PROBE FISH EXPORTING BUSINESSES

Mass Buying Commission Hear Views of Heads of Exporting Houses.

(C.P. By Guardian's Special Wire) OTTAWA, Nov. 8.—The financial set up of Robln, Jones and Whitman, who operate an extensive fish exporting business in the Maritime Provinces, was examined by the Royal Commissioner on mass buying this afternoon. A Handfield Whitman of Halifax was the witness.

In the years from 1929 to 1933 inclusive the quantities of fish bought from the fishermen were 9,185,190 pounds in 1929; 8,331,358 pounds in 1930; 9,111,746 pounds in 1931; 7,515,088 pounds in 1932 and 8,385,344 pounds in 1933.

In each of these years depreciation reserves had been set up amounting to $102,000 in 1929 and in succeeding years $109,440; $62,669; $50,233; and $24,409.

The company made a profit of $106,325 in 1929, of $85,561 in 1930 but in the three succeeding years losses had been suffered of $44,011; $89,160, and $77,032.

From a reserve account of $250,000 a total of $170,000 had been withdrawn.

Export House

Roblns, Jones and Whitman was primarily an export house, the witness said. Under normal world conditions it was prepared to meet any competition but in recent years Brazil, a large market, was closed through financial difficulties.

Quebec, in its efforts to compel fish grading, came in contact with the British North America Act and found it could not compel it, said Mr. Whitman. "I am in favor of compulsory grading and I think Quebec should appeal to the Dominion for power to compel grading on that section of the coast where it is necessary, the Fox River district."

Grading Laws

Grading laws were not in effect in the Maritimes because of the intricacies of the industry and because there was no demand from buyers or sellers. Grading was necessary on the Gaspe coast because it was a high grade article, demanding a premium on world markets.

Mr. Whitman had no suggestion to make for the amelioration of the fishing industry. His own organization was in competition with Iceland where, he had been told, conditions were much worse than they were in Canada.

WILL IMPROVE EXAMINATION SYSTEMS

Education Association of Canada to Launch World-wide Investigation.

(C.P. By Guardian's Special Wire) TORONTO, Nov. 8.—The Education Association of Canada adjourned its biennial conference tonight after taking steps to launch a world-wide investigation of examination systems in an effort to improve the systems used in Canadian schools.

At the instance of W. P. Percival, Superintendent of Protestant education for Quebec, the Association decided to form bodies to carry out an investigation into Canadian and world-wide examination systems.

It decided also to form committees to examine the individual provincial school systems of Canada and their courses of study in the belief that interchange of information between the nine educational departments of the provinces would be valuable to the nation's education as a whole.

Demand for Reform

The association voiced a demand for reform of high school courses and university entrance requirements. The members authorized an immediate investigation of courses and standards designed to provide a course of greater flexibility which would at the same time admit graduates to universities.

Dr. Percival demanded investigation of obligatory subjects in school curricula and attention to optional subjects "which can be selected by the students and which will form sufficient equipment to justify us in granting them and in presenting their credentials to the universities that would satisfy them that the students were capable of going on to a higher education."

Dr. F. H. Sexton, Director of Technical Education for Nova Scotia, said there are two fundamental branches of human knowledge which should be compulsory in all high schools, but beyond these all other subjects should be optional.

Leading Essential

"I think everyone agrees a proper grasp of one's mother tongue is the leading essential," he said, "and I think educationists are coming to stress the social studies—history, geography, civics and economics. Everything else should be elective and the school programme should be as broad and varied as the community can afford. The small community should provide as many courses as possible and the very wealthy community as wide a choice as is available. There must be a minimum of mental effort required from each student. That he must be required to study as many subjects as will put his efforts on a par with the average of his fellows."

operated by the receiver and had been rescued from complete bankruptcy by the intervention of British banks.

N. MacLean, President of Connor Brothers, Black Harbor, N. B., was next witness. The plant which employed 600 people directly and about 100 indirectly, operated from one to five. From January to May they engaged in lumbering and box-making.

Sardines bought from the fishermen in 1929 totalled 15,370 hogsheads for $9.99 a hogshead. In 1930 the total was 9,206 at $8.19; in 1931 a total of 8,374 hogsheads was bought at $6.43. In 1932 the hogsheads numbered 5,961 at $4.31 and in 1933 a price of $4.83 was paid for 10,438 hogsheads.

The average of cases of lined sardines ranged from 26.95 to 20.57 to the hogshead. There were 23 cents worth of fish in a case which sold at $4.01 in 1929 down to $2.92 in 1933.

The principal costs were processing, tin-plate, oil, labor and boxing. This, with the cost of fish per case, increased costs to $2.06, to which fixed charges and freight had to be added.

World conditions were responsible for reduced prices to fishermen, said Mr. MacLean. His company exported about 50 percent of its pack and was forced to take in return what foreign countries could pay.

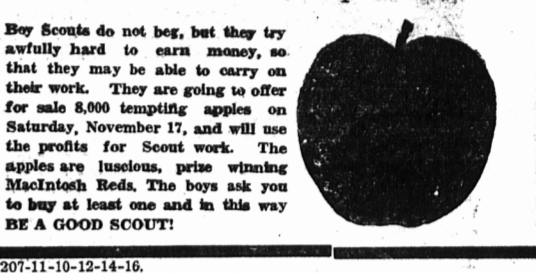

The following shows the company's net profits: 1929, $64,517; 1930, $61,876; 1931, $23,920; 1932, $74,380; 1933, $17,540. At the same time the company's reserves increased by $153,000, from $282,000 to $435,000.

A Wreath For Remembrance

Ten million men on a blood-red field, Ten million brave who would not yield, Ten million men surrendered all To the war gods fury and war gods thrall.

Wherefore the price that they have paid? To make it safe to live we said, That never again would war arise, That never again be this Hell's emprise.

We stand today with our flowers and tears, Flowers bedewed with a mother's tears; Fears that over in yonder field A shot, the spark a like might yield.

Flowers and tears for the undying dead, A pause and a silent prayer is said, What to the brave who have returned? All Honor and a Laurel wreath well earned.

Sleep on brave boys! Each did his part, With broken body but deathless heart; You formed the front, you formed the mass, You shared the slogan—"You must not pass."

Shattered and bleeding and dying there, You flung the torch for us to bear; Your last word uttered "You must not yield, Let us uphold you from Flanders' field."
