

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN PICTURES FOR GUARDIAN READERS

GERMAN STAR SUED FOR $500,000 BY MRS STERNBERG
Mrs. Rita Royce Von Sternberg (LEFT), divorced wife of Josef Von Sternberg, Hollywood film director, has named Marlene Dietrich (RIGHT), popular German screen star, defendant in a $500,000 suit alleging that the latter had supplanted her in the affections of her husband. Von Sternberg has been directing the American film career of Miss Dietrich.

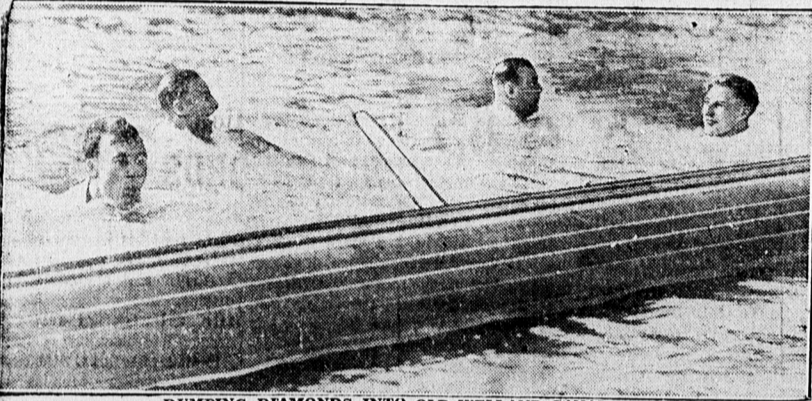

BISHOP OF LONDON'S HOST DIES TRAGICALLY

Tragic are the circumstances surrounding this photo of Dr. Leonard M. Murray (LEFT) and Rt. Rev. A. F. Winnington-Ingram, Bishop of London. It was taken last Saturday afternoon at Lambton Golf club, Toronto, with Dr. Murray, eminent Canadian physician and heart specialist, had taken his famous guest for a golf game. After the match, they repaired to Dr. Murray's home, and rested, prior to a dinner engagement. The bishop awakened and found Dr. Murray dead from a heart attack. Dr. Murray, aged 50, was a native of Truro, N. S., and it was while overseas with the Canadian army medical corps that a strong friendship developed between the bishop and himself. His wife, who is now in England, was formerly Miss Ella W. Seton of Halifax, and is well known in golf circles, holding the presidency of the Canadian Ladies Golf Union for a number of years.

INSPECTS HUGE CANADIAN LOCOMOTIVE

On a New World tour which gives them a glimpse of Canada and the United States, during their holiday days, a party of forty English people are paying a visit to Canada, travelling under the auspices of the Manchester Dispatch. The party are shown at Bonaventure station, Montreal, after inspecting the monster locomotive which hauled their train.—Canadian National Railways photograph.

DUMPING DIAMONDS INTO OLD WELAND CANAL

One of the extra features of the Canadian Henley regatta, at Fort Dalhousie, Ont., was an exhibition quarter-mile "dash" by the greatest collection of amateur oarsmen ever seated together in one shell—Lou F. Scholes of Toronto, Canada's first winner of the famous diamond sculls (1904); "Young Joe" Wright of the Toronto Argonauts, winner of 1928; Jack Guest of same club, winner in 1930, and Bobby Pearce of Hamilton the Aussie-Canuck superman of the sculls, winner in 1931. There wasn't any difficulty in getting Guest, Wright and Pearce into the boat, but they had to ease Lou Scholes into his seat with a shoe horn. The four rowed the quarter at a steady clip and got a great hand. After the dash was over the four "diamonds" had taken their showers of applause, posed for the movies and stilled, and generally absorbed the limelight so properly theirs for their deeds of brawn and skill the four rowed over to the point of disembarkation. There the problem was how to get Scholes out of the boat without the use of a saw or a derrick. Some quick thinker on the float solved the problem pronto, by seizing the two oars on one side and heaving the boat upside down. Gravity and flotation did the rest, scooped his seat with a noise like a cow patting her foot out of the mud and bounced to the top of the water like a porpoise doing a front somersault. The photo show from LEFT to RIGHT Joe Wright—just getting rid of a quart or so of the canal's water; Pearce giving Scholes the Australian banzai; Scholes trying to figure out whether to swim for the dock or the boat, and Guest enjoying himself. Guest's air of amused nonchalance—there's a dare—shatters the rumor which spread after the upset to the effect that he cannot swim and had to be rescued by an oarsman who was supposed to have dived down and brought him up. Guest swam around for ten minutes after the upset. He wanted to make sure that he was all wet. It took a whole Argo eight, cox and all, to get Scholes out without sending for a set of ice tongs.

Siam's Rulers Visit Canada

The beautiful Wat Po temple, at Bangkok, capital of Siam, gives a splendid example of the country's architecture. Inset: Their Majesties King Prajadhipok and Queen Rambai Barni, landing from the Canadian Government steamer "Lady Grey", at Montreal, where they were accorded an enthusiastic welcome.

Canada's most illustrious guests for the present week are undoubtedly Their Majesties the King and Queen of Siam, who with a party of relatives, officials and servants from their own land, are at present making their way across this country and missing few if any of the sights that should be seen by the intelligent tourist in our midst.

His Majesty King Prajadhipok, pronounced Pra-cha-ti-pok, with the accent on the second syllable, is the descendant of Buddha, and holder of half a dozen stirring Oriental titles, and furthermore, the unquestioned master of the destinies of ten million people. Naturally, then, one looks toward seeing him with keen interest, and all unprepared for the shock when a well-groomed gentleman steps from his train and with smiling courtesy and in English speech quite undistinguishable from that spoken by cultured Canadians greets those who await him. Later we understand it. An Oxford education and a term or two at a French military school as well as visits of study to the United States and other occidental countries have had their effect upon a naturally active mind of an outstandingly intelligent nature.

Siam is fortunate in her King. Under his enlightened guidance she is moving slowly out of Oriental medievalism into such modernism as is good for the country's welfare and happiness, not by revolution or the sudden casting away of long-tried things that have proved their use, but by the gradual assimilation of the things that are found good among the modern.

This ruler of men takes his kingship seriously. You see it in his every move, in his grave, thoughtful air, and in the serious respectful manner in which the members of his suite approach him. More than all it is seen in what he has done for Siam. Of his Queen, Rambai Barni, columns might be written. Her charm of manner and captivating smile have captured all who have met her ever since she first set foot on Canadian soil at Quebec. As modern as her husband, and speaking as excellent English, as indeed do all sixteen members of her suite, Her Majesty seems to enjoy every moment of her stay in Canada.

It is astonishing how interested the party are in Canadian history, and historic scenes. When at Quebec the battlefields of the Plains of Abraham were gone over most carefully, and every interesting relic in and about the city was duly visited. The party occupied a complete upper floor in the tower of the Chateau Frontenac from where they had a view of the whole theatre of the struggle that ended in the fall of the French regime. His Majesty did not come to Canada as a stranger.

He was here six years ago on his way to Europe and he already knew something of our history. In that fact lies the explanation of the exceedingly interesting statement he issued to the people of Canada upon his arrival at Quebec. It was as follows: "In landing upon this continent in British Columbia last April I expressed the hope that I might have an opportunity of seeing more of this great and growing member of the British Commonwealth of Nations. That hope is about to be realized. We shall remain for a time here in 'Old Canada' where the sturdy characteristics of French and British forbears have blended in a culture as admirable as it is unique. After meeting officials of the Government, and visiting the Capital of the Dominion, we shall travel west through Canada, remaining for a time in the Canadian Rockies before embarking at Vancouver. I look forward to the opportunity of seeing at closer range the people and the institutions of this nation whose vigor and progressiveness are so happily apparent."

SURPRISES VETERANS OF THE PROFESSION

Roberta Byron, 14, thrills the London, England, Magicians' Club with her tricks of magic. Her Chinese parasol, shown here, was produced out of thin air to the amazement of the spectators.

EARL AND COUNTESS TO OBSERVE GOLDEN WEDDING

At Glamis Castle, immortalized by Shakespeare, Earl and Countess of Stratmore, parents of the Duchess of York, are observing the 50th anniversary of the wedding day this week. Both the Duke and the Duchess of York will be present at the celebration.

SEMI-SPORTS ENSEMBLE

This tweed semi-sports ensemble in red and white, featuring the deep yoke of white and red wool net and worn with a jaunty Eugenie turban or red felt, has been one of the popular fashions for fall wear.

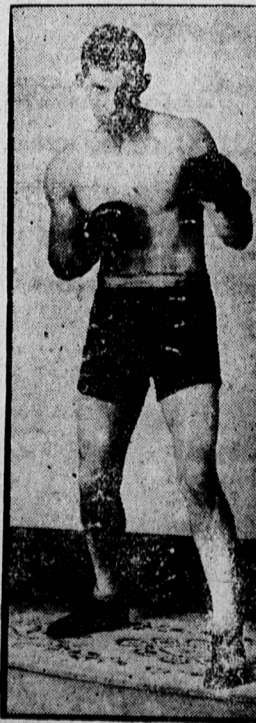

FACES DEPORTATION
Janipa Smolinsky, Polish film actress and former premier dancer in the Folies Bergere, Paris, who faces possible deportation proceedings in Los Angeles, if deported, she plans to marry a Los Angeles merchant and return the wife of an American citizen.

JACK MCKENNA

Jack McKenna here this week.

BILLY HOLM

Shifty Middleweight who meets Jack McKenna here this week.

CITY FUND SCANDAL

Mayor T. S. Walmley of New Orleans, recently returned from tour of France with American mayors, who faces indictments in connection with alleged violations of law governing investment of city funds.

Members of the Banff Light Opera Company camped outside an Indian lodge to rehearse in a prompt song fest. The company is presenting light operas at this western Canada mountain retreat during the summer months.