Halifax Styles Ahead of Prince

(By The Canadian Press)

HALIFAX, Dec. 17.—A "new fashion" in men's wear supposed to have been started only recently by the Prince of Wales is old stuff to Halifaxians.

Coats cut straight at the side and trousers worn shorter so they hang straight have, been in vogue here more than a year, according to tailor Francis J. Hiltz. A London dispatch of a few days ago said the Prince had set the sartorial pace for the innovation.

This attributing of new styles to the Prince or others in the public eye has been over-ballyhooed, Mr. Hiltz thinks. "No one person ever started a style," he declares. "The fact that a prominent person is hailed as the creator of a new style merely means he is interpreting the tendency of all good dressers. But because he adopts it the innovation is attributed to him."

PLEDGES WEALTH TO AID INDIANS

(Canadian Press)

WASKESIU, Sask., Dec. 17.—They call her "Pony," this slender, dark-eyed Anah-An-Bo who shares with her famous husband, Grey Owl, the task of protecting Canada's beaver. When not playing the part of housewife she turns to prospecting and plans to create a standard of Indian values that will give her people a place in the economic sun.

White Grey Owl is touring England, lecturing on Canada's wild life conservation program, his young wife is busy at her Adajwan Lake home, in Prince Albert's national park, taking care of her precious charges, "Rawhide," and "Jelly-roll," far-famed beaver.

Mrs. Rose Grey Owl confesses to three life objectives—the welfare of her four-year-old daughter, Dawn; the writing of a specialized play on prospecting and the rehabilitation of her own people north of '54.

She is an intrepid prospector. A picturesque figure in a canoe that takes her on lone trips to far-off fields along the fringe of the north country, she hopes some day to strike it rich and provide her people with civilization's best offerings.

Nature will comprise the background and medium for her proposed play. The plot has a striking resemblance to her own and her husband's life story. When completed, she hopes to direct it herself to assure accurate presentation of educational features.

It was Anah-An-Bo who transformed Grey Owl from a hunter of the beaver, the natural prey of his trapping forebears, to their greatest champion. Descendant of full-blooded Indians, he was adopted by Ojibways of northern Ontario, in 1908. Among them he met the Indian maiden whose influence gave to Canada her first "keeper of the beaver."

Few men know the beaver as well as Mrs. Grey Owl. With her husband she spent many years roaming the forests of Ontario and Quebec. Together they made a study of the animal adopted as Canada's national emblem and now threatened with extinction. Wherever they found them needing help they turned doctor and nurse.

Their little brown furry friends have been known to swim to the canoe half a mile from shore and to come at a call from long distances. The beaver had not been as painstaking as usual, however, in the construction of their winter quarters at Adajwan Lake. Mrs. Grey Owl predicts a long winter, a reassuring fact to her as she will spend the next three months in comparative seclusion.

Crested Seed Needs Careful Cleaning

Crested wheat grass seed requires cleaning before it is marketed, because, as it is received from the threshing machine, it generally contains from 25 to 45 per cent, or more by weight of light seed, chaff and short pieces of straw, as well as the seeds of any weeds which may have been prevalent in the standing crop.

It is not possible to remove all of certain weed seeds, such as stinkweed, small seeds of wild mustard, and blue burr, from crested wheat grass seeds with the ordinary fanning mill. The indent disc type of machine will remove material which is considerably shorter than the grass seed and it will also remove material such as bits of straw which are considerably longer than the seed. A combination of the fanning mill and the indent type of machine makes very satisfactory arrangement for cleaning crested wheat grass seed. In setting up the indent disc, the common wheat and CALGARY, Dec. 17.—Jean de Vaudeuil, 68 year old Belgian adventurer, left his native land in 1920 to "see the world," and now is completing the final stages of the long hike. When he passed through Calgary he said it would take him four years to finish his tour of Canada and the United States.

Claiming to have tramped through every country in the world except Mexico, he stated he would visit that country next. After he has seen Mexico, he will write a book, a detailed account of his travels. Although handicapped by the loss of his left arm and leg in a mine explosion in 1916, he claimed he had covered 35,711 miles on foot since he started travelling from 15 to 30 miles each day on his artificial leg. Vaudeuil said he fought in a revolt in Palestine in 1905, was with the British forces in South Africa in 1900 and, in 1914, joined the allied forces in the world war.

During his travels, Vaudeuil has filed 64 note books. He has the autograph of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Premier King and Premier Hepburn of Ontario.

How to Deal With Parasites in Horses

It is as necessary as it ever was for the young farmer to learn all he can about the care of horses. Parasites of horses and the diseases caused by them are always of considerable importance. Young animals particularly are more susceptible and less resistant to the ravages of these pests and may be permanently affected, if nothing is done for them, before they reach the age of usefulness. Dr. A. E. Cameron, chief veterinary inspector of the Health of Animals Branch Dominion Department of Agriculture, states in the bulletin on "Parasites of Horses," issued by the Department, that a large variety of parasites of horses, both external and internal, exist in Canada or may be introduced into the Dominion, and consequently it behooves the horseman to be constantly on the watch to prevent the serious damage which follows heavy infection by these pests.

Contaminated water or food is a great cause of disease, and stables should be kept as clear of manure as possible. Practically all organs and tissues of the horse may be invaded by mature parasites or their larvae, and the methods of combating the ravages of the pests are fully dealt with in the bulletin.

Wire screens are not recommended for use in cleaning crested wheat grass seed, but are listed in the booklet on "Growing Crested Wheat Grass for Seed Production" by T. M. Stevenson and W. J. White, of the Dominion Forage Crops Laboratory, at Saskatoon, issued by the Publicity and Extension Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. The reason for naming wire screens is in case the proper sizes in zinc sieves are not available to the farmer. The wire-sieve blocks up readily with refuse and seed and requires a great deal of time and labour to keep it clean. A range in sizes of sieves and screens is also listed. This is necessary because the seed varies in size from season to season, and it is also necessary to use different sieves for removing different materials. All the latest information on the seeding, acre and cultivation of the crop, harvesting, curing, threshing and cleaning of the seed is contained in the booklet.

SUDDENLY... NO SALARY!

Imagine Your Household With—Suddenly—No Income, no Salary! What Would Happen in Case of Your Death?

That dreadful year after the death of the bread-winner is one of the most difficult a family ever has to face. The customary pay checks are stopped—the future is uncertain—the family is face to face with the necessity of making an immediate readjustment in all living expenses.

The Imperial Salary Continuance Policy makes this unnecessary. Wouldn't you be glad to know that if anything happened to you, your salary would go on just the same as ever for a full year — so that your dependents could adjust themselves gradually to another scale of living? A year in which to "turn around" to decide what to do. What a boon that would be to the family!

The Imperial Life Salary Continuance Policy, providing for the payment to your family of $100 a month for 12 months after your death calls for a saving on your part of only about 10c a day. It is an admirable supplement to any other insurance you may carry.
