Lady Tweedsmuir Will Continue Her Writing

OTTAWA, March 13 (CP)—Lady Tweedsmuir, soon to return to her home at Elfield, Eng., is arranging for the printing of a volume which will contain more than 100 speeches made by Lord Tweedsmuir during the years he was Governor-General of Canada. These speeches were made after careful preparation. The volume likely will be printed late in the year after Lord Tweedsmuir's memoirs have been published. After publication of the memoirs and speeches, Lord Tweedsmuir's last novel, based on some of his experiences in Canada and written around the fictional character, Sir Edward Leblond, will be printed. It is understood here that Lady Tweedsmuir will devote much of her time at Elfield to writing, already having published a number of books, some of them for children. One of her best known works was "The Scent of Water," dealing with the depressed mining areas of Wales. She lived in mining areas to gather material for the book. Mrs. L. A. Killick, Lord Tweedsmuir's personal secretary, will remain with Lady Tweedsmuir.

Governor General's Cook Prefers Canada

OTTAWA, March 13 (CP)—Miss Barbara Jackson, head cook at Government House, is going home to England shortly and today she admitted that she was reluctant to leave Canada. Miss Jackson came to Ottawa nine years ago with the staff of the former Governor-General, Lord Bessborough.

Her greatest thrill was experienced last May when she supervised preparation of the meals for the King and Queen when they stayed at Government House. With the death of Lord Tweedsmuir and the pending departure for England of Lady Tweedsmuir, Government House will be maintained by a small caretaking staff until a new Governor-General arrives. "I want to come back," Miss Jackson said. "I like it here, so I have applied for re-employment."

Miss Jackson's home is in Cumberland and in the North of England. In 1917 she travelled from England to Canada and thence to Australia to take a post at Government House in Perth.

CHEAP STAIRS POOR ECONOMY

To build a cheap stairway is expensive, but to build anything but a good stairway is unwise and therefore poor economy. The stairs in the house are so important from the standpoint of both use and decoration that if an extravagance (if you can call it that) is excusable anywhere in the house it is here. For the results of poor stair building are many, aggravating and conspicuous. They cannot be concealed from anyone passing up or down. Squeaky or sagging treads, loose hand rails or newels, rattling balusters, open joints, all are the result of improper construction. In a properly built stair the wall string (that perpendicular member at the wall against which the treads and risers butt) is cut so that the treads and risers slip in from the back. The grooves into which they fit are tapered so that wedges can be put in, driven up tight, and glued to hold them securely in place. The treads and risers are interlocked where they meet by means of a tongue and groove.

Dixie Handicap Is Anyone's Race

BALTIMORE, March 11 (AP)—The great Seabiscuit out of the picture, Pimlico's $20,000 Dixie Handicap May 8—became as a "dream race"—resolved today into a thoroughbred scramble. It will be Maryland's own Challeon against the field. Until owner C. S. Howard announced the "Biscuit's" retirement, hopes of horsemen were high that the 36th running of the D.X.E. would be Challeon 1939 "horse of the year" against the greatest money-winner of all time. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, president of the Maryland Jockey Club, announced some 50 topnotch racers were eligible for the opening day feature, and fans salvaged some pleasure from the situation when they found Kayak 2nd was one of them.

Paris Smiles For Soldiers Coming-Going

PARIS, March 12 (CP)—Probably nowhere in Paris is the war so evident as in the railway stations. A year ago tantalizing posters displayed the beauties of the Savoy, the Alps and the Pyrenees, accompanied by seductively low prices for a week of ski or 10 days of sun at Cannes or Nice on the Mediterranean. Today a few of these faded posters still hang in the Parisian stations but most of them have been covered by new ones calling for buyers of armament bonds, of huge signs stating frankly that the stations have become the exclusive property of the soldier. The East Station is the most characteristic, for it is from here the soldiers leave for the front and the "permissibles" arrive on leave. Entering at any hour of the day or night uniforms of every description are to be seen. The dull blue lights and gleams on the mud-covered boots of steel helmets. There is much laughter and some tears; there are bright red signs and arrows pointing to canteens, barber-shops, dormitories; there are special price, special services, special privileges for the "military"; there are the dark blue veils and active hands of the nurses, the anxious eyes of women. Soldiers Exclusively But the Montparnasse station is more interesting in a smaller scale. The Red Cross nurse in charge accompanied me, for a large sign above the doors leading to the soldiers' "oyer" says sternly "No Women admitted." In the colossal outside hall with its tobacco and magazine stands and ticket offices along the walls, a partition has been thrown up enclosing a floor-space about 100 feet square, within are a kitchen, dining-hall and reading room. Beneath on the next floor is a similar dormitory. The exterior is decorated with the draped flags of France, Poland and Great Britain. Inside the walls are decorated with modern murals—painted by the pupils between 15 and 18 years of age of a girls' art school. The work is particularly good and represents the historic, comic and fantasy "Anastasia" (censorship) with her large pair of scissors and long nose fills one corner; the soldiers of the three countries in the uniforms of the different periods depict the evolution of war; other scenes bring the freshness of flowers, the dance and landscape. One wall is devoted to Paris at night—and out of the darkness only the Eiffel Tower, a few stars and the moon are visible. A soldier can buy a good meal for six francs (15 cents) and he is home here. They may do as they like. A shave costs them 50 centimes (about one cent) and a haircut four cents. Hundreds are served daily, for when the men come home on leave most of them must pass through Paris. This climaxed their expenses almost totally. The Red Cross nurse said they did everything for the soldiers, from preparing their meals to writing their love letters. CAPE TOWN (CP)—Systematic robbing of spare wheels from Cape Town motor cars followed by arrests of some of the thieves, led to one policeman having 25 wheels awaiting owners.
