TRIP TO BERLIN FRAUGHT WITH MUCH TROUBLE

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The delays and interference to which travelling between London and Berlin are still subject was well illustrated by the experience of an Associated Press representative who just made the trip and undertook the amusingly hazardous task of carrying an unsealed letter from Herbert C. Hoover, chairman of the Belgian Relief Commission in London, to Ambassador Gerard in Berlin.

The correspondent had made every preliminary preparation that embassies and travelling bureaus could suggest. He had lodged four photographs of himself at the American embassy. He had waited in line over an hour to have his passport visaed at the Dutch consulate in London and he arrived at the Victoria Station in London three hours before the train for Folkestone was supposed to start.

There the suspicions of various nations as to his treacherous purposes were first aroused.

"Have you any letters or photographs?" was the simple question to which his candid reply started the trouble. He answered that he had one photograph and one letter. The sleuth, who was at the moment unscrewing the top of a bottle of tooth powder, presumably to ascertain whether the contents were lyddite or some equally deadly agency, looking up keenly accepted the proffered proofs of domestic devotion (the photograph was the picture of his wife and child), and opened Mr. Hoover's letter.

"Do you realize that this letter contains the names of many British ships?" queried the vigilant defender of His Majesty's shores.

"I do," said the reporter with all the solemnity of the wedding ceremony.

"Yet you want to carry it to the enemy's country?"

"Yes!"

"Will you please talk with Inspector Seacock of Scotland Yard?"

The reporter was led into a room where suspects were searched, a solemn looking place with two compartments, one marked "men" and the other "women."

Inspector Seacock, whose name recalled the Crippen trial, gave the American a searching glance. "Do you know what all these ships are?" was his first question.

"Mr. Hoover says, if you will notice, that they are the ships which are carrying food to hungry Belgians," was the reply.

"Well, you can't take it to Germany,"

The reporter then wrote on the envelope a suggestion that Mr. Hoover send the Ambassador Gerard in the Embassy post and asked the inspector if he could get out of the line to get a messenger. There seemed to be no very definite reply, but after a few minutes delay the inspector returned and said: "On second thought, I think you can take it. It seems to be a perfectly open matter."

So the message went safely to Holland where the inspectors, flushing at and Ozendaal never hesitated in passing the formidable document. But at Benheim, on the German side of the frontier, the letter came in for expert examination on the part of the whole staff of helmeted inspectors, whose questions ranged from inquiries as to the place of birth of the reporter's parents to questions as to the business and motives of Mr. Hoover. Every passenger on the train was passed and many of them were staring in the suspect through the window before the staff finished with the reading of the letter.

"Don't you know that it is forbidden to carry such a document into Germany?" "Can you swear that the ships really are carrying food into Belgium?" If you are not personally aware of the exact facts, don't you realize that you may be committing a serious crime by endeavor to carry this letter to Berlin?"

The reporter murmured something about running the risks if it would help a hungry people. This gave him his courage and in his best German he asked what they proposed to do about it. This was an inspiration, as nobody could go on that the inspectors would consider the possibilities of harm in the letter and if it seemed wise to give it to him, it would be sent to his Berlin address.

One week later it had not been so delivered.

DAILY SELECTIONS FOR READERS OF THE GUARDIAN

Furnished by W. S. Louison

HEALING THE NATIONS

It is wonderful the power of recovery that is inherent in nature. Our wounds will heal, and our aches and pains and ailments will leave us if we give them only half a chance. Doctors and medicines never cure a little; they only give nature just a little help; she herself is the great restorer. Even outside the realm of the physical we see the same tendency to restoration. Time lays its kindly hand on our griefs and sorrows and troubles, and somehow the sharp edge of them is taken off, and we can bear them; sometimes even we can forget all about them. Let us thank God for this. It is a sign that it is God's world and that somehow kindness and sympathy and goodness are at the heart of things. Sometimes it scarcely seems so. Looking too closely at the pain and the grief and the sorrow they seem to be about all that there is. We so easily forget the great healing processes that are at work turning sickness into health and making even sorrow to become a great and abiding peace.

THE ISHMAEL OF EUROPE

LONDON, Jan. 11.—"The civil army we have to feed is greater than the British and French armies combined. Yet we can scrape through on about half the amount of food. The month of this spoke Emil Franqui, a prominent Belgian banker, who is on a brief visit to London of relief work in Belgium, in the organization of which he played a conspicuous part.

"It was not generally realized," M. Franqui said, "that there still were 7,000,000 persons in Belgium who were virtually entirely dependent for food on the American relief commission."

"In all history of the world," M. Franqui continued, "there is no precedent for a community of 7,000,000 souls being faced with starvation and denied by the belligerents of every possible means of self-preservation. We indeed are the Ishmael of Europe. You in England say you cannot trade with us because to do so would be to trade with your enemy. You say you cannot open the port of Antwerp, our door of relief, because it would be of advantage to Germany. You say you cannot even send us money because it would reach your enemy. Thus, the Germans, the French and the British have a ring of steel around our territory through which none may enter and none may depart without permission of the belligerents."

"The Germans say, 'if England likes to allow trade with Antwerp, your restrictions will revive. Thus, she does not, well, we are sorry, but we suppose you must take the consequences. See The Hague Convention.'"

"While the belligerents argued, M. Franqui added, seven million persons were confronted with actual starvation in the form of the formation of the American relief commission on the Belgian side of the line, ministering to the wants of the Belgians were overcome and shipments of food were permitted to enter Belgium by way of Rotterdam. This relief could not have been given, he said, except under the auspices of the neutral commission."

"We are proud of our driftly race," M. Franqui said in conclusion, "for we are now at the mercy of the world. If mercy is not accorded us we shall no longer exist."

SOLDIERS SEEK TO HAVE PEEP INTO FUTURE AND THEIR FATE FORECAST.

PARIS, Dec. 29, by mail to New York, Jan. 11.—Suppose you were called on to shoulder a gun and march away to war. And suppose that you thought it possible to find out whether you would come back. Would you try?

Well, many British and French soldiers believe they can find out. As a result the consultation room of Madame de Thebes, seeress extraordinary, is daily filled with both officers and men.

I called on her to-day. As I entered the door of the reception room, a French officer passed me. His face was pale, but there was a determined glint in his eye, and his mouth was hard set.

"Did you see that officer?" Madame Thebes asked when I reached her.

"I said I had, and she told me that she had been compelled to tell him that he would be seriously wounded in battle."

When I asked her if she had not been too frank, she said:

"He asked me for the truth. His hand showed that he would be seriously wounded, but would not die. So I told him."

"He then asked me whether he would be wounded soon or later, and when I told him that it would be near the end of the war he was pleased, as he said that he would be able to get in a few good licks on his own account first."

Take Bad News Stoically.

"I have lots and lots of soldiers these days who want to know what will happen, and whether they will live or die. They are cool about it."

FOR A BAD COLD

The surest way to stop a cold is to loosen the liver and cleanse the bowels and the nicest cathartic to do this is a 10-cent box of Cascarets. Take one or two Cascarets tonight and your cold may be gone by morning.

Who is Fantomas?

Yesterday morning the girl's step-mother had appeared at the West One Hundredth street police station and asked that a general alarm be sent out. She stated that Josephine had wished to leave school and go to work, but had been opposed. On New Year's day she had been entrusted with a small sum of money with which to send a telegram, and did not return.

ISLANDER'S SUDDEN DEATH

Andrew F. Mooney, a conductor attached to the Grove Hall barn of the Boston Elevated Railway Company, was overcome by gas from the gas range in his home Thursday, Jan. 7th, and died while on his way to the City Hospital. After turning on the gas to get his morning meal he fainted and when found by Motorman Frank Powell, Mr. Mooney was lying prostrate on the floor in the kitchen. His wife had been in a Boston hospital for three days, where a son was born to them on Tuesday, January 5th, which makes the circumstances still sadder. The other two children were with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rooney, of Dorchester at the time. About 10.45 in the morning motorman Powell called to Mr. Mooney's house to confer with him regarding tickets to be issued for a social affair. Getting no answer to his ring he tried the doors but found them locked. Then he went the rounds of the windows but found them also locked. He peered in through the kitchen window and was startled to see the deceased lying on the floor. Powell at once rushed to Codman Square and told his story to Patrolman Gallagher. The two returned to the house and broke in through a window. They found the kitchen filled with gas. After opening all the windows Powell called Dr. Rowland W. Brayton who worked over the unfortunate man until the arrival of the ambulance. On the way to the hospital Mr. Mooney succumbed. The deceased was 31 years of age and was a son of John Mooney of Iona. Besides his wife and three small children he leaves to mourn a sorrowing father and step-mother four brothers and four sisters. R. L. P. (Patrist please copy.)

Many Mothers are Anxious.

"Then I have a lot of mothers who want to know the fate of their sons because they have not heard from them since the war began. Only this morning said to me a mother came to me. She brought with her a photograph and his last letter written right after the war broke out. At once I saw that the boy lay dead on the battlefield. But I could not tell her that, so I said that he was a prisoner."

"I have brought a great change in the spirit of the women. Early in the war many women would tell me their husbands were brutal and hope that they were going to be widowed. Well, many of these women have since come back to me with much weeping, have appealed to me to tell them that their husbands will not be slain, and they are sincere."

"They have examined themselves and found that they too were to blame. Really, I think the war in many ways is divine; it is working wonders already with spiritual France."

Do You Want a $500 DOMINION Church Organ for $140, or a $350 Size For $95

Just think of purchasing a large, beautiful and very powerful Church Organ that sells when new at $500.00 for $140.00; or a smaller one of the same make that sells when new for $350.00 at $95.00.

If ever "sensational" could be rightly applied to price reduction it is now, and to the fullest extent of the term. If ever profits were entirely disregarded for quick sales, it is now. These two splendid Organs must be sold before stock taking and to do this we have cut the prices to the core.

Both these organs have been thoroughly overhauled and are in the finest condition each instrument is guaranteed for three years.

What better organ could be required by any church or hall than this extremely powerful Dominion Church Organ. It is a pedal style, with two manual solid walnut case, has twenty-three stops, twenty-one sets of reeds, and a low lever; if desired, it can be used without low lever and pedal base. The height of this organ is nine feet, ten inches. A beautiful imitation pipe top gives it the appearance of a much higher priced instrument. Sale price, $140.

This organ, though smaller in size, is a splendid instrument. It has a single keyboard, a pedal base, nineteen stops, fifteen sets of reeds, blow lever, a beautiful walnut case, and an imitation pipe top. The height of this organ is six feet, four inches. Sale price, $95.

Never have there been two more attractive values in guaranteed church organs offered, never has the small church had such an opportunity to purchase a large and handsome organ at so low a price.
