence. On the morning of August 10th enemy soldiers in boats attempted to pass to the right bank of the Danube near the ancient Turkish fortress of Gelubatz, beyond Dogni Milanovate, but were repulsed.
