MAGAZINE PROVIDES WEDDING HEADGEAR

TORONTO, Dec. 12 - (CP) - When girls in Helsinki marry they depend on their favorite magazine to provide part of the wedding costume - it's all in the "special services" offered by Kotiliesi, a Finnish women's periodical.

"Finnish girls choose much more elaborate costumes for their weddings than Canadian and American girls," said Miss Aili Wierhelmo of Helsinki in an interview.

"They go in for intricate headgear, and one of our services is to lend a crown of silver and gilt to our readers for their weddings."

Kotiliesi, of which Miss Wierhelmo has been managing editor for the last 25 years, isn't concerned so much with fashions as it is with the more serious interests of the housewife. It carries fewer fiction stories than American magazines, possibly because an acute shortage of paper forced the magazine down to two-thirds its pre-war size.

A parade of the 96th Light A.A. Battery, Montague troop, headed a meeting in the Army Hall, Tuesday, December 9th. Officers present included Major Douglas MacGowan, Captain Hewson Kydd, Q.M. Leslie Stewart, S-Sergeant McGrath. The meeting was highlighted by a speech delivered by Staff-Sergeant MacGrath on officer insignia recognition. The members were treated to an excellent film depicting interesting features. The troop sponsored a dance Thursday night in the Army Hall, which was largely attended by the people of the community.

On December 8th, 1947, at 4 p.m. a very pretty wedding was solemnized at 188 Dorchester St., Charlottetown, when Rev. F. W. Goodwill, Presbyterian Church Minister, united in marriage Catherine Florence MacLean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Haywood MacLean, Montague, and Douglas Alexander Darrach, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Darrach, New Argyle. The bride was lovely in a floor-length gown of white silk tulle, and carried a bouquet of red roses. She was attended by her sister Laura, who wore a floor-length gown of blue satin and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations. The best man was Mr. Hector Darrach, brother of the groom. Following the ceremony the bridal party motored to Montague where a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where more than seventy guests were present. The happy young couple will reside in New Argyle. - Lau.

Mr. Ed. Byrne was in the city last week on business.

Mrs. Gerald Barry was in the City on Saturday on business.

The very serious illness of Mrs. Vincent McGrath, who is a patient in the Charlottetown Hospital for some time is much regretted.

Mr. James F. MacDonald was in the city last week for medical advice. He is suffering a hurt back, received some time ago.

Friends of Mr. Laurance Gauthier will learn with regret that his condition in the Hospital at Charlottetown has become more serious.

Mr. B. McAdam son of Mr. and Mrs. S. McAdam, is a patient in the Charlottetown Hospital at present suffering an injury to his back. - B.

Mrs. Justin McCarthy, R. N., Morell, is at present doing private nursing at the Charlottetown Hospital. She was Marie Murphy, before her marriage, and a graduate from the City Hospital some years ago.

Miss Margaret Findley had another bedroom built onto her house, here this fall making her nice little home more comfortable for visitors. Miss Findley resides in Arlington, Mass. in the winter months.

Gone but not forgotten is our old friend and life of every party Mr. Anrus Lapierre, who was married a few weeks ago to a pretty young lady from the Magdalen Islands. He has gone there to reside with his bride where he is also employed.

The smelt fishing the last stand and hope for fishermen who had a very poor season at the other fish seems to be a complete failure so far. Those who use trap and bag nets are getting ready to use them as soon as the ice is strong enough.

Willing neighbours and friends have come to the aid of Mr. James F. MacDonald with donations of money and material for the fund that is being raised to replace at least part of the loss he suffered two weeks ago when fire destroyed his out buildings and house.

The work that was going on here with the brush has ended for the season. Next spring a large amount of work will be done on the old McVicar when machines will begin the battle of opening the road, forgotten by the Government for years.

Work on the new Morell Rink is going along very well and it is expected that ice will soon be made. It is to be an open air style for this season and with more funds raised during next summer the building will be closed in and made into an up-to-date rink just what is needed in this vicinity.

Fifty years have also passed since two young men left Bristol for Boston to reside. They were Mr. Plus Duffy and Mr. Fred O'Brien. They both joined the Boston Elevated Railway and now Mr. Duffy, the older of the two, is retired while his friend, Mr. O'Brien, is slated to retire this winter. The two visited here in the season just past.

Another good fellow who has made a success in Boston, and is always pleased to have some one from Bristol call and spend a half day or night is Mr. James Drake. His old home is at St. Peter's Harbor. Today he operates two large burros and two restaurants and the business he does is immense. He resides in Somerville, Mass., and large electric signs read Drake's Restaurant and Bar.

Mrs. John Lapierre has returned home from a visit of several weeks in the Magdalen Islands, her old home port, before her marriage away back on October twenty fifth, 1897, just fifty years ago. She says the old home looks pretty much the same as when she was a young bride and the people are very happy there. They dance and are merry in winter time and forget about troubles and worry.

The Government dredge that was operating at Red Head for some time and later at Nutrag Harbor has been towed into 'New' River for the winter. A.C.N.E. bridge crew from Charlottetown were called out to open the bridges on the main railway line to let the dredge up stream. During the coming months the ship will receive a general overhaul and be ready for duty in the spring.

Duke Of Windsor Autobiographical Sketch Is Continued

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 - (CP) - "The Duke of Windsor, describing his life as Prince of Wales in an autobiographical article, says that Oxford University during his student days there 'failed to break down the resistance to learning that was the legacy of my unbookish ancestors.' 'It is a little discouraging to realize how little I learned there,' he writes in the second of a series on his youth published in Life magazine. 'But the fault does not lie with Oxford.' 'It would be wrong to give Oxford credit for teaching me how to drink' but 'all the same, it certainly furnished me with opportunities for tentatively testing the art on myself, as well as for observing the dubious progress and occasional disasters of others.' The Duke describes 'parties climaxed by bonfires' and 'furniture tossed out of the rooms of undergraduates who had incurred their classmates' displeasure' and birthday celebrations accompanied by 'the ceremonial smashing of glasses against the fireplace, and eventually, the carrying out of those who could no longer walk by those who thought they could.' However, 'it is characteristic of collegiate memories that the hell-raising side, in moments of reminiscence, momentarily overshadows the daily plodding drudgery, which I always associated with study. 'Oxford is a serious place and the truth is that my Oxford days, by and large, were sober, tranquil and studious.' 'The Duke draws on his diary notes to describe fully ceremonial occasions in which he participated, including the funeral services for his grandfather, King Edward VIII, the coronations of his mother and father, King George V and Queen Mary, and his own investiture as Prince of Wales. For the investiture, he rebelled at wearing a 'smaltle and surcoat of purple velvet edged with ermine and white satin breeches,' which he describes as a 'fantastic costume' and 'preposterous rig.' 'But in the end my mother, as always, smoothed things over. 'You mustn't take a mere ceremony so seriously,' she said. 'Your friends will understand that as a prince you are obliged to do certain things that may seem a little silly. It will only be for this once.'

THE MAN WHO FEEDS MARACLE FEEDS has the BIGGER PROFIT SHILL

Women Barred From Juries In Most Provinces

(By The Canadian Press) To the courts, ladies! For although, in principle, you long ago won the franchise, most Canadian Provinces today give you the legal brush-off when it comes to serving on juries. The reasons? Well, provincial judicial figures and attorneys-general spokesmen said they were: 1, time-worn customs; 2, jury laws call for a panel of "reasonable males"; 3, there is a "housing shortage" in courtrooms which bars women jurors. Here's the 'no serve or not to serve' picture across the country: A British Columbia authority says women may sit on all juries - except a coroner's. Although only a few have served in recent years, Alberta allows housewives on civil juries - but not in capital cases where jurors are locked up pending verdicts. In Regina, Attorney-General J. W. Cormier promises the ladies a break: "I'm going to recommend jury duty for women on a voluntary basis at the next session of the Saskatchewan Legislature." Manitoba Attorney-General DeLoach officials refused to comment - except admitting women are barred from all jury services. And Quebec judicial figures say they never recalled any agitation for such rights. However, the Provincial Jury Act requires that all jurors be males. A Saint John, N.B., law authority says he has never heard of women jurors being considered and that the "males only" sign is enforced by statute. Frankly puzzled, seems to be the state of Nova Scotia's Attorney-General's office. Women have never before served and it's not clear sure if they really are barred - but the Adjudicator Act specifies: "Jury shall consist of 12 reasonable men." Women of Prince Edward Island may not know it, but that Province's act merely says "persons" and does not specify males only. And a Charlottetown Supreme Court Judge says he can't see any reason why women can't serve - but none has yet.

WANT TIBER GOLD FOR CIVIC DEBT

ROME, Dec. 14 - (CP) - An age-old story of a fabulous treasure of gold and jewels buried in the mud at the bottom of the Tiber has been put forward by Rome newspapers as a solution to the municipal deficit.

A dredging machine working along the left bank of the river in 1889 struck a heavy object firmly planted in the river bottom. Engineers reported they were unable to raise the object but claimed traces of gold were found in the teeth of the dredge which made the contact.

They believed the "discovery" proved an ancient legend that one of the emperors had hidden his treasure there. Plans of where the object was struck were given city officials but no further action was taken.

It has now been proposed a second attempt should be made to unearth the treasure.

Christmas Tree Prices Higher, Survey Shows

(By The Canadian Press) This year the Christmas tree will cost more than in the past, but those in the business predict that prices will fall after Dec. 18 and shoppers who wait until after that date will be able to get bargains.

Canada's big Christmas tree industry - in past years it has run to about $4,000,000 a season - shows no sign of falling off this year, a Canadian Press survey reveals today.

Trees are plentiful in all Provinces but British Columbia where there are expected to be fewer on the domestic market than in past years. However, the Province will ship an estimated 2,000,000, valued at $400,000 to the United States against last year's 1,500,000 which brought in $300,000.

In the Maritimes, where Christmas tree sporting is big business, more than 3,000,000 are being shipped south of the border to brighten American festivities. This figure includes more than 2,000,000 from Nova Scotia which exports a bumper year, 1,000,000 from New Brunswick and a few carloads from Prince Edward Island which usually finds a market for its trees at home.

Nova Scotia's revenue last year from 2,000,000 exported trees was about $500,000 and this year prices are about the same while those in New Brunswick are "up a few cents." Balsam, fir and spruce are the most popular trees cut in the area with a wholesale price of 15 to 25 cents for trees which will retail in the United States for $2 to $3.

On the domestic market average trees of from four to six feet for home use cost from 50 cents to $3.

Larger trees for Sunday schools, hotels, stores, apartment house lobbies and outdoor recreation run from $5 to $10.

Tree cutters earn from $5 to $12 a day in the Maritimes in the two-week cutting season, average $10 a day in Quebec and Ontario, but make only $5 to $8 a day in the Western Provinces.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Dec. 15 - (Reuters) - Amid an uproar, the Newfoundland national convention tonight closed its sessions until Jan. 5 after three times lacking a quorum to continue debate on a possible union with Canada.

Broadcasting officials cut the meeting off the air as 16 members left the hall and refused to return for 35 minutes.

Joseph Smallwood, reading the report of the seven-man delegation to Canada of which he was secretary, answered criticisms from the floor and asserted a complete turned, only to be interrupted by departure of others.

After further chaotic outbursts Smallwood moved the House adjourn for the Christmas period.
