Lary in the evening the air seemed filled with music as bells as sleigh after sleigh filled with invited guests were seen winding their way in this direction. All were very hospitably received by Mrs. Smith who in her usual friendly way soon made all present feel quite at home. And all went merrily as a marriage bell.

The evening was spent in games of different kinds, also recitations were very ably given by some of the young men. Special selections were also given on the phonograph and harmonica.

Time passed swiftly away and when it was announced that supper was to be served all seemed surprised that the hour had arrived so quickly.
