Chat of Body of Hours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

FINDING OUT WHETHER PATIENT IS IMPROVING, AT A STANDSTILL, OR GETTING WORSE

When an infection occurs in the body, the body's defences immediately use all their power to get the infection out of the body or at least prevent the infection from doing much damage. The body's heat is increased to "warm up" the white corpuscles of the blood, which also greatly increase in number. The blood pressure increases to make sure that all heart rate increases to supply extra blood and remove wastes from the tissues.

India Tightens Law Against Child Marriage

By G. E. POWELL

CALCUTTA, India, April 19—India's central legislative assembly has just passed two private bills designed to tighten up administration of the existing law against child marriages in British India.

One bill is designed to end the practice of child marriages performed outside British India. The government indicated its approval of the measure by amending it so that it would apply to contraventions of the act in foreign territory, as well as in Indian States.

The second bill, carried by 87 votes to 16, provides that a court may issue an injunction to prevent a child marriage about to be solemnized and can initiate proceedings against offenders on its own motion. Hitherto the task of prosecution had been left to private individuals.

The existing act, passed in 1927, prohibits marriages of Hindu girls below the age of 14 and of boys below 18. It was officially known as the Child Marriage Restraint Act but is popularly called the Sarda Act in tribute to Dewan Bahadur Harilal Sarda, Hindu member for Ajmer, Rajputana, who introduced it. Rajputana is called the home of Indian chivalry.

The act was acclaimed as a landmark in Indian social reform, especially women's organizations, compared to Lord William Bentinck's measure suppressing suttee—self-immolation of widows—their husbands' pyres—and Pandit Jawahar Chandra Vidyaesagar's Act legitimizing the remarriage of widows.

The Sarda Act contained many loopholes and Indian reformers, especially women's organizations, have long demanded that these be stopped. They objected to the provision by which the act was only applicable to British India and contended the penalty, a month's imprisonment or a small fine, was not severe enough.

Statements by Indian members of the legislative assembly during debate on the first bill showed how widespread was the evasion. Here are some typical statements:

"Before the Act people used to marry children of five and six. In some cases even newly-born children."

"Since it was passed there has been a shameless practice in some states of charging 100 rupees for each child marriage performed."

"When parents arrange for a child marriage, they usually include in the contract of dowry a provision as to who shall pay the fee."

"Such marriages, once celebrated, are not void. They should be. Magistrates should be empowered to prevent the girl and boy from living together."

United Dominion Resists With Social Credit System, Claim

(C.P. By Guardian's Special Wire) HALIFAX, April 19—John Blackmore, leader of the Social Credit group in the House of Commons, told a public meeting tonight, "these provinces are breaking apart as sure as you and I are here, because they can't stand the pressure."

"The only way in the world of keeping this Dominion together is by creating some such system as this," the Lethbridge, Alta., member said, outlining the application of the Social Credit system.

Social Credit proposed to take over the creation of the nation's money and place that power directly under a government board, he explained. "It should be attached to the Department of Finance and should have every fact of the economic conditions in the country lashed before it." The board would "synchronize the number of dollars in circulation with the amount of goods available."

Mr. Blackmore's Halifax address was the first of a series he proposed to make throughout Nova Scotia.

Social Credit was "not against the banks but wanted the banks to work with it." The system would see that credit was "used in a social way," and prices would be controlled by "awards" and not by "laws."

Snow Leaves Scores Dead From Texas to Eastern Coast

When a blizzard swept Chicago recently hundreds of motorists had to dig out their cars on the streets. In the southwest section of the city, highway snowplows fought for hours through drifts like this (Left), to open traffic arteries between the suburbs and the Loop. Most of central and eastern United States suffered from the gales which swept the country. In Alabama they reached tornado proportions. In most cases heavy rains followed. Eleven inches fell in one day on the town of Wetumpka, Ala., leaving the streets in this condition (Right). Hundreds were forced to flee from the food. The storm began in the Texas Panhandle and its fringes left eastern Canada blanketed in snow.
