Author Dead

(Canadian Press) NEW YORK, April 23.—The speed king of the book publishing game, the man who fed the eager eighties a dime dose of culture daily, is dead. John Wurtels Lovell, who could get a new Kipling yarn on the stalls almost as fast as an extra reached the newsboys' hands, died Monday at the age of 80, but his death did not become known until last night. If the literature that he turned out were placed end to end, somebody on Mars would be reading Ruskin. In his heyday, he estimated, he was publishing 7,000,000 volumes a year. Most of them at 10 and 20 cents or so. Born and educated in Montreal, he took a job as manager of his father's firm, John Lovell & Co. at Roules Point, N. Y. and then things started humming. Coming here in 1882 he formed the John W. Lovell Company. Ruskin, Dickens, Thackeray, Shakespeare and Carlyle streamed from his presses, making "Lovell's library" familiar to millions at bargain prices. But if you wanted to pay fancy figures, Mr. Lovell was ready. He sold paper Ruskins at 10 cents and complete editions for $450. London has a clean hotel drive.
