Much Depressed in Spirits

On Account of the Exhausted Condition of the Nerves—Though Several Doctors Were Consulted Results Were Disappointing

Albert, N. B., June 7—All energy and ambition seem to disappear when the nerves become exhausted. Hope and confidence fall and you feel blue and get to looking on the dark side of things.

Such was the experience of Mrs. Tingley, but she soon got to seeing things differently when Dr. Chase's Nerve Food was used to form new rich blood and build up the exhausted nerves.

Mrs. Geo. T. Tingley, Albert, N. B., writes: "Will you please allow me the privilege of giving my experiences with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was for a long time in a very nervous, run-down condition, and much depressed in spirits. I suffered a great deal at times, and it was four or five years ago before I fully discovered what the real trouble was. The least noise would irritate me, and at times I felt as though I certainly would go crazy. I took various medicines recommended to me, and consulted different doctors but to no effect. A friend advised me to begin the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food at once. I complied with the request by procuring the medicine at the earliest convenience, and can truly testify to-day to the great benefits I received therefrom. I was able to see a marked change in my condition before I had finished the use of two boxes. I kept up the treatment, however, until I had taken about a dozen boxes, and now feel safe in saying that I am cured of nervousness. I am entirely relieved of those terrible feelings I used to have, and cannot too highly speak of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which has done so much for me. I shall ever be ready to testify to the merits of this wonderful remedy, and gladly recommend it to all who suffer as I did, feeling sure it will give them quick and permanent relief."

This letter was endorsed by George C. Anderson, J. P. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanon, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

ARMIES TO BE FITTED AGAIN FOR INDUSTRY

LONDON, June 4.—The British government is now at work considering how the great task of demobilizing the army and the resettlement of the soldiers into civil occupations at the conclusion of the war is to be accomplished. The plan drawn up by the minister of labor is receiving careful attention, and it is understood considerable progress has been made.

Germany also is giving this subject her attention and the series of articles by Herr Utsch in the Deutsche Land-wirtschaftliche Presse considers the proposed settlement on the land of soldiers returning from the war.

Herr Utsch begins by pointing out that it is a national duty to provide the disabled or injured soldier not only with an adequate pension but with suitable employment. Which will enable him to support himself and his family in sufficient comfort. In providing such employment, he says, due regard must be paid to the wishes and the capacity of the individual, and no better means for effecting this can be found than home colonization, for in no other domain are the possibilities so great since vast tracts of waste land still exist in Germany waiting to be opened up and the returning soldier cherishes no dearer wish than to have a home of his own.

At the same time, says Herr Utsch, the interests of the country will be served, since every fresh small colony increases the national wealth, and makes it more independent of foreign countries in the production of food. He sees a further advantage in attracting labor to rural districts.

The writer divides the nature of the employment of the settlers as follows: Settlement for men employed in industries or factories.

Holdings for agricultural laborers. Holdings for independent artisans. Small holdings with land attached up to sixty acres or more.

Considering the first class named they necessarily will be only possible in the vicinity of towns, or large industrial concerns. He considers it advisable for large manufacturers or factory owners to act in conjunction with the district administrative authorities as founders of settlements and to build new factories in the country near railway or navigable waterways.

The question of the settlement of those coming under Class 2 will be vital for agriculture after the war. These holdings, he says, should be large enough to enable the settlers to grow sufficient cereals and potatoes for himself and family and to keep one or two cows. They might be as large as eight acres in extent.

As for the independent artisans in class three, it would be for the interests of every community to do its utmost to attract labor to the land in its immediate vicinity.

Farms Provided

Under class four, which would be providing of peasant holdings, the district authorities and the provincial settlement companies would have it to deal with. These settlers would be those who could command sufficient capital and possessed adequate agricultural knowledge, those who before the war were tenant farmers, farm agents, or belonged to the more efficient class of farm laborers.

With the artisans of Class 3 they would contribute to the solution of the agricultural labor problem for their children could obtain situations as servants with the large land owners in the neighborhood.

Herr Utsch believes that during the first period after the war it will be necessary to proceed mainly with the establishment of individual settlements near existing villages, for the settlers will find it easier to make a living and with the assistance of the communes, buildings will be cheaper. It will not be necessary to undertake road making and drainage operations on a large scale. This character of settlement, he believes, would induce soldiers to settle near their old homes where, as they are known assistance will be more readily given to them.

Funds From War Profits

As to the capital that will be necessary to establish such communal settlements, the writer suggests that about 10 per cent of all war profits which after the payment of taxes exceed 20,000 marks ought to be lent on mortgages on the settlements at the rate of 3 to 3 1/2 per cent.

Herr Utsch admits the war profiteers would strenuously resist this proposal, but insists that the soldiers who have helped to make the profits should get first consideration. Another article dealing with conditions in Germany after the war, but on entirely different lines, from the pen of C. D. Stelling considers the extent in which revolutionary ideas permeate the German army and what may be the outcome. After quoting from Heinrich Heine who observed with fine scorn in 1848, "No revolution will take place in Germany because revolutions are verboten," the writer says: "The fuel of revolt is being heaped up to await the torch that will set it aflame. Competent observers foretell that revolution will inevitably follow the conclusions of the war. The drugged and brutalized proletariat is waking from its trance. With organization and leadership the torpid German people will at last turn against the false gods it has been worshipping and dash them to the ground."

NAT HIS TURN The Scottish character is a compound of vices and virtues in which "thrawnness" (Anglice "obstinacy") and modesty are strongly represented. The other day an officer was bidding good-bye to one of his men who had been awarded the D.C.M., and who had, in consequence, been granted ten days' leave. "Well, corporal," said the officer, "it's a proud mother that'll be waiting to greet you when you get home this time." "What'll she be proud for?" queried the corporal with a puzzled expression. "Of your medal, of course," was the answer. "But I don't think she knows I've got it, sir," said the corporal. "What! Haven't you told her?" "Well, no, sir. You see it was my turn to write."
