96 And Going Strong

(By The Canadian Press)

EDMONTON, Alta., Sept. 17.—"It happened in the Victoria Cafe Tuesday night," says the Edmonton Journal, telling about a farmer of 68 years of age announcing that he was tired of being "on the land" and intended going into the muskrat industry, and was taking his father, 96 years old, with him to Saskatchewan, where the new enterprise would be begun. There were three of them, The Journal continues. "One was a young man of about 40 and a second was an individual who looked what the novelists call middle-aged. A third was obviously an old gentleman. I tell you what, said the middle-aged fellow, I have been on the land all my life and I've come to the conclusion that there is nothing in it.

"Well, he went on, as he munched a hamburger sandwich with evident relish, I was 68 last Sunday and I've decided to make a new start, and I'm going back to Saskatchewan and open up a muskrat farm. There's money in that and if my dad here likes to come along, why, he's welcome.

"And dad, smiling gently, nodded his white-haired 96 year old head in acquiescence."

Sues For Two Divorces In Odd Marriage Tangle

RENO, Nev., Sept. 16.—Many queer matrimonial situations are witnessed in the passing scene of Reno's extravaganza of marriage and divorce, but two of the strangest passed in review today before judges as they prepared to grind out almost 100 divorce actions on the "washday" calendar.

One woman asked marital freedom from two husbands, one in each of the two courts, Mrs. Mary Devlin-Hazelwood sought a divorce from Edward Devlin, of Chicago, whom she married May 30, 1913. A few minutes later her annulment from Shelby Hazelwood of Los Angeles was to be heard in another courtroom.

She explained in her suits that she had separated from Edward Devlin shortly after their marriage and never had heard from him since and believed he was dead. On September 12, 1930, she married Hazelwood in San Bernardino, Calif., only to learn that her first husband was alive.

So she came to Reno to divorce the first and secure an annulment of her marriage to the second husband, intending to re-marry Hazelwood, she said.

Canada's 1932 Olympic And Field Prospects

Canadian Press Sports Writer: WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 17, 11:30 a. m.—There are four legs in all Canada capable of streaking over cindered stretches like those lightning limbs two young men from the west flashed at Amsterdam in 1928, delving detectives of the Dominion's Olympic committee will find them. They must uncover speed and more speed if Canada's sprint supremacy is to be retained at Los Angeles next summer.

It may be a simple matter to find the quartette of flying limbs—perhaps the four which Percy Williams and Jimmy Ball held sway over the world's fleetest three years ago aren't entirely leaders—but the fact is gradually asserting itself that this country hasn't a sprinter at the moment who could beat an international field or more than one quarter-miler who could carve a fraction from 49 seconds over the 447-yard route.

That is why the men who will select an Olympic team next year are looking into the hidden places, the byways and even more intently into the class-room for material. They aren't so sure Williams is going to come back or that Ball will ever return to form. They hope so—almost everything depends on these two events—but they must be dash-men of quality they can't take chances.

Should Williams become once more the peerless runner he was in 1928, the year he graduated from high school, or race as he did at the British Empire Games two years later, Canada won't have a problem at all as far as it's sprinters are concerned. The Vancouver marvel can look after the defence of his 100 and 200 meter titles without assistance if he is right. But the Williams who was beaten by ten-second sprinters last summer wasn't.

Besides a few of the old guard who ran for Canada in the last Olympiad and are still going strong, the selection committee can put its collective fingers on half a dozen youngsters who might ably fill Williams' shoes in another year. They seem to have about everything the British Columbia boy had 12 months before he became a national hero.

If anything, Jimmy Fitzpatrick, the bronzed Hamilton flyer, is faster than ever and if he were in training this season probably would trounce any sprinter in Canada, including the Olympic champion. He passed up the Dominion championships this month at Winnipeg and it was at Winnipeg that a battalion of youths praded in big company for the first time—but not the last. One of them stands out as Canada's most promising sprinter.

At 17, blonde Bert Pearson, of Hamilton Central Collegiate, is national 100-yard champion. His big win came only a week or so after he won the schoolboy championship of Ontario. In the opinion of his coach, Captain J. R. Cornelius, Bert Pearson, at 18 may have a Maple Leaf crest tacked on his breast and crack runners of the world's nations lined up beside him. If the widespread surge of schoolboy talent invades the Olympic field, Pearson will lead the way.

Already on his heels are several young fellows whose futures seem just as bright. Bill Robinson, and Eddie Dore, schoolmates and teammates of Pearson, loom as possibilities that no selection committee can ignore. George Powell, the slim speedster from Toronto, has raced his way into a front-rank berth, and Vincent Forbes, of Vancouver, showed at Winnipeg he can match strides with the fastest steppers of the eastern contingents.

Ralph Adams, who ran for Canada at Amsterdam and, with Fitzpatrick, is the best sprint relay man available, bowed to Pearson's speed in the century final at the Winnipeg championships, but Adams is not through. He defeated just as good a field as Pearson downed when he captured the 220-yard final.

The prairies seem to have only one outstanding sprinter—Buster Brown, of Edmonton. Consistently a ten-second man in the hundred, Brown slipped under the mark several times this season as he campaigned and would have been a favorite to cop one of the Dominion titles had he competed in the meet. Laurie Cohen, curly-headed little Winnipeg star plans a comeback next spring that he hopes will land him an Olympic job.

Unless Jimmy Ball, who lost an Olympic 400-metres title at Amsterdam by turning to see what was coming up behind, manages a notable recovery of form, the Dominion must look elsewhere for a quarter-mile ace. Alex Wilson, just as good at the quarter as the half, prefers the latter and probably will concentrate on the longer distance next spring.

Fred Martello, husky Trail, B. C. youth, and Maurice Hughes, of Montreal, sped into the limelight this fall by their showing at Winnipeg and either may turn out to be a successor to Ball—if the great Jimmy really is through as a top-notch. Hughes, a slim, gritty boy, beat Martello by a scant two yards in the 440-yard event.

Capt. Cornelius has hopes that the ace of his own quarter-mile corps may definitely push ahead and he particularly points to Fred Shaver, Mickey McBeth and Ed Burrows. Shaver, however, is almost certain to become an 880-yard star.

Coach of the Canadian teams in 1924 and 1928, Capt. Cornelius is optimistic regarding the new crop of sprinters, but he hopes that Percy Williams and Jimmy Ball may be back next summer to lead the anucks into Los Angeles.

Court Goes Against Dr. Phelps Judgment

(By The Canadian Press)

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Sept. 17.—Wide public interest was taken in the lawsuit against the recently elected Archbishop of the Anglican Church of the Province of South Africa, Dr. Phelps, in which the Supreme Court here gave judgment against Dr. Phelps, declaring that the Archbishop was incapable of being a trustee of one of the Anglican Churches in South Africa because he was consecrated in South Africa and not in England. The action was brought by the Church of England in South Africa, a small body of three churches which refused to recognize the right of the majority of South African Anglicans to have declared themselves to be the Church of the Province of South Africa and independent of direct control by the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Justice Watermeyer, who delivered the judgment, said that though Dr. Phelps had been properly elected Archbishop of the Province of South Africa and Bishop of Cape Town, could not be held to be the legal successor of the corporate "Lord Bishop of Cape Town," created by Royal Letters Patent in 1853. Therefore Dr. Phelps could not be the trustee of one of the churches of "Church of England in South Africa." The judgment expressly relates only to the facts disclosed in the present case, and which is in the form of an interlocutory application against Dr. Phelps.

Dr. Phelps has given notice of appeal. The two previous Archbishops of the Province of South Africa had both been consecrated Bishops in England before their election to the Archbishopric, and the question of the ownership of a good deal of church property is also indirectly involved in the case just decided by the Supreme Court. Complete recognition of the local Church of the Province of South Africa has always been accorded by the Church of England, which summons the South African Bishops to Lambeth Conferences and treats them in every way as members of its community.

The dissentient section here is strongly Evangelical and claims that the Church of the Province is so predominantly High Church that Evangelicals cannot conscientiously become members of its community.

When Hall killed the snake, it measured slightly over seven feet in length. It was the largest he ever seen in

LAUDS HUDSON BAY LINE

WINNIPEG, Sept. 16.—"The East has more faith in the West than the West itself," said J. J. Gibbons, head of the advertising agency, following his trip to Churchill and northern Manitoba with the pre-convention tour of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

He predicted the Hudson's Bay Railway would duplicate the colonizing achievement of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway.

"This line did more than its sponsors ever hoped. It opened up mining areas as good as the richest in the world. Land once sold for farming at Cochrane, Kapuskasing, Timmins and elsewhere along the line at 50 cents an acre cannot today be bought for anything under $100," he said.

NOTTINGHAM, England, Sept. 17.—All the lord mayors in the British Isles are being invited to a ball which the sheriff of Nottingham, R. E. Ashworth, is giving at the Nottingham Council House on Oct. 1, the date coinciding with the opening of the centuries old carnival, the Nottingham Goose Fair. The ball is the most ambitious social event that has been planned in Nottingham during the present century.

All the trade commissioners in the country and the mayors and mayoresses of all the towns in Nottinghamshire, will be invited, and the Duke and Duchess of Portland the Duke being Lord-Lieutenant of the county are expected to attend, as well as the High Sheriff of Notts and the chairman of the county council.

The ladies attending the ball will receive handkerchiefs of Nottingham lace, the gifts of Mrs. Ashworth, and each of them is requested to wear some article in which either ancient or modern lace is included.
