TERRIBLE FIRE TRAGEDY

INVERNESS, N. S., Nov. 19—About two o'clock yesterday afternoon the dwelling house of John McEachern of Sight Point, five miles from Inverness, was completely destroyed by fire. The house was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. MacEachern and two grandchildren between six and eight years of age. One of the children went into a dark closet, and for lighting purposes used a birch bark torch. Soon the house was in flames.

The little ones escaped, and the aged grandparents, each over eighty years of age, the wife being blind, were within the building at the time. The husband tried to reach his wife's room and he succeeded, but the unfortunate old lady had left her room and he could not find her. Believing that she had escaped the flames he proceeded to a nearby well in the futile attempt of obtaining water to quench the flames, but fell and was injured.

He made his way back to the house and burst open the front door. The flames burst out upon him and he was burned severely about the head and face, so much so, that his life is despaired of.

When the destruction of the house was complete and a search was made among the ruins, the charred body of the aged grandmother was found beside the kitchen range. She was virtually cremated in the old home. Her aged husband will not likely long survive owing to the serious nature of his injuries.

COCAINE HABIT IN MONTREAL

Special to The Guardian.

MONTREAL, Nov. 21—The cocaine evil in Montreal has become such a conspicuous one that the Anti-alcholic League has taken the matter up.

The police have been clearing up China Town which is the heart of sale of the drug.

Its worst feature is that new victims are daily manufactured and children are frequently given the drug in order that they may acquire the habit.

When they become proper victims they are encouraged to steal in order to get money to buy the drug, which they peddle on the street.

A vigorous effort is being made to stamp out the vice.

ATTEMPT OF LIFE OF GUADALOUPE'S GOVERNOR

POINTE A PITRE, Guadaloupe, Nov. 18—An attempt on the life of acting Governor William Fawthier was made today, but he was unharmed. A carriage occupied by the Governor was fired upon at the very spot and at the same hour of the day that an attack was made upon Governor Gautret's carriage in September. Yesterday four bullets from a revolver passed through the upper part of the vehicle. The assailant escaped. One hundred marines from the French cruiser Admiral Aube have been landed. They will try to preserve order at the elections on Sunday.

FOREIGN AGITATORS IN COAL FIELDS

LONDON, Nov. 18—The presence of William D. Haywood, of Idaho, a member of the Western Federation of Miners, in the Welch coal fields, where extra police and military have been required to check the rioting of strikers, is interesting the authorities who have to cope with the situation.

Considerable tension still prevails among the miners. A number of continental labor leaders are in the district, but the authorities are accredited with their methods of conducting strikes, a knowledge of which is lacking in the case of American labor chiefs.

GIVE BEER AND WINE TO SOLDIERS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. — The story told by many commanding officers of the army of the results of the abolition of the army canteen, is repeated in a graphic way by Bridadier General Damsay D. Potts, commanding the department of Luzon in the Phillipines. General Potts says that most of the court martials last year were traceable directly to the use of the native liquors, the deleterious and in many cases disasterous effects of which he said, are too well known to call for comment.

"It is a viclation of law to sell such liquor to soldiers, but the law cannot be enforced," says General Potts.

"One who has never seen the effect of even a small quantity of native liquor upon a young American, unaccustomed to its use, can form no judgment as to the seriousness of the situation now presented, a situation which is beyond the control of the military authorities, while the civil authorities can do very little, I can only suggest the removal of temptation, by providing a substitute for the vile native liquors in the shape of beer and possibly a little wine through the post exchange."

FIGHTING IN MEXICO.

The men had worked all Sunday and part of the night and had gone to sleep in the oil house.

Sparks from a passing engine fired the little building and they could be seen running around endeavoring to find the door before they fell.

They were both burned beyond recognition.

SAM ANDERSON BEATS MCLEOD IN MONCTON

MONCTON, N. B., Nov. 20—Sandy McLeod, champion middleweight wrestler of Scotland and Sam Anderson, champion middleweight wrestler of the world held a match here Saturday, the best two out of three to a finish.

After wrestling fifty-one minutes, Anderson secured a fall, but this was the only one of the bout. The match did not start till about 10.30 and the men wrestled till 12 o'clock, when the chief of police called time, as it was Sunday morning.

McLeod had it on the champion in weight and strength, and it took all of Anderson's superior science to offset this. The last thirty minutes of the match McLeod was very aggressive, and by his great strength seemed to be wearing his opponent down. The opinion seemed to be that if the match went to three falls the Scotchman would have won. As it was the decision was given to Anderson.

GREGORIAN CALENDAR QUESTION UP AGAIN

BERLIN, November 16—The movement for the reform of the Gregorian calendar seems to be taking a more tangible shape than heretofore. The Swiss federal council, according to the Berne correspondent of the Vossische Zeitung, will invite all the nations to a conference at Berne, with the view to adopting an arrangement by which every year will be divided into exactly 52 weeks, or 364 days. New Year's day would be an extra day; Sunday would bear no date. The four quarters of the year would be exactly of the same length —30, 30 and 31 days successively. Thus the 31st day of March, June, September and December would always fall on a Sunday. Every leap year would have an off day that would neither be counted nor dated. It would be inserted between June 31 and July 1.

FIRM'S EMPLOYES NEARLY SEVENTY THOUSAND HANDS

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—In view of the numerous references that have been made in the press recently to the rapid expansion of the celebrated engineering works of Messrs. Krupp, statistics just published are of considerable interest. It appears that on July 1 no fewer than 68,726 officials, clerks and workmen were employed by the firm. As will be readily seen, these officials, together with their families, constitute the population of a large town.

Of this total number, 37,761 were employed in the steel foundry and the gun testing grounds alone. Coal and coke to the amount of 2,492,406 tons was consumed during the year, while the number of steam engines employed was 569, developing a horse power of 89,430. In addition to its own plant for the production of electricity, the firm posesses its own gas producing plant, which turned out a supply of 18,487,300 cubic metres of gas. The railway forms, an important feature in all large manufacturing works, and in the case of Messrs. Krupp, there are 87 miles of railway, 52 locomotives and 2,896 wagons in use.

ROSEBERRY PROPOSES REFORM

LONDON, November 20.—Without division the house of lords passed Lord Rosebery's resolutions for the reform of the upper house, except the one dealing with tenure, which was withdrawn.

Lord Rosebery is urging the adoption of the resolutions, said: "The time is short, my lords. You may have no opportunity after this to discuss any resolution affecting this house." The warning, however, was not heeded. There was no serious opposition.

The gist of Lord Rosebery's resolutions is that the house in the future shall consist of lords of parliament, comprising some chosen all by the hereditary peers from among themselves, some nominated by the crown, others sitting by virtue of their offices, and still others chosen from outside.

The tenure resolution provided that the terms of all the lords of parliament should be identical, with the exception of the ex-officio members whose membership should coincide with their tenure of office.

Speaking in support of his resolutions, Lord Rosebery said that he believed that on these principles it would be possible to reform the upper chamber to a large extent solve a great constitutional problem, and maintain the ancient constitution of the country without the convulsions incident to a reform by general elections. It case of a disagreement between the two houses the dispute should be settled, Lord Rosebery said, by a joint conference, or in the event of the failure of the conference, by referendum. There could be no question as to the choice of the country between a reformed house of lords and the intolerable tyranny of a single chamber.

Lord Curzon strongly urged the adoption of the resolutions as a practical and generous plan for a reformed upper house, in which the hereditary element would not exercise a preponderent influence.

Baron Courtney thought the resolutions vague and illusory, and disagreed completely with the view of the government that the constitutional conference having failed, it was impossible for parliament to reach an agreement. He deplored that a threat had been made to take the matter out of the hands ofthe parliament and to appeal to the man on the street.

Lord Landsdowne, having supported the resolutions on the ground that it was necessary to bring the upper house into closer relations with the democracy, and the Earl of Crewe declaring that he would not vote against them, as he thought a great deal might be said in favor of Lord Rosebery's propositions, the resolutions were carried without a division of the house.

CANADIAN GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY INCORPORATED

The incorporation of the Canadian Geographical Society is announced. For upwards of a half a century both England and the United States have had Geographical societies, and great has been the work done by the Royal Geographical Society of England and the American Geographical Society in the line of diffusing geographical knowledge and the encouragement of a general and public spirited interest in the national resources of those countries. There is evidently a wide field for such a society in Canada at the present time, and the organizers of the Canadian Geographical Society deserve encouragement. It is understood that Inspector McCormac is one of the promoters of this new organization. He is a member of the Canadian Geographical Society, being one of the very few Canadians who have been honored with a fellowship in that Society.

HUSBAND AND WIFE WILL BE HANGED

DEQUEEN, Ark., Nov. 19—The circuit court here has returned a verdict of murder in the first degree against John Ford and his wife, who have been on trial for the killing of Wm. Nichols, near this place on September 30th. Both will be hanged January 20th.

The Fords were tenants of Nichols, who was a former member of the Arkansas Legislature. The tragedy resulted from Nichols driving across a pea patch rented by the Fords, to get to a hay barn he had reserved for his own use. The testimony showed that Nichols was stabbed to death with a knife by Ford, and that Mrs. Ford aided him in the crime.

COUNT TOLSTOI IS DEAD.

ASTOPAVIA, Nov. 21.—Yesterday, peasants all day long passed through the death chamber hung with pines, where Tolstoi's body lies.

The great writer died early on Sunday morning after a great fight against great odds.

Many mourners knelt beside the bier. The silence at times was broken by the Orthodox chants for the repose of the soul of the dead.

The Countess Tolstoi sat beside the body for hours, often kissing the face. "The light of the world is out," she said repeatedly.

She left only to attend mattins in the school chapel, expecting that a requiem would be sung. When informed this was not permitted she fainted.

SHOT IN STREET RIOT

CHICAGO, November 19.—One man was shot and four others bruised and cut in a riot of striking garment workers at the Kedzie Avenue station of the Metropolitan elevated railway last night.

The disturbance assumed such threatening proportions that reserves from the West Chicago and West-North Avenue police stations were rushed to the scene in an effort to clear the street of struggling men and women.

The trouble is said to have started when strikers appeared on the platform of the Kedzie Avenue station on the Humboldt branch line, and accosted men claimed by the police to be strike-breakers.

Men and women who had been passengers on a train ran to the doors, but it was not until some time later that they were able to reach the street.

When the first of the patrol wagons arrived the fighters had fled from the elevated station and disappeared in the crowd which had gathered in the streets.

MISS L. M. MONTGOMERY ENTERTAINED IN BOSTON

The following articles are clipped from Boston Exchange, and will be of interest to many of Miss Montgomery's friends in this Province.

Miss L. M. Montgomery of Canada, author of "Anne of the Green Gables," was entertained by the Authors' Club between 4:30 and 6 yesterday afternoon, at its rooms on Boylston street. Miss Montgomery is the guest of Mrs. L. C. Page of Brookline.—Herald.

The Boston Authors' Club gave a reception at Hotel Kensington yesterday afternoon to Miss L. M. Montgomery of Prince Edward Island, who is passing a week in the city. She is the author of "Anne of Green Gables," "Anne of Avonlea" and "Kilmeny of the Orchard." She is a guest at the Brookline home of Mr. and Mrs. L. Cones Page.—Herald.

Would you like to know how to write novels?

Here is a recipe:

Miss L. Maud Montgomery, the author of "Anne of Green Gables," "Anne of Avonlea," "Kilmeny of the Orchard," and other stories, gave it to me today.

"An old woman once said to me, 'My dear, never get married as long as you can possibly help it, for when the right man comes along you can't help it.

"That is just about the way with novel writing. 'Never write as long as you can possibly help it, for when the writing fever seizes you, you can't help it.'

"That's my recipe," she smiled.

Miss Montgomery is petite, with the fine, delicate features of an imaginative woman. She has said that she is soon to bring out a novel called the "Stiry Girl." I hastened to ask her about it.

"It is a simple little tale about children, not unlike the others I have written," she answered. "That is about the only kind of story I write, for that is the phase of life I know. I am sure you cannot write convincingly about anything you do not understand from having lived it.

"Ever since I was a little kiddie I have scribbled verse of stories on every scrap of paper I could find. Of course I began, as very young writers do, by planning all kinds of elaborate novels with the most complicated plots," Miss Montgomery smiled at her childish attempts. "But the older I grow the more I see the enduring charm of simplicity in writing, as in everything else. Children are refreshing. Stories about them are."

"Then you do not attempt society novels, or problem stories?"

"No, never," said Miss Montgomery. "My home is in Prince Edward Island. When I tell you that I live four miles from a telephone and 11 miles from a railway, you may know that there are few problems and little society with a capital S there. Life in the Island is not all complex. But it is the most splendid place to write, if you are fond of simple characters. And I am.

WRITERS WHO LOOK ON.

"I have a feeling," went on Miss Montgomery, "that many of the stories written about society are written by people who look on from the outside. You must be really in-

THE LITTLE BARE FEET

Little bare feet, sunburned and brown,
Patterin', patterin' up and down,
Dancin' over the kitchen floor,
Light as the foam-flakes on the shore.
Right on the go from morn till late,
From the garden path to the old front gate,
There hain't no music ter me so sweet
As the patterin' sound of them little bare feet.

When I mend my nets by the foamin' sea,
Them little bare feet trot there with me,
And a shrill little voice I love'll say,
"Dran'pa, spin me a yarn ter-day."
And I know when my dory comes ter land,
There's a spry little form somewheres on hand;
And the very first sound my ears'll meet
Is the welcomin' run of them little bare feet.

Oh, little bare feet! how deep you've pressed
Yer prints of love in my worn old breast!
And I sometimes think, when I come ter die,
'Twill be lonesome like in the by-and-by;
That up in Heaven I'll long ter hear
That little child's voice so sweet and clear;
That even there, on the golden street,
I'll miss the pat of them little bare feet.
