'No Appetite

Nervous exhaustion leads to distaste for food. The nerves of the stomach are weak, digestion fails and you become generally upset and out of sorts.

The secret of complete restoration is in getting the nervous system fully built up.

Mrs. R. Cheney, 208 Richmond St., Chatham, Ont., writes:

"I was troubled with indigestion, which caused me many sleepless nights. I would be in terrible distress at times, and would get no relief for two or three hours. For sixteen months I ate nothing but Shredded Wheat biscuits, as I dare not eat anything else. I did not know what to do, as I had tried so many different remedies, as well as doctors' medicines, without gaining permanent relief. Finally I got some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and while on the second box noticed that I was improving. I continued the treatment until I am now fully restored, and have returned to my regular diet. My husband has also taken Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with splendid results, so we are glad to recommend it to others."

ARE YOU SURE YOUR CHILDREN'S EYES ARE RIGHT?—A responsibility rests upon every parent to give his child every possible advantage in life; to give the child the best of weapons with which to meet the struggles of the years ahead. Surely good eyesight is "the priceless gift" that your child should have. Remember that poor eyesight means poor concentration and will retard the youngster's progress. Many a child considered dull or lazy in school or music studies has simply been suffering from defective vision. And often correct glasses have changed entirely the record of performance. Perhaps your youngster's report-card is reflecting the presence of eye-strain. Perhaps you are not doing your own child full justice. Have an examination made-and know. Consult Dr. E. C. Harris for prompt and efficient service, Royal Bank Building. Hours daily from 9.30 to 12.30, 2 to 5.

MacEWEN-MacLEOD—The Presbyterian church Stanley Bridge was beautifully decorated on the evening of the 9th inst, when Mr. Herbert Stewart MacEwen and Miss Matilda Maud McLeod of Stanley Bridge were united in the bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a large congregation, by the Rev. J. M. McLeod, uncle of the bride, assisted by Rev. Geo. Miller, New London and Rev. John Sterling, Bradalbane. After the ceremony a reception was given at the home of the bride, by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. McLeod, and the evening was pleasantly spent. The bride was becomingly attired in white silk, etc., and carried a handsome bouquet of roses, and was attended by Miss Irene Murray. The groom was supported by his brother-in-law Mr. D. J. McLeod. The bride was the recipient of many valuable and useful gifts, which testified to her popularity. The groom is a splendid type of young man, and has a good military record, having readily responded to the call of King and Country. Their fine new residence will be occupied immediately and their many friends wish the newly-wedded couple many years of happiness and prosperity.

ance of trade against us, was beneficial to the country or not.

As examples of the benefits derived from moderate protection, Mr. McIsaac cited the fact that 600 branch American factories have been established in Canada, giving employment to 90,000 Canadian artisans and bringing into the country wealth to the value of $400,000,000. He concluded amid applause with an illusion to the extension of the franchise to women and an appeal for support as a candidate of the party standing firmly for the protective policy which has been the guarantee of Canada's stability.

Mr. D. J. Mullin

Mr. D. J. Mullin, National Progressive candidate, referred briefly to the history of his party in Canada and to his own recent nomination. He admitted that possibly the interests of the Canadian industries are not altogether embraced by the platform of his party but maintained that as time goes on this will be rectified. In his opinion there was no reason why every Canadian industry could not be eventually linked up and embraced within the Progressive policy. He was disgusted with the old political parties, his conversion dating back two or three months, before which time he was a supporter of one of the old parties. Anybody reading The Guardian newspaper, he said, would think that the Western United Farmers wore horns. He didn't know whether The Patriot took this stand or not because he didn't often read the Patriot. (Laughter) Either party press, he argued, was swayed by money interests. Mr. McIsaac had said that McKenzie King was no good. This may be so, said Mr. Mullin. He was of something of the same opinion himself—(laughter)—but at the same time he did not believe Canada needed Premier Meighen so much as the party papers said they did. He could not say whether Premier Meighen would be returned or not but he felt quite sure Mr. King was going to be snowed under in his constituency. (Laughter) He referred to the uncertain policy of the Liberal party which he said was but an imitation of the Farmers' policy, framed by politicians to catch the farmers votes. If the Liberals want reciprocity as much as they make out, the speaker argued, why did they not secure it during the fifteen years they were in power? If the doors of reciprocal trade have been left open during the past ten years it must be credited to the Conservative government and not to the Liberal party. Mr. Mullin complained that while Mr. Hughes devoted much of his time to criticising him, Mr. McIsaac was passing him over altogether as if he wasn't worth any attention at all. (Laughter) Mr. Hughes had even alluded to him as being "simple" and had hinted that he should go to kindergarten (Laughter). Mr. Mullin maintained that the lowering of the tariff would mean increased trade and therefore increased revenue. He did not think Canada's tariff bars would ever be completely taken down unless United States did the same and this was not likely. He did not believe Mr. Hughes' contention that reciprocity could be secured with America at any time. This was just a pre-election flourish on the part of Mr. Hughes. The agricultural people in United States are not friendly to Canada and the hope of the Progressive party lies with the consumers of that country who may eventually persuade the farmers there to take down the tariff.

The Press

Mr. J. J. Hughes, speaking briefly at the conclusion of the meeting, replied to Mr. Mullin's denunciation of the campaign literature carried by party newspapers by pointing out that the Farmers' Guide, the official organ of the eastern United Farmers, is not above accepting full page adds from an opposing party. If Mr. Mullin really wants a good laugh at newspapers let him turn up a recent issue of the Guide and see in full page letters "MEIGHEN WILL LEAD US THROUGH" (Loud laughter). He referred jestingly to Mr. Mullin's "conversion" to Progressive party principles which took place, on his own confession two or three months ago—just before the equinoctial gale. (Laughter).

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mayor Acorn for his impartial conduct in the chair and the meeting closed in excellent order with the singing of the National Anthem.

An Open Letter to The Voter of Prince County

ALBERTON, Nov. 8th, 1921

My Dear Fellow Voters:

Some of you who read this letter of mine, will say to yourselves as you study it, that it is merely another of these effusions from some poor crank, who likes to see his name in print once in a while; others, more skeptical, will venture the opinion that its author has a political axe to grind, and is taking the advantage of having the grindstone handy; a few—a very few—will read it with appreciation because of the knowledge which is theirs concerning the author, and the circumstances which have made the writing of such a letter, a matter of necessity.

For weeks now, I have waited, fellow-voters, with the hope that I might see an enunciation and an exposition of the main ideas which this letter contains. It seems strange to me, therefore, that as such writings have appeared in the columns of our Island papers, when I know by personal contact with the people, that there are many whose ideas concerning the great issues of the day, are, for all practical purposes, identical with my own.

And so, after much thought, I have cast all reluctance, all timidity, and all other restraining influences to the four winds, and have crossed the Rubicon.

I bring to the writing of this article, no gifted mind, no wonderful nor supernatural ability. My ideas are but ordinary ideas; my conclusions not those of a sophistical nature, but conclusions formed by the same common-sense system of logic which tells you, that, when equals are added to equals, the wholes must necessarily be equal.

You, fellow-voter, like myself, have choice of three candidates; like myself, you have but one vote. You can vote as you think you should vote; you can vote as someone else thinks you should vote; or, on your last day of grace, you can make a complete somersault, and, as a result of deeper and more unbiased thinking, vote diametrically opposite to the way you had intended.

It may be you have thought the matter over as carefully and as thoroughly as your intellectual powers have enabled you to do. No man can do more than that. As a result of such thinking, it may be you have decided to support Mr. MacKenzie King, or, perhaps, Mr. Crerar. While I would hate to think that you would do either the one or the other, at the same time I maintain that you have not only the privilege, but the inallenable right, to vote for what you consider is the best interests of the country. It is your prerogative, as it is mine, to vote for the party, which, to our mind, will best serve the interest of this whole Dominion. There is not, and cannot be any co-ercion.

Some people exhibit a decided reluctance to inform the public just where they stand; others, apparently, find the question too great for them and prefer to run with the hare and hunt with the hounds. And, of course, our privilege to vote a secret vote is an inviolate privilege.

As for me, I have no scruples concerning the matter. I am going to vote; I am going to tell you how I am going to vote,—and why.

In the first place I am going to cast my ballot for Meighen. If he got no other vote throughout the Dominion he will at least know that there is one man who believes in his policy of a moderate protection for every Province from sea to sea.

Now, I am not going back into past history. Such a task might prove interesting and instructive, as well, but the present concerns are more vitally. I have not the slightest doubt, were we to glance at the political history of the past ten years, that we should find many things not at all to our liking. But what I want to emphasize, fellow-voters, above every thing else is: that all the merits or demerits of the last ten years, pale into insignificance beside the importance of the great national question before the Canadian people today. What is this great national question? Stripped of all its gaudy and flimsy material—material thrown around it by those whose interests it is to conceal its nudity from the world—the question stands: Shall Canada become a vassal state to our neighbor to the South, or shall she go proudly on, hewing out her own destiny, with eye undimmed, unafraid?

Now, what is the policy of the opposing parties? First, what is King's policy? Well, I heard him in Alberton some time ago. I think, that when a man speaks in English on a political subject, I have sufficient education to follow him, providing he does not rush me along too quickly. Mr. King is a very able speaker, a man who possesses a nice discrimination in the selection of a synonynum to convey to his audience the exact meaning which he wishes to convey. But, on the other hand, I have never heard a man who can go so near to saying a thing, as Mr. King can, without actually saying it. After his speech was over, and the audience was filing out of the arena, spell-bound from the closing words of his eloquent peroration. I knew that, while he might play on their emotions, he had not half convinced their minds. A dealer in generalities is Mr. King, a gifted and a gentlemanly speaker, but, in spite of it all, I could not help thinking of a bee flitting from flower to flower. He had no national policy.

The Liberal party, my fellow-voter, was, at one time, as you know, a great party, and never greater than in its closing years, when the light of its life was Wilfrid Laurier. You will notice I have not said, "Sir Wilfrid." To me, the prefixing of a man-made title to that illustrious name seems desecration. For the name of Laurier will be remembered when the knowledge that he was a Knight, will have sunk into oblivion.

As I said before, the Liberal party was, at one time, a great party, but when Laurier died, the keystone of the structure fell, and, broken and dismembered, the remnants—flotsam and jetsam—parted from their moorings and drifted out to sea. Since that every storm has only served to scatter the dismembered pieces further and further apart.

Driven to the direst extremities for want of a real leader, they, like sycophants, at their convention adopted practically every plank of the platform of their new and formidable rival—the Agrarian party. They hoped, that by doing so, they might placate their dangerous rival, and thus oust the present Government from power. Can you imagine Laurier so humiliating himself and his followers? He went down to an overwhelming defeat in 1911, but he went down true to the principles in which he believed, and with his flag nailed to the mast. All honor to him for it.

As for King's policy, there is not much to say. Beyond the statements that we should have a reduction in the cost of living, and that our national debt was now $2,300,000,000, he dealt mostly in generalities, which always allow a great deal of scope to an orator's imagination, and give his audience a pleasant evening. As far as the tariff was concerned, Mr. King's handling of it reminded me of a clever boxer I once saw who was matched against a much heavier opponent. The clever man did nothing but feint, circle and sidestep, but never once did he stand still and "swap punches." Like Mr. King, he preferred not to come to close quarters. And the Liberal leader absolutely forgot to tell us what would happen to Eastern Canada if the sluice-gates were

BEAUTY SECRETS REVEALED
ANNA Q. NILSSON THE POPULAR ACTRESS TELLS HOW

To Instantly Have a Beautiful Rosy-White Skin and Complexion.

New York—"The secret of beauty is the proper care of the skin," says Miss Nilsson, the popular Metro star. "It only requires a few moments time and anyone is more than paid for the little effort it takes. In the first place the skin should be kept scrupulously clean. Use a good cleansing cream (Liska cold cream I have found to be the best), follow this by bathing the face with warm water then rinse with cold water and dry thoroughly with a coarse towel. After this process select a beautifier which in addition to being a beautifier has a healing effect on the skin. The very best I have found for this purpose is derwillo, as it instantly beautifies the complexion and its continued use makes the results permanent." Derwillo takes the place of face powder, as it stays on better and is wonderful for a shiny nose, oily, dark, sallow skin, freckles, tan, wrinkles and other facial blemishes. Just make this test: Put derwillo on one side of your face, then look in your mirror and compare it with the other side—you will need no further argument to convince you that nothing beautifies like derwillo. It imparts a youthful appearance and if you would keep your complexion at its best all the time make derwillo a part of your toilet as you now do face powder—and note the favorable comments of your friends. Short sleeves are now in vogue, use derwillo to beautify your hands and arms and protect them from roughness and ruddiness which always follows exposure to sun, dust and wind. It is guaranteed absolutely harmless on the most delicate skin and will positively not stimulate or produce a growth of hair. Give it a thorough trial and you will never be without it. Accept no substitutes as there is nothing "better," "just as good" or "just like it."

NOTE—Ask your druggist about derwillo and he will tell you that he has never sold any toilet article which has become so popular in so short a time. This is due to the satisfaction it gives. It is guaranteed by every druggist or department store to give complete satisfaction or they will refund your money. If you don't like it take it back. Could anything be fairer? It city, including J. G. Jamieson, Geo. is sold at all toilet counters in this E. Hughes.
