COULD NOT GET POLICEMAN.

Dear Sir.—Much indignation was felt by the citizens of Brighton last evening when on ringing up the Police Station for an officer, it was found that only one was on duty. The resident in question after waiting quite a while again rang the station to find the cause of delay and was unable to get them, the officer not arriving on the scene until the man had disappeared. This is the second time this month that police protection has been asked for in Brighton and citizens want to know where the policeman are that they cannot be had promptly when needed.

It is simply useless for correspondents to send The Guardian items of news unaccompanied by the names of the senders. In many cases neglect or forgetfulness is the reason the communications are unassigned. Nothing can be done however with these offerings except to consign them to the waste basket.
