Prince Edward Island very much indeed," he declared enthusiastically to a Guardian representative last evening. "The weather has been of the best, and I have been taken around by various people for drives in their motor cars to all the readily accessible parts of the Island, both fronting the Strait and the Gulf. I have been through a great many of the historic places, and I am charmed with their beauty and perfect cultivation. I observed hardly any waste land anywhere in all the area I have visited from Summerside to Belfast on the one hand, and from Cavendish down to Covehead on the other.

"I was particularly struck by your beautiful rural scenery," Mr. Morpeth said. "Though there are no high elevations such as we have in New Zealand, yet there are many elevations from which you get the most remarkable views. The way the country lies to the sun strikes me as being exceedingly beautiful and of great potential value from an agricultural standpoint.

Compliments Island Girls
"I am charmed, too," he added, "with the girls of Prince Edward Island. They have such clear complexions, such bright and happy faces, and can talk so entertainingly, that it has been a pleasure to meet them.

New Zealand Conditions
Questioned regarding present day conditions in New Zealand, Mr. Morpeth said the country was coming through the depression satisfactorily. "We have had a very difficult time," he explained, "because our revenue is derived, like the revenue of this Island, from primary products to the extent of at least 90 per cent. of our exports. The drop that took place in the price of wool, meat, hemp, butter and cheese was in the vicinity of 50 per cent. But there was no drop in the obligations that people had assumed in the way of mortgages, leases and interest. All those remained at their original figures until the New Zealand Government introduced legislation whereby commissions were set up for the adjustment of differences between mortgagors and mortgagees.

"These commissions were divided into two kinds—rural commissions, which dealt with farming properties and all such interests that related to primary production, and city commissions dealing with the difficulties that arose in cities through the drop in rates of offices, shops and houses and the inability of those people, like their country cousins, to meet their obligations.

"These two classes of commissions have been sitting for about three and a half years now, and have done a very great deal of good work. The commission have not authority to impose a finding upon the parties, but if they can get the parties voluntarily to agree to an adjustment of their differences for a period up to two years, they are then entitled to make a finding binding on the parties for an agreed term.

"In the event of the commissions being unable to bring the parties to voluntary agreement, they had to report the finding of their investigation to the Supreme Court or the Magistrate's Court, according to the magnitude of the capital sum at stake. Cases involving over 3,000 pounds went to Supreme Court; under that amount the Magistrate's Court had jurisdiction.

"The result, so far as at least as the city commissions were concerned, was a very large percentage of voluntary agreements. Even in those cases where voluntary agreements could be reached, the parties were for the most part not opposed to the suggestions and recommendations of the Commission, but, finding themselves in the position of trustees handling mortgage money, they would ask for a Court order for protection of themselves as trustees.

"Through these commissions all but about ten per cent. of the cases were disposed of.

"Now that the period of three or four years has elapsed, there is a considerable diminution of oncoming cases, and the main work of the commissions at the present time consists in handling cases which have already been dealt with but had come to the end of the period for which an agreement had been made.

Family Births
In the reference in last week's Guardian to the children of Mr. Morpeth's grandparents born here before the family migrated to New Zealand in 1859, two birth entries were regrettably omitted. These are recorded as follows in the family Bible:

"Henry Douglas, son of the same parents (Henry Douglas Morpeth and Mary Christina Johnston, his wife, born January 30th, 1855, was baptized by the Rev. William Snodgrass on the 25th of March, 1855. John McNeill, Session Clerk.

"Thomas Sloan, son of the same parents, born 1st of September, 1856 was baptized by me on the 20th of the same month and in the same year, Charlottetown, Oct. 25, 1859. D. Fitzgerald, Rector of St. Paul's Ass't minister."

RESTORATION POSSIBLE
WITH THE FASCIST FORCES NEAR TOLEDO, Oct. 4—(AP)—The Insurgents gave attention today to possible restoration of the Spanish Monarchy as their forces halted the march toward Madrid to fortify positions against the danger of surprise flank attacks by Government troops.

Only a few days of jockeying for position and realignment of troop movement remain, Fascist military leaders said, before the big push upon the Spanish capital begins.

Discussion of the Monarchy was coincidental with the appointment of General Francisco Franco as supreme commander of the Fascist forces and the Dictator of the Madrid Government is successful.

Franco's position seemed strengthened as discord predicted by some factions failed to develop among the Fascists, Carlists and Liberal monarchists.

The likelihood of Carlist dissension was regarded as lessened by the death of the aged pretender, Prince Alfonso Carlos of Bourbon.

Fascist leaders at Burgos have announced their intention first to establish a military dictatorship and then to call a plebiscite with a view to restoration.

Police Active As Communists And Fascists Clash

"Kill Mosley!", some of the crowd shouted in derision for Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of the Fascist group.

Nearly 500,000 persons were in the demonstration, it was estimated unofficially, police halted the planned Fascist parade after fighting broken out at a centre point and threatened to spread.

The demonstrators erected barricades at some points along the route of the abandoned parade, and many gave the Communist salute as the Fascists assembled near the tower.

Police who carried away a screaming, kicking girl met a shower of bricks from rooftops. Firecrackers were hurled under mounted officers' horses. Shop windows and street car windows were smashed. One truck was overturned by the anti-Fascists.

Communists, Independent Labor party adherents and Jewish Ex-servicemen marched between escorts of police to repeated cries directed toward the Fascists "they small not pass." Mosley, carrying the Union Jack, drove along the Fascist ranks. A missile fell near him as he alighted from his car and policemen seized the assailant.

Decision to stop the Fascist parade followed telephone appeals to the Home Office by the former secretary of the Independent Labor party, Fenner Brockway.

It was understood the Home Secretary, Sir John Simon, directed Scotland Yard to order the Fascist leaders to abandon the parade.

"Simon's turned yellow" the Fascist shouted. "What about the Rights of Free Speech?"

Fifty three persons were arrested, scores were treated for minor wounds. About a dozen were injured more seriously, police reported.

Mosley, after he agreed to postpone the parade accused the Government of surrendering to "a red terror" and described the events of the day as a clear indication of the necessity for Fascism in Britain.

Madrid, Insurgent commanders here said that the northern General Emilio Mola was ready to push forward as soon as General Franco gives the word.
