FORTUNE'S FOOL

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Colonel Holles, soldier and adventurer, returns to England, the land of his birth, when war is declared with Holland. He comes to lodge with Martha Quinn, hostess of the Paul's Head, in Paul's Yard, London.

The colonel asks his old friend, His Grace of Albermarle, to secure for him a place in the army.

Albermarle warns him that the name of Randal Holles, father of the colonel, is on the warrant for the execution of the late king. Therefore it is dangerous for the colonel to secure a commission. A friend named Tucker asks Holles to enter a conspiracy to overthrow the government.

The dreaded pestilence is rapidly spreading in London. His Grace of Buckingham falls victim to the charms of Sylvia Farquharson, actress. He offers to write a play for her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Is not a part, indeed, a sort of garment for the soul? Nay, now, if I am to continue I must have your assistance as I say. I must know how this first act appears to you, how far my Laura does justice to your powers and I must discuss with you the lines which the remainder of the play shall follow. Therefore again I ask you—and in the sacred cause of art I defy you to deny me when will you hear what I have written?

"Why, since your grace does me so much honor, when you will."

It was intoxicating, this homage to her talent from one of his gifts and station, the intimate of princes, the close associate of kings, and it stifled, temporarily at least, the last qualm of her intuitions which had warned her against this radiant gentleman. They had become so friendly and intimate in this week, and yet his conduct had been so respectful and circumspect throughout, that clearly her instincts had misled her at that first meeting.

"When I will," said he. "That is to honor me, indeed. Shall it be tomorrow, then?"

"If your grace pleases, and you will bring the act . . ."

"Bring it!" He raised his eyebrows. His lip curled a little as he looked round the dingy green room.

Lenten Lectures

ments were directed and controlled by that Presence. Clearly the only safe rule for living in that terrible desert, was to plan to live a planless life so far as their own planning was concerned. Besides the last two verses of Exodus which emphasize this, I find lines in the ninth chapter of Numbers are given to telling how exactly they were guided, and how explicitly they followed their Guide. It seems almost as if first reading as though there was a decidedly needless repetition. You seem to understand the thing easily enough without that. But as one reads it again, and yet again, slowly, it begins to dawn upon the mind that the purpose is to put marked emphasis on this feature of their new life in the wilderness. The people would rise in the morning, and probably they would be slow to look out toward the cloud to learn if there was to be any change that day. And so during the day there would come to be an instinctive habit of watching that cloud. They might remain in a new camping place for months, or only for a few weeks, or possibly only for a few days. They never knew a day ahead. They lived literally a day at a time. It was certainly a hard-mouth existence so far as the daily manna was concerned. But then it was from His hand that their mouth and that made a great difference. It was equally so in their movements and in all of their new life. When, one morning as thousands of heads peep out, the cloud is seen to have lifted up from over the tent, the next question was which direction? It might be toward the west, or it might be just the opposite, toward the east. Both the time of going, and the direction, and the pace were regulated by the presence of their Friend in that cloud. Their life was a life of obedience to the will of their wise, loving Companion.

CHAPTER VII

The Prude

On the evening of the day that had seen the meeting between Holles and Tucker, at about the same hour representing at Whitehall the expediency of closing the theaters and other places of congregation in view of the outbreak of plague within the City itself, His Grace of Buckingham was sitting down to supper with a merry company in the great dining-room of Wallingford House.

Eleven sat down to a table that was laid for twelve. The chair on the Duke's right stood empty. The guest of honor, Miss Farquharson, had not yet arrived. At the last moment she had sent a message that she was unavoidably detained for some little time at home, and that, if on this account it should happen that she must deny herself the honor of sitting down to supper at his grace's table, at least she would reach Wallingford House in time for the reading with which his grace was to delight the company.

It was in part a fiction. There was nothing to detain Miss Farquharson beyond a revival of her uneasy intuitions, which warned her against the increase of intimacy that would attend her inclusion in the Duke's supper-party. The play, however, was another affair. There fore she would so time her arrival that she would find supper at an end and the reading about to begin.

His grace found her message vexatious, and he would have postponed supper until her arrival but that his guests did not permit him to have his own way in the matter. As the truth was that there was no first act in existence, for the Duke had not yet written a line of it and perhaps never would, and that supper was to provide the whole entertainment, it follows that this would be protracted, and that likely still to find the party at the table.

Eat No Sweets If You Are Rheumatic

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is at least the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat no sweets for awhile, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure and above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid or body waste matter, and is often generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this poison from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the presence of the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work; they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this toxic acid, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain, called rheumatism.

At the first twinges of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is helpful to neutralize acidity, remove waste and stimulate the kidneys, thus helping to rid the blood of these rheumatic poisons.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithium and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.

Red Pepper Heat Ends Chest Colds

Ease your tight, aching chest. Stop the pain. Break up the congestion. Feel a bad cold loosen up in just a short time.

"Red Pepper Rub" is the cold remedy that brings quickest relief. It cannot hurt you and it certainly seems to end the tightness and drive the congestion and soreness right out.

Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers, and when heat penetrates right down into colds, congestion, aching muscles and sore, stiff joints relief comes at once.

The moment you apply Red Pepper Rub you feel the tingling heat. In three minutes the congested spot is warmed through and through. When you are suffering from a cold, rheumatism, backache, stiff neck or sore muscles, just get a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub, made from red peppers, at any drug store. You will have the quickest relief known.

themselves wouldn't be purchased in large enough quantities to render production economical. Therefore these things would be impossible or would cost so much that only the very rich could have them and there would be very few of the very rich because all the fortunes made by producing these things in large quantities would not be in existence.

Without advertising to help their sale and distribution, a phonograph would probably cost $500. Without advertising to make possible the manufacture of enormous quantities of porcelain bath tub would be the luxury of Henry Ford and there wouldn't be any Henry Ford. If only a few people in the United States knew that there was such a thing as a watch, only these few could afford to carry them.

We are the greatest advertising nation in the world and it is a significant fact that we are the nation in which the standard of living of the mass of people is the highest.

If you don't approve of progress you won't approve of advertising for advertising has contributed largely to the material progress of the world.
