GAY CHAIR PADS

The wooden Windsor chair in the guest room will look much more homelike if you make a padded seat and back rest and cover it with a gaily printed chintz or cretonne. Several thicknesses of cotton batting the exact shape of the seat covered with several thicknesses of cheesecloth, quilted a bit to keep its shape, may serve as a foundation. Cover with cretonne and make tapes of the same material to tie to the chair.

CO-OPERATION

Next time you feel devoid of ideas as to meals, Housewife give each member of the family a slip of paper and ask them to make out a menu for a day or two days taking into account rationing and points. It will show them a bit of the difficulty in planning these days and help mother out at the same time.

ENJOYABLE SOCIAL EVENT. —One of the high lights of the week was a St. Patrick's Tea, at the home of Mrs. James E. Andrews, Hunter River, where the members of the W. M. S. of the United Church entertained the women of the community. Receiving with Mrs. Andrews was Mrs. Eldon Seaman, vice-president, who were kept busy during the afternoon welcoming the many callers. Miss Bessie Aitken presided over the tea cups in her most efficient manner. The following members assisted in serving the many dainty and appetizing delicacies, Mrs. Wilfred Whitlock, Mrs. Edison Newman, Mrs. Hedley Spence, Mrs. Lemuel Craswell, Mrs. Cyril Smith, Mrs. Ernest Cousins and Mrs. Chester Whitlock. Those replenishing were Mrs. W. I. Bowman and Mrs. J. S. MacLeod. Appropriate music was rendered on the piano by Mrs. Percy Boyle and Mrs. Orville Sellar. Mrs. Emmett Bernard capably took charge of the offering plate, which was most gratifying.

Personals

Sgt. Major Forest Clow, Mrs. Clow and little daughter Marlyn arrived from Halifax on Thursday to spend the week-end with Sgt. Major Clow's mother, Mrs. Samuel Clow.

Miss Joyce Jay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Jay, Morell, met with an accident while skating at Kinkora rink, causing a severe cut on her leg. She entered the hospital Monday for treatment.

Mrs. Benjamin Jenkins, who had spent the winter months here with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Weatherbee, left for her home at Murray River, P. E. I. Prior to going to her home she will visit with relatives at Summerside. — New Glasgow News.

Mrs. Henry Mill, New Wiltshire, attended the annual Anglican W.A. in Charlottetown on Thursday.

In Memoriam

MRS. FRANK CREAMER

The death took place at her home 1 Douglas Street, Charlottetown, on March 8th of Mrs. Frank Creamer at the early age of 36 years. Mrs. Creamer was formerly Minnie Lauretta Baker of Morell, daughter of Joriah Baker now residing at Point Pleasant, New Jersey, and the late Margaret Dingwell, Morgll. Deceased took sick the latter part of September and entered the P. E. I. Hospital for an operation, which did not prove successful. She remained in the hospital for a period of six months where she was tenderly nursed and cared for which proved of no avail and God called her home on the above mentioned date.

Her funeral which was largely attended was held on Sunday afternoon, March 11th, the Rev. Carlyle Webster officiating at the home and grave. The hymns sung were "The Lord Is My Shepherd" and "Rock of Ages".

The pallbearers were: Fred Worth Harry Cummings, Ernest Carr, Harry MacLeod, John Hambley and Earl Lavers.

She leaves to mourn besides a sorrowing husband, twin sons LeRoy and Garfield. Also her father and the following brothers and sisters: Roy of Teaneck, N. J.; Barbara of Point Pleasant, N.J.; Alice, Mrs. Guy Hemphill, Georgetown; Eunice, Mrs. Oscar James Midgell; Myrtle, Mrs. Thomas Guinan, Charlottetown.

Interment was in the People's Cemetery.

Looking Ahead with Hal Bohaker

Everyone knows that the difference between future security and insecurity depends not on what is earned but on what is saved.

Think what you will do when old age deprives you of the means of earning your own livelihood. Think what your family will do if by your untimely death they are left to carry on alone, without your income to feed, clothe, shelter and educate them.

Ordinarily it is difficult to save money but now, in keeping with the times, a new and easy way of saving has been arranged. Just as the Government has made it easier to pay our income tax at regular intervals from the salary cheque, so independence for old age and protection for wife and children can now be conveniently provided by small salary deductions.

What could be more sound than, with the co-operation of your employer, saving a small part of your salary to assure an income for yourself or your family when your paydays are over. The programme is permanent and uninterrupted because the deposits are automatic. The savings dollar properly becomes the first item in the budget rather than the last. The plan to which I refer, the Sun Life Salary Savings Plan, is so flexible that a programme of saving can be adapted to fit the needs of each wage-earner, single or married, man or woman, according to individual problems and ability to save. Such policies are the property of the assured and in the event of entering the service of another employer it is a simple matter to continue the savings arrangement intact.

Let me tell you more about this savings plan and show you how easily it can be adapted to meet your own requirements. Just call or write

CHAPTER 57

"I guess I won't bet with you after all. I haven't a mind to throw away money and I shouldn't be a mite surprised but what he did. If Peter wrote to him, and that seems likely too, Joe'll keep a sharp lookout for her. It's as you say, he'll know that we'll be worrying, and he's got means at his disposal of finding out things that we haven't."

"But he could telephone us or telegraph us."

"He did telegraph you, Mother."

"Yes, to say he was coming. You'd think he could put anything he needed to say into a letter without going to all that trouble. It seems like quite a trip for a busy man to take in the dead of winter, just to say a girl he hardly knows is all right. You haven't got me convinced yet, Alix. I expected to see Joe in the springtime. He planned to make us a visit then. But a long way off yet. I'll feel better when this mystery's cleared up."

Co-Operation

But Joe, when he arrived, did not try their patience. "Judith got into Washington last Wednesday," he said genially. "She stood the trip remarkably well—so well that Colonel Witherspoon who's in charge of her case decided to operate the next day. There wouldn't have been time for any of you to get there before the operation, so we decided not to tell you about it until it was over.

"She was going to come out of this accident and this operation almost as good as new. She'll have to wear her hair down on the sides of her forehead and the tops of her ears, but I should think it would be becoming to her that way. And she won't be wearing low-necked dresses for a long while, though I think they can be cut out a little in the front. I think she'll look like a million dollars myself. Especially with her African campaign ribbon on her chest."

"I'm proud as Punch that she's earned the right to wear it," said Serena, finding her voice to "But, Joe will—will she be able to do anything??"

"Oh, sure!" Joe said, still cheerfully. "I think she'll be able to hold a book and do a little knitting, after awhile. I don't suppose she'll sit up without support for a good many months, but there'll be no reason eventually why she can't be moved back and forth between a bed and a sofa, and get a change that way. And I asked my landlady if it wouldn't be all right to bring Judith out to Alexandria as soon as the little matter of Army regulations regarding discharge had been fixed up and I could pry her loose from Walter Reed.

"Mrs. Porterfield was delighted and I was moved to make a really heroic sacrifice. I told her she could have my room cleaned. I've arranged with the paper to take three days away from the office to supervise it. And it really will be a nice place for Judith."

More Cheerful

Everyone was smiling now, even Serena. Nevertheless her anxiety was somewhat assuaged, her bewilderment still persisted.

"I can see where Judith could be made real comfortable in that room of yours, if it really did get a good thorough cleaning, Joe," she said. "It is spacious and sunny, same as you say. Just the same, it seems too bad that you should be turned out of your room when you've had it so long and like it so much; there aren't many men would be so unselfish."

"You must have misunderstood me, Mrs. Farman. I'm not that good natured. I've made all the concession I'm going to, saying I'd have the room cleaned up. But I haven't the last idea of getting out of it. After all, I don't think I'd be much in Judith's way. It's a big room, and I have to leave for the office every morning around six and altogether. . . ."

Alix sat very still. Again Daniel realized that her quietude was also her force. Dexter was very quiet too, and for a moment the smile left his lips. Then he looked at Alix; she returned his glance with a smile of her own, and his smile came back. Joe got up and lumbered over to Serena, putting his arm around her and said:

"I came here on purpose to tell you that Judith and I are married, and then I left that part out somehere along the line. I married her the night she got back. The doctor said I could see her for five minutes and that was enough."

Gay Time

They decided to have supper in the summer kitchen, because Joe's visit marked a great occasion. It was time for prodigality not for prudence.

"Dexter, you like Joe Racina, don't you?" Alix asked him privately.

"I don't see how anyone could help liking him. You don't realise that he's homely as a hedge fence, as we say around here, because he's got such a way with him."

"I know just what you mean, because in a different way the same thing's true about you. I didn't notice you were lame until I'd been here for weeks and weeks. You give a general impression of such strength that its hard to realize you're handicapped in any way. And then of course you're so good-looking that nobody who can see your face thinks of glancing down at your feet."

"Didn't Jerome tell you?"

"Why no, he never mentioned it. Probably it didn't seem noticable to him either. Noteworthy rather. I don't believe he felt it was important enough for special mention.

Are you paying me all these compliments to help me save my pride?" he asked almost harshly Usually he was gentleness itself in speaking to Alix. She stopped dusting and turned to look at him.

"I wasn't paying you compliments," she said quietly. "I'm sorry if I offended. We Creoles feel honored when anyone pays us a sincere tribute. And I didn't realize your pride needed saving. You ought to know by now that love must be mutual to be triumphant. And Judith didn't love you as much as you loved her. She wanted to be a nurse more than she wanted to be your wife. But she'd rather be Joe's wife than the reincarnation of Florence Nightingale."

"You've taken all the wind out of my sails, haven't you? As completely as when you told me you were going to clear the mortgage on this place and keep Farman Hill for your son?"
