P. W. C. DEBATE.—The Prince of Wales Debating Society held their weekly debate on Tuesday, Oct. 14. The topic of discussion was: "Resolved that man is a creature of circumstances rather than the architect of his own fortune". The speakers were, Pro. D. MacArthur, L. Webster, R. Brown, Con. P. Keeping, Margaret MacQuarrie, P. Walsh. After the vote, which stood 30-29 in favor of the negative the critic, P. Landrigan expressed himself as well pleased with the debate.

CHILDREN'S AID.—The Board of Management of the Children's Aid Society decided at the meeting held Monday afternoon, that the annual meeting of the Society shall be held in the City Courtroom, on the evening of Monday the 10th of November. The monthly report of the Society's executive officer, Mr. Leslie Auld, showed that truants had been well looked after and that several cases of neglect and orphan children had been investigated—some of them provided for. Mr. A. McDonald, a member of the Board, and the President, Dr. Conroy, both commended highly the painstaking care of Mr. Auld in the performance of his duties. There was some discussion of a design to bring before a public meeting the proposal that a special class shall be performed in one of the public schools, with a competent teacher, for the teaching and training of abnormal children, those who make trouble and interfere with the duties of normal children in the regular classes. This matter was referred to a committee. A proposed amendment of the Truancy law is also under the consideration of the society's Honorary Solicitor, Mr. D. McKinnon.

In some districts winter departs for only two months in the twelve, so that day and night, month by month, the deadening loneliness of perpetual snow threatens to drive a man into melancholia. It is a heavy test of human endurance, not so much in the times of activity as when the monotony of existence turns a week into an eternity. Twice a year the supplies of food are "packed" in, and then the operator and his visitors exhaust the possibilities of conversation. For the rest of the time it is only a break in the line that gives a man a chance to meet his comrades. When that significant accident occurs, he loads his tools on his back and marches forth in search of the interruption.

Two of the worst foes of the mountain operator are the forest fire and the avalanche. Again and again their depredations sweep away poles and wires, demanding heroic service of the linemen to restore normal conditions. An eyewitness of one of these storms described it as an avalanche of ice and snow that had swept great rocks and giant trees like matchwood before it down the mountain side. The slide measured 1,200 feet across and 80 feet deep. It could have buried out of sight a good sized town. Yet when it was necessary to re-establish the wires and poles ripped to shreds in its thunderous course, the linemen took it as "a little incident" scarcely worth writing about to headquarters.

Alpine Zones of Silence. Discovery of a "Zone of Silence" in the Alps is said to have been made by workmen employed in the construction of the highest section of the Jungfrau Railway. Heavy charges of dynamite were set off, and, according to account, with surprising results. The detonations were heard within a radius of thirty miles, then within a zone of the next fourteen miles there was silence, but further up to a concentric circle of fifty miles the noise was again heard clearly.

PUNCH'S HUNCH

Tumor in the Brain is Cause of Eccentric Growth Says Professor

According to Professor W. Stirling, who lectured at the Royal Institution London, that eccentric individual "Punchinello" is an acromegalic.

This description he applied to persons with certain parts of the body developed in gigantic proportions. Their state was brought about by a tumor in the brain, and as this enlarged so the person grew.

Describing the disease, the professor stated that an acromegalic in most cases could be identified by his large hands and feet and jaw. In some cases a person's tongue grew so much that it became too large for the mouth. Acromegaly did not affect all its victims in the same way, however, for giants abnormal in every proportion had lived at different times.

It was a curious fact, added the professor, that the bones of all such giants remained in their infantile state till their usually early death. It very often happened that, after reaching a certain state of abnormal growth, they became hunch-backed and had a protruding chest. Hence the description of "Punch" as an acromegalic.
