—FAILED TO LOCATE WRECK—The D. G. S. Brant, Capt. Kelly, which has been endeavoring to locate the wreck of the coal barge, which was lost recently off Sea Cow Head with six hundred tons of C. N. R. coal, to buoy the place and have the wreck blown up later, has so far failed in her mission. The Brant left for Charlottetown on Saturday afternoon to ship supplies for the light-houses in the vicinity of the Magdalen Islands. She will return later for another attempt to find the Alfred F. Williams. S.

—FOUR-P OUNDER LANDED FROM THE DUNK—Considerable excitement and envy has been caused amongst the local anglers by the taking on a fly on the upper reaches of the Dunk early on Friday morning of the largest trout taken out of that once celebrated trout stream for some considerable time. It was a perfect specimen, measuring twenty three inches in length, twelve inches in circumference and weighed a shade over four pounds. The lucky fisherman to obtain this prize was Mr. Frank Gallant, who lives on the sport and has very few equals in the piscatorial art. S.

—INJURED IN CAR ACCIDENT—On Friday afternoon a rather serious accident occurred by Bishop's Foundry, Summerside, when a car ran into the rear of Mr. Adolph Arsenault's sloop when he was hauling flour. Mr. Arsenault was thrown from his seat and received severe cuts about the head, which necessitated his removal to the Prince County Hospital, where it was found necessary to put in several stitches to close the wounds. The horse was badly cut and bruised and the harness and sloop damaged considerably. Mr. Arsenault is a very popular truckman having been in the business for a number of years. He is now at his home and resting comfortably, and his many friends hope to see him at his business again in the near future. S.

—DISTINGUISHED VISITOR TO SUMMERSIDE—Ex-Governor Bartlett of Portsmouth, N. H., is here making a tour of the Province of Prince Edward Island. While in Summerside he called on his friend, Professor Rockford, who is an old acquaintance of the Governor. Mr. Rockford introduced Governor Bartlett to a number of the Summerside business men and also some of the Real Estate Brokers here. Ex-Governor Bartlett is now a member of the International Water Ways Commission. Mr. Bartlett's object in visiting Summerside was to locate Mrs. Dr. A. D. Sharp of Bedouque, formerly Miss MacQuarrie, daughter of the late Judge MacQuarrie, who nursed Mr. Bartlett twenty years ago in Charlottetown during a serious illness while on a previous visit to the Island. Mrs. Sharp is away at present but Mr. Bartlett hopes to be able to see her before he returns to the States. Professor Rockford entertained Mr. Bartlett to lunch at Eddie's Tea Rooms. S.

LAST TRIBUTE PAID MEMORY OF WM. F. FRENCH

(Haverhill Gazette) HAVERHILL, August 4. — William Fred French, who died last Monday in the Soldiers home at Hampton, Va., March 21, 1873, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Matthew French, themselves life long residents of Haverhill and descendants of many of the old time families of the city. He was educated in the grammar school of this city and at Williams college, early in life showing an aptitude for literature which made his success in newspaper work, which he chose as a profession, rapid and brilliant.

Mr. French began his newspaper career in Haverhill on the Haverhill Gazette, later going to Boston, where he held positions on the old Boston Journal, the Post Globe and Traveler, during which period he became known as one of the most brilliant writers of his day, covering many important assignments, including the historic trip of the Ancient & Honorable Artillery Company to England. He also was Washington correspondent for the Boston Journal, and at various times held positions on Washington and New York papers.

For several years he was city editor of the Sunday Record. His death takes the last of those men who have edited this newspaper up to the time of the present incumbent, Ray L. Horsch.

"Billy" French was in truth "a born newspaper man." His keen news sense and his exceptional ability as a news and editorial writer were recognized by the country's most notable editors. He was a most lovable character, and he made friends wherever he went. His energy and his ability to do well whatever he set his hand to was manifested in other fields than the newspaper, and particularly in politics. He was twice elected to the Mass. House of Representatives, in 1915 and 1916, being nominated and elected the second year without opposition. During his terms in the House he was the author of or helped to draft many bills affecting the welfare of the soldiers and sailors of the country's wars. He was later appointed deputy commissioner in the department which handles the veterans' compensation of the state, but was compelled finally to give up his position because of failing health. When his strength permitted he later contributed special articles for The Record.

At the time of the Spanish-American war he was appointed paymaster in the U. S. Navy by President McKinley, and served until peace was declared between the two countries.

Mr. French was the principal organizer and for several years was secretary of Haverhill Lodge of Moose. He later served as district organizer for the order in New England and instituted many new lodges.

In 1910, Mr. French married Miss Majilda M., youngest daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Thomas Howatt, of Prince Edward Island. Her death on Jan. 17, 1920, was a severe blow to him, from which he never fully recovered.

Mrs. Walter Sicles of New York, an only sister, and Mrs. Elizabeth Burton, of this city, a sister-in-law, are the nearest surviving relatives. Mrs. Sicles and her little daughter Martha came to Haverhill for the funeral yesterday. The Veterans Bureau was represented by Col. Gilson, who succeeded Mr. French as Deputy.

Funeral services yesterday afternoon were held in the Church of St. John on Main street, Rev. John H. Yates, rector of the church, and Rev. Charles L. Slight of South Groveland, officiating.

The body, with the casket draped in an American flag, was escorted from the undertaking parlors of Dole & Childs on Main street to the church by a detail from South Street

Scotland Yard

(The Gazette, Montreal)

This year Scotland Yard attains its centenary as a criminal investigation institution and as headquarters of the Metropolitan police force. In this capacity its fame has become world wide. Its traditions like those of Newgate have produced an immense quantity of literature, both spurious and real. Of the genuine records attaching to this institute, it might be said "truth is stranger than fiction." Not that Scotland Yard was always associated with the detective activities that keep in check the denizens of the underworld. It may be news to some that Scotland Yard derives its name from being once the site of a magnificent palace wherein Scottish chieftain and kings were from time to time entertained, and to which lodgement they came in order to do things either as hosts of Cumberland and Westmoreland or as barons of the realm. Here also at intervals were the ambassadors of Scottish kings lodged and entertained. These visits, were of course, amenities of courtesy. Old English writers

Thomas Camp, Spanish War Veterans. The bearers were Messrs. Doherty, Markman, Surrette and Lynch of that organization. During the service Mrs. Eva Brooks Flynn sang two of the favorite hymns of the deceased.

Burial was in the French family lot in Linwood cemetery, where Rev. Mr. Slight read the committal service, followed by the service of the S. W. V. read by Captain Herbert W. Minot, the salute by a firing squad and the blowing of taps by Bugler William Wedge.

The funeral arrangements were in describe Scotland Yard as lying a little to the south of Charing Cross, on the eastern side of the highway leading thence into Whitehall. According to Stowe, "Great buildings have been for the reception of the kings of Scotland and other estates of that country." And Mr. Newton in his "London of the Olden Time" says this property was given by the Saxon king Edgar to Kenneth the Third, King of Scotland for his residence upon his annual visit to London. Brayley in a note of his "Londonians" states that "the Scottish kings appear to have been anciently regarded as members of the English parliament" and among the Tower records are writs to summon their attendance at Westminster. The last of the Scottish royal family who resided in this palace, we are told, was Margaret, Queen of Scots, sister of Henry VIII and wife of James IV, who fell at the Battle of Flodden Field.

The ancient palace has long ago vanished. In the time of Queen Elizabeth it had become a ruin. The union of Scotland and England led to its being dismantled, and the locality was afterwards occupied by governmental offices suitable by their proximity to Whitehall. Here lived John Milton when acting as Latin Secretary to Oliver Cromwell. Here died, in the early part of the eighteenth century, Beau Fielding, whose erratic career is sketched by Sir Robert Steele in the pages of the Tatler. Here also lived Sir John Denham the poet, and Inigo Jones, the famous architect. It also became by turn the home of Sir Christopher Wren and of Sir John Vanbrugh, architect, comic poet and man of letters, who died in 1726. Forty years later, at the corner of Scotland Yard, Josiah Wedgwood, the eminent pottery savant, was in treaty for a large house he intended to make a showroom for his precious wares, but the scheme dropped through for some reason or other. Scotland Yard served for a brief term as the Marshalsea Court early in the nineteenth century, and in 1829 Sir Robert Peel planned a new police force to supersede the "Charlies." Scotland Yard from that time onwards became the principal station of these limbs of the law. More commodious premises were erected on the Victoria embankment, close to Westminster Bridge. The upkeep of Scotland Yard for offices, staff and activities, costs in the neighbourhood of £2000,000 per year. No organization of its kind stands in higher repute. The argus-eyed guardians of law or order are worthy successors of the aristocratic personages who once on a day found bed and board within these prehistoric precincts.
