County Club

By Holloway Horn

"The Chief doesn't tell all that he knows, and some of the junior members of the Force might follow his example with advantage. Here's Flash Cardew's photo, anyway—side face and full."

"Nasty-looking specimen!" Dollimore said. "But I thought they didn't let these out of the files?"

"They don't—that's a copy made for us from the American police records."

"THERE'S A LOVELY GIRL"

Dollimore looked long and carefully at the photographs: "I'd know him," he said.

"You might," the older man replied. "But I don't suppose he's wandering about like that. He was an actor at one time and probably suspects that we have these pictures of him."

"I don't think he's here now," Dollimore said a few minutes later after he had glanced casually round the room.

"He isn't. I've looked already," agreed Ducros.

"By jove! There's a lovely girl over there at the opposite corner. See her? Talking to that old lady and the young man."

Ducros contemplated his junior colleague grimly: "If you've finished your tea," he said, "we might as well have a stroll through the grounds and get the lie of the land."

"You're the boss," said Dollimore. "But she is a peach I wonder who the chap with them is? His back is turned to us, unfortunately."

"Not Flash Carew and he's the man we're interested in," Ducros pointed out.

From the top of the hill in the park, the two men contemplated the house.

"It's a big place," said Ducros.

Dollimore saw his meaning: "Easy place to hide a fellow in?" he suggested.

Ducros nodded. "He's here somewhere I believe, Dolly," he said quietly.

"What—now?"

"Yes. We know he was on the Europa. Probably landed at Cherbourg and slipped in through Dover. He was seen in London two days ago. The New York police said that he would probably make for Monty Fernandez. So much the Chief did say and—between ourselves—I fancy the Chief has some pretty definite information."

"Murder, isn't it?" the younger man asked casually.

"Among other trifles."

"Anyway, I hope I manage to get a round of golf to-morrow. Is it indiscreet to ask what you mean to do if he is here?"

"Phone the Yard and get enough men here to prevent any funny business But we haven't seen him yet. And I don't suppose he'll be much in evidence. It's a case of snooping about and keeping our eyes open. He may be anything—if he's got the wind up. A gardener, for example, or a waiter."

The young man, known as Dolly, nodded: "That means I shan't get a round in, I gather But we don't want to make this Fernandez person suspicious as to who we are. I really think we should have at least one round—and it looks a very fine course."

The Superintendent smiled: "Okay."

At dinner, that evening, Dollimore found the steadying effect of his companion a little tedious: "I'm going to dance," he announced. "Excepting for that old lady and girl over there we're the only people here who are doing nothing. We don't want to be conspicuous. Indeed, we simply mustn't be conspicuous."

"Those two fellows at that table in the corner aren't doing anything," Ducros pointed out "Fernandez seems very thick with them."

SHREWD PLAY

The slam in today's deal was made by a shrewd and farsighted line of play.

North dealer
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ K J ♥ 9 3 ♦ K J 6 ♣ A K 10 7 4 3
♠ 10 5 ♥ Q J 10 7 2 ♦ 9 7 4 3 ♣ J 6	N W E S	♠ 9 8 4 2 ♥ 5 4 ♦ Q 10 5 ♣ Q 9 8 2
	♠ A Q 7 6 3 ♥ A K 8 6 ♦ A 8 2 ♣ 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♥	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

North probably should have bid three notrump instead of three spades, but the final contract was surely the right spot for the North-South cards.

West toyed with the idea of opening a low trump, but finally selected the queen of hearts. Declarer won with the king and thought long and seriously about his chances for the slam.

Then he led a low club from his hand and finessed dummy's ten-spot! East won with the queen of clubs and naturally assumed that South held the only missing card in the suit (the jack.) Hence East led back a club, and South ruffed with a low spade. (This made things easier for South, but actually no lead by East could have defeated the contract once South had made his remarkable first-round finesse in clubs.)

South then cashed dummy's two trumps and returned to his hand with the ace of diamonds to draw the rest of the trumps. The king of diamonds eventually furnished the entry to the established club suit.

South's unusual first-round duck in clubs was planned to take care of a 4-2 break in both clubs and spades He was thus in position to ruff the second round of clubs without being over-ruffed. Those two rounds, together with dummy's top clubs, would clear the suit setting up a much-needed long club.

Even as Ducros spoke the two men stood up and crossed to Fernandez' office although the manager of the club was still in the hall.

"Very thick," Ducros added.

"Now that they've gone we certainly shall be conspicuous if I don't dance."
