IMPORTED FOXES

During the past few weeks a large number of foxes have been brought to this province from outside sources, chiefly from Western Canada. Some of these animals may be worth the price set upon them; undoubtedly all are not, and many of them are worth very much less. Persons buying these foxes or investing in companies whose ranches are stocked with them, are running the risk of some day finding not foxes but "white elephants" on their hands.

Black foxes, the offspring of red or cross foxes, are liable to present their owners with litters of red or patch foxes as it is well known that foxes like other animals revert to type. If the type has not persisted through at least five generations there is no certainty as to what the progeny is going to be.

The day is not far off when pelt value alone will be the standard of value. Investors should take every precaution, therefore, to assure themselves that the stock they are investing in is reasonably sure to be of the pelt quality that the market demands. Silver foxes caught in the wilds may or may not be descended from silver foxes; they may or may not be of a quality that will bring profitable prices in the fur market. Investors in these are therefore taking risks which ordinary prudence would condemn in any business transaction.

Foreign capital, which is now anxiously seeking investment in the fur business, is demanding an assurance of pelt value and properly authenticated pedigree before investing. Such an assurance is out of the question in the case of foxes taken from the wilds and the importation of these animals is seriously interfering with such investment. Where foreign foxes are imported they should be sold as such, and every investor who consults his own interest will demand to know incontrovertibly the pedigree of the animals he invests in. Many inquiries are being made at present concerning the pedigree of foxes in different ranches. It is to be regretted that in many cases the information is not available and that in these cases the owners stand to lose business and the whole fox industry is retarded. Repeated warnings have been issued in this connection by the Fox Breeders Association, which was organized to safeguard the whole industry. Many have profited by the warning many others are doubtless profiting by dealing in foxes of whose pedigree the less is known the greater the profit will be. The permanency of the fox business depends upon the honesty and integrity of those engaged in it. There should be nothing to conceal and investors are very properly suspicious where the history of the animals is in doubt.

CHILDREN'S DISEASES

There are several physical diseases to which childhood is peculiarly susceptible, such as whooping-cough, measles and the like. There are also mental diseases to which some adult children are susceptible. Mental or physical, in child or adult, these diseases are wearisome alike to the victim and to the victim's neighbor.

Although liable to become epidemic, except among the naturally immune, these diseases are not necessarily fatal, except, possibly, when complications set in. Among the young the complications take the form of other well defined diseases; among adults the complications are external and take the form of exasperation on the part of one or more of the annoyed neighbors, in which event death or serious injury may result.

Among the latter diseases that commonly known under the general name of "knocking" is perhaps the most disgusting and annoying. This disease may be either constitutional or developmental. In either case it is liable, unless checked in its initial stages, to become chronic. In its chronic stage it is one of the most pitiful of all diseases, physical or mental, and assumes many forms more or less idiotic. It is peculiarly sensitive to changes in the political atmosphere, the slightest change rendering the patient color blind, morose, and sometimes pugnacious. His friends he regards as enemies; prosperity—either of the country or of his neighbors—he regards as a public calamity and any mention of it as an insult.

This disease has developed to some extent even in our own province, but fortunately, it has not become epidemic.

Although annoying, it is not serious, and is generally looked upon as a mild form of lunacy. The victim seldom becomes violent and his jeremiads about impending destruction to all and sundry are regarded only as symptoms of the disease.

There is no known cure for this malady. Unlike the physical diseases of children, which run their course and are usually heard of no more, this trouble persists, till there is a change of government, unless its victim succumbs in the meantime either to death or the complications previously referred to.

MEXICO AND THE HUERTA DEBT

It may be assumed, says a United States exchange, by any student of history that the most grievous peril from foreign complications when the Carranza-Villa forces take actual control of Mexico will spring from any tampering with the part of the national debt incurred by Huerta and a de facto President, not recognized, indeed, by the United States, but recognized by European powers. The temptation to repudiate this indebtedness will be strong. The proceeds were used or were intended to be used to kill Constitutionalists. Yet Washington, we imagine, will urge full payment on any provisional government that may succeed the Carranza makeshift.

Mexico, poor as she is, cannot afford national bankruptcy. The trend of modern times is toward making credit sacred, no matter what changes in government may take place. In the long run honesty is the best policy.

The best historic parallel for the kaleidoscope changes of form of government in Mexico is offered by France. The revolution that overthrew Louis XVI and had to fight all Europe could not be nice about paying all the annuities that kings had lavished on favorites. It scaled down such charges. It refunded debts. It made some debts payable in assignats of debased value or mandates which were little better. But the policy was not one of repudiation. And when the monarchy came back after the fall of Napoleon it accepted all the obligations incurred by the republic and the empire. Since that time there has been no attempt at repudiation in France and French credit is superb.

Mexican rebels will do well to study the financial history of France. It offers the very best guide for them when they come into power. If its guidance is accepted, the United States will not have to interfere to protect European bondholders.

NOTES

The regrettable situation that has developed in connection with the deportation of undesirable Hindus from British Columbia is not likely to be repeated. Under the present law there was no way of penalizing the ship which brought these people to Canada. That fact will, however, be supplied in an Immigration Act to be passed at the next session of Parliament. Under the new Act, ship owners will be notified that ships bringing Asiatics to Canada will be liable to seizure, confiscation and sale.

The fleet reviewed by King George near Portsmouth on Saturday included 55 battleships, 4 battle cruisers, 65 other cruisers and scout's, 187 torpedo boat destroyers, 83 torpedo boats, 59 sub-marines and 49 auxiliary craft. This appears to represent the full strength that could be depended upon for the defence of the British Islands to meet an attack which had been anticipated, and for which preparation had been made; but without drawing ships from the Mediterranean or other foreign stations. The mobilization will probably effect its purpose, whatever it may be. No power, however eager for war, would tackle even half of such an armament without thinking long and seriously as to what the outcome might be.

There are indications that the prices of meat will surpass the record high market of recent years, according to the representatives of many of the great packing plants of America. The present tendency of the market appears to bear out this prophecy," says the St. Louis Republic. "The cattle needed for the ample beef supply of other years are not on the ranges or the farms of this or any other country. There is a meat shortage, but it is a world shortage. The statistics gathered by state and national experts show that the cattle swept from the ranges by the settlement of the old grazing states have not been replaced. The farmers who hold the old grazing lands are crop growers and not growers of live stock, and the passing of the ranges meant the passing of cheap and plentiful beef. In brief, beef and meats are arising in price because of the comparative scarcity of the commodity."

EXTRADITION OF HUERTA TO BE SOUGHT FOR MURDER OF MADERO

CHIHUIHUA, July 21.—The extradition of General Victoriano Huerta and other members of his government from whatever country in which they seek refuge, will be asked by the constitutionalist government in order that they may be tried on charges of murdering President Madero and Vice-President Suarez. This will be one of the first acts of the new government of Mexico when General Venustiano Carranza takes charge, according to statements today by constitutionalists close to Carranza. Constitutionalists believe extradition is possible under existing Mexican treaties.

PUEBLO, Mex., July 21.—General Huerta yesterday shrugged his shoulders and smiled at the idea that the force as constitutionalists known to be a short distance from here would desire to attack this city. The military companion of the fugitive former dictator, however, did not display the same degree of confidence, and an extended line of outposts was maintained today which prevented the constitutionalists from approaching nearer.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—With developments in the Mexican situation apparently taking shape for a peaceful solution, administration officials look forward to the outcome of the meeting soon to take place at Monterey between Carranza and the commissioners from Francisco Carranza. Huerta's successor. They were to discuss with the constitutionalist leader, conditions for the transfer of the Mexico city administration.

Washington officials were confident that the warlets soon would result in an agreement for the establishment of a new government. Apprehension over reports that the followers of Zapata, the southern rebel, were dangerously near the capital, was somewhat relieved by dispatches from Mexico City declaring recent statements of the activities of the Zapatistas were exaggerated. It was declared there was a sufficient force of soldiers and volunteers to repulse Zapata if he should attempt to advance on the capital.

IN MEMORIAM

LATE HAZEL MCKENZIE.

On Sat. July 11th, Miss Hazel B. McKenzie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. McKenzie of North Rustico, passed peacefully away, after a protracted illness of almost two years. Medical skill, and the tender ministrations of loved ones, had done much to restore her to health, but alas! Death loves a shining mark, and in Life's fair morning, her pathway brightened with hope and love and friendship, with seemingly a bright and useful future before her, she was called to the higher, fuller life—the life eternal; and we, in our blindness, are apt to wonder why it should be so; but those who were privileged to stand by her bedside during the closing hours of life and hear her words of comfort and assurance to the dear ones left behind, with apparently so much to live for, yet calmly giving up all that this world seems precious and peacefully waiting, year longings for the call of the Master, could not but be impressed with the thought, that after all, the best this world can give cannot satisfy, that the only things worth while are the things unseen and eternal. With the eye of Faith she had gazed beyond earth's shadows, and had seen the City which hath foundations. Sweetly she fell asleep to wake in that land where the inhabitants shall not say, "I am sick." Fair and lovely in life in death she was still beautiful, and amid a profusion of choicest flowers, she was tenderly laid to rest. The funeral which was very largely attended, took place on Monday July 13th, to Cavendish cemetery. The hymns, chosen by the deceased a few weeks before her death were:—"Hold Thou My Hand"; "I Do Not Ask O Lord"; and "Peace, Perfect Peace." Her pastor Rev. John Stirling, whose presence in the sick room during the long weary months of illness, was ever the source of cheer and helplessness, spoke fittingly from 1 John 5-4, "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." The pall-bearers were:—Milton McKenzie, Charles McKenzie, Lloyd Moreside, Warren Houston, James L. LePage and James Andrew. There are left to mourn, a sorrowing father and mother, nine sisters and two brothers, besides a host of relatives and friends who will long cherish the memory of one greatly beloved. "Oft doth my heart when friends' glad voices raise Here where we used to meet Ache with an echo of those vanished days Thy presence made so sweet.

If I must tarry neth these darkened skies And long in patience wait, With thy same gentle heart and tender eyes Meet me at Heaven's gate. COM.

touch with the southern rebel. They seek to turn his sympathy toward the constitutionalist cause. Another demonstration of the attitude assumed by Carranza in his role of provisional president, was seen in the announcement of a federal commander about Vera Cruz to the effect that the new administration does not recognize the existence of a revolution, and considers all Mexicans on an equal basis as citizens. The commander, Lieut.-Col. Izunza, declared a proclamation issued in Mexico City granting so-called revolutionists permission to pass through federal lines if they did not carry arms."
