MAN WHO SUED FOR $1,500,000

DEAD
 Angus McIntosh, 51, who brought a $1,500,000 suit against Homewood Sanitarium in Guelph, in 1938, alleging forcible detention, died suddenly of natural causes in an ambulance en route to hospital in Hamilton. Mr. McIntosh alleged he had been wrongfully detained at the Homewood Sanitarium from 1934 to 1936. He was a prominent witness at a provincial inquiry into the sanitarium's methods in 1938. McIntosh's suit was tried at Hamilton, where a supreme court jury in 1941 awarded him $387,544, the largest jury award ever made to an individual in Ontario courts. The award was later voided and an action for conspiracy against Dr. Harvey Clare, superintendent of Homewood Sanitarium, was also dismissed.

DON'T IGNORE TANTRUMS OF TEMPER

What a fury of anger must assail the younger child who is capable of beating his head on the floor in revolt against orders or demands from his parents says Myrtle Meyer Edred.

It is wise to be respectful of that fury. He is being driven to it and it is unfair to turn away and ignore him.

Some children. It is true, feel more strongly than others about being made to behave in certain ways. They resent commands, demands and punishments. But a parent cannot afford to ignore situations which call out such violent reactions. To ignore the child does nothing to end the emotion. It happens, almost always, that if the parent studies the situation which arouses fury in the child, she will find that she can alter them. It may be that she thinks of herself as being sweetly reasonable yet she may be just as demanding as if she were bad-tempered. She may be doing the right thing, but her reason may be wrong. It may be that she is not giving the child more liberty, of trying to see his side of a question. She will adopt a different reasonableness, one that does not determine that she alone is right and the child wrong.

When a child feels that the parent is compromising, is endeavoring to uphold his rights and privileges, there is no reason whatever to give way to helpless rage. This is the wisest way to combat a situation which is devastating to the child and eventually to the parent. Temper tantrums should be looked upon as the result of what happens to the child, not an inborn disposition to be a young hellion.
