ALCOHOL IN FRANCE.

France has frequently been boasted of as an example of the benefits arising from the free and unrestricted use of wine, and the robust health and simple virtues of her peasantry have been quoted as conclusive arguments for 'moderate indulgence' in light alcoholic stimulants. Of late, however, the consumption of strong liquor has largely increased. This was at first laid to the charge of a temporarily decreased grape crop, but the fact that normal or increased wine production has not mended matters is causing anxiety among those who have been in the habit of looking on wine as a temperance drink, says the Montreal Witness in referring to the subject. For some time the drinking customs and the most prominent of their evil effects were largely confined to the cities, but they have recently broken out in the country districts with the virulence of a pestilence. One important French journal lays the blame of nine-tenths of the maladies, crimes, accidents and popular disorders at the door of alcohol, and speaks of it as degrading every social assembly or excursion into a drunken debauch. The increased proportion of chronic alcoholics among the insane, diseased and criminal classes has also of late been noted by many prominent French scientists. Prof. Etienne, superintendent of the insane asylum at Marville, reports that in 1886 there was one alcoholic to every fifty-seven male patients, but in 1899 there was one in every twelve. Another scientist, M. Paul Zanier, in a recently published work, credits the enormous increase of juvenile crime during the last twenty or thirty years to the increased parental indulgence in alcohol, while a third, M. G. Baudran, secretary of the Board of Health in one of the provinces, goes further by suggesting a remedy. He states that alcohol in all its forms is neither more nor less than a poison, and recommends that every alcoholic liquor, except a few light wines, be placed under the laws regulating the sale of poisons, which in France are very strict and carry severe penalties for their infringement. This is not, of course, prohibition, as it still treats light wine as a temperance drink, but it would be a very radical departure in a country like France, where the manufacture of wine and spirits is so general, and where their use is well nigh universal. Combined with the restrictive measures adopted by the late government in relation to drinking in the army and upon the government railways, this is encouraging evidence that the advocacy of advanced temperance legislation is not confined to 'cranks' or 'snobs', but that it is considered a pressing practical issue by some of the most moderate, capable and scientific men of the day. It may be hoped that the new government of France more radical than its predecessor in most matters, will have something to say upon this important topic, and will endeavor to cope with the evil with the vigor and determination which its magnitude requires.

BOER LADY TELLS OF LAST DAY OF WAR.

Seventeen Gallant New Zealanders Killed.

BY TRAIN BEING WRECKED

Several Thousand Soldiers Walked in Funeral Procession, Graves Marked With Little White Crosses.

One of the most charming of the ladies who are accompanying the party of Boer delegates at present visiting the Province is Mrs. Lane, wife of Moody Lane an Irish Lieutenant of Gen. Cronje, who was captured in the trenches at the battle of Peardeberg. Amongst the many pathetic reminiscences, and most of the stories told by the excellent lady are pathetic in the extreme,—is one relating to the last Zealander who was proceeding southward, by rail to the country north of Klerksdorp. Another train also bearing New Zealanders was proceeding southward. The peace conference was about to close its deliberations, and everything looked hopeful for a cessation of war's ravages.

A few hours before the generals concluded their terms of surrender the two trains above mentioned met face to face on a sharp curve near Klerksdorp where our camp was. When the wreck was cleared away seventeen of the gallant New Zealanders were taken away dead, and many were wounded. The funeral took place the next day and was witnessed by Mrs. Lane.

"I was so sorry to hear of the accident," she said, while tears glistened in her eyes while she spoke. "We expected an end to have come to all this dreadful killing, of the young men—nearly all the British were young men—many of them were boys. Our people in the villages near by came to see the funeral, it was such a great long procession. Seven thousand soldiers walked past us, and it took nearly two hours. At the place of burial all were got together, and during the speaking of the army chaplains all was so quiet. Just think of so many people all together at one time and you could hear a pin drop."

Then continuing, Mrs. Lane said: "The plots were all marked with little white wooden crosses and numbered. Next day peace was proclaimed, and we all felt sorry for the mothers and friends of the poor fellows who were killed though they had not fought at all—and yet they died and were buried like soldiers. It was such a pity. I shall never, never forget about it."

"I sleep well enough at night, And the blindest appetite Ever mortal man possessed."

Riley's farmer is the very picture of a man advanced in years, yet in the enjoyment of perfect health. A good appetite, good digestion and sound sleep, are the chief factors in a vigorous old age. Life is sustained by food, when it is properly digested and assimilated. When digestion fails, there is a loss of nutrition which soon shows itself in physical weakness, nervousness, sleeplessness, etc.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It strengthens the body in the only way possible,—by enabling the assimilation of the nutrition extracted from food.

"I used ten bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and several vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets' a year ago this spring, and have had no trouble with indigestion since," writes Mr. W. P. Thompson, of Townsend, Broadwater Co., Montana. "Words fail to tell how thankful I am for the relief, as I had suffered so much and it seemed that the doctors could do me no good. I got down in weight to 125 pounds, and was not able to work at all. Now I weigh nearly 150 and can do a day's work on the farm. I have recommended your medicine to several, and shall always have a good word to say for Dr. Pierce and his medicines."

The Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.
