Captain John N. MacDonald, of Kilmuir, suffered a heavy loss early Sunday morning, when four of his barns were totally destroyed by fire with most of their contents. The fire was first discovered by Mr. MacDonald, who happened to wake about two o'clock in the morning, when he saw one of the smaller buildings in flames.

The neighbours were aroused by telephone, and by strenuous efforts they succeeded in saving the dwelling on various grounds. On the roof, er and wet blankets on the roof. The wind was from the west, otherwise, that building might also have gone. The largest barns, which was 60 x 30, with a grain house attached, contained eleven head of cattle, thirteen pigs, 6000 stocks of grain, and a quantity of hay, all of which became prey to the flames. In the other buildings were farm implements, etc., all of which were destroyed. It was a pitiful sight yesterday morning to see the carcasses of the cattle, eleven of them in a row. The loss is estimated to be between five and six thousand dollars and it is understood that it is only partly covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is at present a mystery. The barns were well equipped and contained an electric plant.
