LONG MOTOR RACE DRAWS 500 CARS

(Canadian Press) CANBERRA, Australia, Nov. 26—Preparations were under way today for Australia's greatest motor race over a course 8500 miles long. The event, in which between 500 and 750 cars are expected to take part, will be run early in 1938. It is being planned in connection with the commonwealth's sesqui-centenary celebrations. Longest race of its kind ever attempted, it will carry prize money of at least $40,000. The course winds through and around the wild lands of Australia. Experts estimate 225,000 gallons of gasoline will be consumed during the contest.

TIMELY NOTES ON TOPICS CONNECTED WITH Silver Fox Farming

held on Monday the 14th of December, starting at nine o'clock and will probably finish on Wednesday when the auctioneer will transfer his attention to the offering of Lampson, Huth & Company. It is expected that there will be a few thousand Canadian silver fox skins on these sales, but the great bulk will be made up of Norwegian skins which mature a full month earlier. The first silver fox sale of the New Year will be on the 6th of January, then again on the 8th of March.

The first live fox show ever held in New Brunswick opened last Tuesday morning at Moncton with 127 entries—41 entered in the registered classes and 86 in the unregistered classes. Fred Burke of Charlottetown officiated very capably as judge. F. H. Copp, Port Egin, had 14 entries, Dr. and Mrs. Teakles, Sussex, 15, R. A. Snowball and William Kerr, 12 in the registered classes. Mr. Copp won 8 firsts in the 15 sections, Dr. Teakles 3 firsts, William Kerr and Mrs. Teakles 2 firsts each.

Championships were won by William Kerr for male pup and adult female. The adult male championship was won by Mrs. A. B. Teakles, and female pup championship by the entry of F. H. Copp. M. P. P. Interest in the show was exceptionally keen and hundreds of persons interested in fox breeding visited it, the attendance being greatly beyond the expectations of the Executive.

I understand that Raoul Raymond, Southport, proprietor of the largest silver fox ranch on Prince Edward Island, with a population of over 4,000 at the present time, has added a line of fine dark Quebec mink to his fur farming activities. We trust Mr. Raymond will be successful in his new venture, for which he deserves every praise. Mink farming has been sadly neglected here, but probably Mr. Raymond's example will be the beacon that will light us on our way to further developing this profitable branch of fur farming.

The seventh annual convention of the Milligan & Morrison Silver Fox Breeders Association was held at St. Louis, Mo., on October 15th. Addresses were given by leading authorities on problems connected with silver fox farming. Dr. M. R. Howard, Denver, was elected president. Ole Nelson, Log Cabin, Secretary Treasurer. Secretary Nelson reported that the membership in the organization had been increased from 93 to 102 and that they own 4,157 breeding pairs of silver foxes and that the average increase during the year was 3.56.

There has been very little pelting done so far, which is as it should be, because pelts are not prime. Those that I have seen taken off are a bit flat and would require at least two weeks or more to develop a proper amount of underfur to support the guard fur.

London, England, fur world was thrown into a bit of a flurry by an ad which appeared in one of the leading papers recently announcing the arrival of $500,000 worth of Russian furs brought into England by a mysterious and romantic figure in the fur world. The ad stated that the furs were offered for sale at 50 per cent off normal prices, "normal prices being defined as based on neither boom nor slump values but on the true economic cost of obtaining, producing and retailing furs."

Last week was National Fur Week in Chicago and one large retail store offered "Persian lamb the magnificent" coats in several different styles, including swaggar, tunic and princess styles. Moving pictures of National Fur Week showing the outstanding furs were taken and are now being shown in theatres. They should have quite an effect in popularizing all varieties of furs.

Reports are to the effect that the sea otter has made a comeback and an excellent movie picture has been made on this subject. Many herds of sea otters were photoed in the bays and inlets along the Aleutian Islands where they have been strongly protected for years when it was found they were in great danger of extinction, and the present big production is the result of those years of protection.

Approximately 12,600 silver fox were offered for sale in New York commencing last Monday, 7,100 by Lampson, Fraser & Huth, Inc., 3,000 of these are from the American National Fox and Fur Breeders Association. The New York Auction Company had about 5,500 skins, a fresh collection, 4,000 being from the fur farms of Herbert A. Nieman & Company, Wisconsin. Last evening I called up Peter G.

Clark, Summerside, Manager of the P. E. I. Fur Pool, to find out if he had received any wires from New York relative to these auctions. Mr. Clark gave the following information.

"With regard to Lampson, Fraser & Huth's sale, fresh silvers proved best demand at the sale conducted Monday, but as only a part of the sale was of this type the general effect was that of inactivity. Old merchandise was well protected by the shippers, while in the fresh goods the fine, full silvers were said to have reached full last December prices with the cheaper types ten per cent below. The opening pages of the New York Auction Company's catalogue skins proved an active demand with every lot of the first five pages sold up to press time today. The merchandise offered so far is a bright, full silver variety and prices were regarded from the sales room as exceptionally strong. They were estimated to be anywhere from full December (1935) to a little stronger with the merchandise not quite so equal in quality. While comparisons with the local market are difficult because of the difference in the type of skins offered, a rough estimate was that they were ten per cent higher, the top price so far being $230."

Congratulations to the Judge who officiated at recent fox shows and whose impartial decisions have been favorably commented on on all sides. These gentlemen are: Maritime Winter Fair, Amherst—Don Stewart, Summerside, Alberton Fox Show—Clifford B. Rogers, Summerside, Provincial Fox Show, Charlottetown—George A. Callbeck, Summerside, New Brunswick Fox Show, Moncton—Fred Burke, Charlottetown, Borden Fox Show—Clifford B. Rogers, Summerside, Brenton Clark, assistant.

Mr. Callbeck's assessment was the toughest of the lot, of course, there being upwards of 500 foxes which occupied four days judging. His work called for high commendation from His Honor Lieutenant Governor George D. BeBlais at the closing day of the exhibition.

AUSTRALIA GAINS IN WOOL EXPORTS

CANBERRA, Australia, Nov. 26—Australia's wool crop for 1936—377,521 tons valued at $198,400,000—was sold principally in England, but the commonwealth retained 12 per cent for home manufacture according to figures released here. Statistics show that Australia now makes more than 21,000,000 yards of cloth each year, besides flannels, blankets, rugs and knitted goods. Despite the fact more than one-third of nation lies in the tropics, wool consumption has been shown at 13 pounds per capita.

Exports of primary products from Victoria state returned almost $28,000,000 more than they did in the previous fiscal year. Of this increase, wool accounted for $18,000,000.

BOOKS, ART, MUSIC (By F. R. H.)

was used nearly as a means of reproducing the artist's designs. As is clearly exemplified in this exhibition the colour print is now a direct medium of expression.

The colouring of these prints is in itself a revelation when it is realized that for each shade and colour a separate block must be cut and made to dovetail exactly with the others. And the originality and variety of the prints—such humor in some, such power of design in others, and such beauty!

This month, November 18th to be exact, marks the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Sir William Gilbert, famous librettist in the operatic team of Gilbert and Sullivan.

The Gilbert centenary was celebrated by fans and collectors who value any item relating to Gilbert and Sullivan or to productions of their works. Programmes, Autographs, photographs, musical scores and librettos, costumes and stage properties are among mementos preserved. One American enthusiast has a collection of programmes which goes back to the first authorized Gilbert and Sullivan production in America—the performance of "H. M. S. Pinafore" by the D'Oilly Carte Company in New York on December 1st 1873 with Gilbert as stage director and Sullivan conducting the orchestra.

On this same tour and by the same company "Pinafore" was performed in Halifax at that time the station of the North American fleet which now has its headquarters at Bermuda. After hearing "Pinafore" the Resident Admiral invited several members of the company to visit the flagship and other warships then in the harbour, and in honour of "Buttercup" he had the entire fleet manned.

With the celebration of the centenary the old question has of course arisen as to whether Gilbert's works or Sullivan's music keep the operetta alive. The New York Times Magazine (Nov. 15th) is a very interesting sketch of Gilbert's life and career, answers the question in the following manner:

"The period was prolific of light opera and we can compare Gilbert and Sullivan with other productions that in their day enjoyed a similar success; for example those of Auker, Von Suppe, Johann Strauss and the later Victor Herbert."

How are most of such operettas remembered to-day? Not as a whole but by favourite selections. All of us have listened to Paganini's "Home Sweet Home". How many people know that it is a song taken from a forgotten opera called "Cleri, the Maid of Milan"? So with Gay's "Songs of Araby". It is a selection from "Lalla Rookh".

Sullivan's own "serious" opera, "The Golden Legend", founded on Longfellow, has shared the usual fate. Despite its merits, it is seldom performed. Not so Gilbert and Sullivan, and it was Gilbert who made the difference. It was Gilbert who saved Sullivan's lost chords.

That may be very true, but why get worked up over it when the fact remains that Gilbert and Sullivan, are an altogether admirable and inimitable combination and it was that combination that brought each his greatest fame.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION

At the close of a special meeting held in Glasgow Road school house Sunday evening November 14th, Misses Ruth Roberts and Norma Ford, came to the front and read the following address and presented Mr. Cruwys with a well filled purse to which he made a suitable reply.

The address which speaks for itself is as follows:—Dear Mr. Cruwys:—For the past few years we as pupils of your Sunday School, have profited by your teaching, and within that period you have greatly endeared yourself to us all, by your amiable character, your earnest devotion to duty, and the hearty interest you have manifested in our welfare as a people, you also have truly exemplified the standards of Christian citizenship, and we sincerely hope that your splendid example may have born fruit, by teaching all of us how fine a trait it is to stand always, for what is just and right.
