One of the most common and most difficult problems that the woman who is doing the courting has to deal with is to lure the man who is altar-shy into saying "I will." He camps in her parlor chairs. He monopolizes her time and interest. He eats her food. He talks about love. But he never mentions marriage. While the poor girl breaks her heart with longing for a wedding ring.

Perhaps the modern girl will have enough spunk to call time on these deadbeat lovers and tell them to put up, or shut up. If she lacks the nerve to do this, her best bet is to absent herself and let Romeo find out how lonesome he is without her.

Of course, different cases call for the use of different techniques, and whether, when a girl asks a man to be hers, he blushes and says, "This is so sudden," and he never dreamed that she thought of him that way, or whether he declines with thanks, depends upon the skill with which she makes her approach. But the vain man can still be flattered into marriage. Widowers still fall for the girls who put on the maternal act. And plenty of men can't say "no" to the girl who tells them that she can support them in the style in which their mothers have always done.

These are old tactics which women have always used in getting husbands, but now they are using them in the open instead of under cover.

Ellen's Diary

By an Island Farmer's Wife

Do you mind that evening when you and Ellen were at the school-raising?" I heard James ask her and then there was a ripple of laughter. "There" I said to James, as the car rolled out of sight down the lane "goes another successful Islander abroad."

* * *

And after an absence, which has been taken up by intensive work in the potatoes— cultivating and spraying, as well as at the sawing at the mill, Mr. C. from the house on the hill has been "kaleying" with James in the kitchen. There was much "shop" talk and then when James went to the verandah to see him off, I could hear him say: "I guess if it's fine we'll go again tomorrow". Then it behooves me to put away my writting and betake myself to an uncrowded bed.

Until tomorrow. . . Diary. . . Good-night. . . .

Headley Downs Probe Discussed

OTTAWA, Aug. 20 — (CP) — M.J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, said today he had advised N.M. Leo Rolfe of Halifax, president of the Maritime command of the Association of Veterans of Foreign Wars, "it doesn't seem possible to proceed further" with the latter's proposal of an official probe into charges of cruelty against Canadian soldiers who served sentences in the Headley Downs detention barracks in Surrey, England.

He was commenting on a dispatch from Halifax last week which quoted Rolfe as saying Mr. Coldwell had informed him Defence Minister Abbott was "agreeable" to appointment of a parliamentary committee to investigate the charges.

Mr. Coldwell quoted to a reporter from the letter he sent Mr. Rolfe July 25. In it he quoted Mr. Abbott as telling him that he was not disposed to object to establishment of a commission to inquire into the allegations "should it be practical and necessary."

"But," said Mr. Coldwell, "I pointed out, too, that Mr. Abbott said the soldiers involved had been found and interviewed and none of them was willing to have his case made public because the publicity would have an adverse effect on his civilian employment."

Should Revert To Kilted Regiments

OTTAWA, Aug. 20 — (CP)— "Battle rompers" may be all right for active service but if the Canadian army wants to attract recruits, particularly to reserve units, it should revert to kilted regiments Maj. Leslie Mutch (L—Winnipeg South) said tonight in the Commons.

Major Mutch, who in the early days of the war wore his kilts in the House, said it was not enough that men should be allowed to wear kilts for walking out dress.

"There's something about it that appeals to those with Scotch blood; that every one else laughs at; that everyone else admires and that every one else tries to crawl into when the time comes to recruit," he said.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of my grandfather, Daniel Ross, who was killed at Borden on August 22, 1944.
Two years have passed and gone,
Since one we loved so much
Was taken from our home on earth
With Jesus Christ to dwell,
The flowers placed upon your grave
Will wither and decay,
But the wonderful love that is in my heart
Will never fade away.
Inserted by his grandson,
GORDON MacKENZIE.

A special feature on the program, namely, "Agricultural Films" by the National Film Board which by force of circumstances were not displayed at the Alliston Field Day, will form an interesting feature of the 1947 program. Canadian Exports Show Increase

Exports to the United States in July were $74,759,029, compared with $66,491,342 in June and $102,702,562 in July, 1945.

Among other British Empire countries, substantial gains were recorded in shipments to Newfoundland at $4,756,929, compared with $3,698,246; Jamaica, $2,481,216 against $1,442,221; Trinidad and Tobago, $1,909,347, compared with $1,131,229; while lesser gains were shown in exports to Bermuda, British Guiana, Barbados, Malta and several other lesser markets.

Yugoslav Stowaway Has Case Remanded

Discovered yesterday before he was able to hide himself aboard the ship, Anton Makovitch told the court he had "escaped from Yugoslavia."

"They have killed all my family and they wanted to kill me," he added.

Makovitch successfully stowed away at Naples aboard the Empress of Australia and reached Liverpool last Friday. He faces charges of landing in Britain without permission.

The case was remanded.

Visits P. E. Island From Newfoundland

A pleased visitor to the Island is Mr. H.J. Wyatt, of St. John's, Newfoundland, who has been taking in Old Home Week and renewing many old friendships here. Mr. Wyatt is a native of Highfield, P.E.I. but has been a resident for the past sixty-four years of St. John's, where he is president of the Wyatt Coal and Salt Company, Ltd., and is also Vice Consul for Spain in Newfoundland. He has held the latter office for many years, and has made frequent trips to Spain in the course of his consular duties.

A nephew of Mrs. Donald Nicholson, Charlottetown, Mr. Wyatt has many relatives throughout this Province, which he takes every opportunity of revisiting.

Discussing recent developments in Newfoundland, Mr. Wyatt said he believed that if a poll of all the people was taken there would be a majority in favor of retaining Commission government, with perhaps a larger representation of Newfoundland members on the Commission. Under the present setup, three Commissioners are appointed by the United Kingdom and three by Newfoundland. The new Governor, Sir Gordon Macdonald, is chairman of the Commission, and has already created a favorable impression. The vice chairman, Sir John C. Puddester, has shown much ability and conscientiousness. With a surplus last year of several million dollars, Newfoundlanders feel that the Commission is giving sound business administration and many of them would be hesitant to exchange their present status either for self government or for union with Canada. The Convention recently elected has authority to make recommendations to the United Kingdom government as to the possible forms of government to put before the people in a national referendum. One of the strongest advocates for confederation with Canada in the convention is Mr. Joseph Smallwood, whose grandfather, Mr. Wyatt believes, was a Prince Edward Islander.

Mr. Wyatt paid a call on His Honour Lieutenant Governor Bernard a few days ago, and was very hospitably received. He thought Old Home Week could be improved by having some afternoon devoted to an informal reception for visitors at Government House. Many former Islanders and other visitors, he suggested were not particularly interested in the horseracing or livestock but would greatly appreciate an opportunity of meeting together and of shaking hands with His Majesty's representative.

Mr. Wyatt has been very active in promoting sport and for the past twenty-three years has been president of the Guards Athletic Association, largest organization of its kind in Newfoundland, which has sent athletic teams at various times to England, the United States and Canada.

Will Ask For Trusteeship Of Palestine

By ED CREAGH

LONDON, Aug. 20—(AP)—Britain will ask the United Nations for sole trusteeship over Palestine, a well-qualified government source said today, and there were immediate indications the move would touch off a widespread diplomatic battle for control of the strategic Holy Land.

Arab sources in London said the Arab countries surrounding Palestine would press instead for complete independence of the tiny country—and it was suggested that Egypt would ask for trusteeship if the independence move failed.

Diplomatic quarters said Russia, which long has urged that Britain get out of Palestine and let Jews and Arabs settle their own problems, could be expected to oppose British trusteeship. The United States, building an oil pipeline across Palestine, could be expected to favor it, they added.

While the Jewish agency for Palestine made no official comment, a spokesman said Holy Land Jews would not oppose United Nations discussion of the trusteeship and would accept any regime that gave them "a fair share" of control over immigration and certain other matters.

The official who disclosed Britain's plan said it was necessary because the British League of Nations mandate for Palestine expired with the League.

British conferences with Arab League representatives on Palestine's future will begin early in September, a foreign office spokesman said today.

Britain's determination to stay in Palestine emphasized the growing importance of the Holy Land in the middle east strategic picture, particularly if—by withdrawing from Egypt—Britain loses both her Alexandria naval base and her access by land to the Suez Canal.

HALIFAX, Aug. 20 — (CP) — Alistair Fraser, vice-president in charge of traffic of the Canadian National Railways, said in an interview tonight it was not feasible under present-day conditions to cut the running time of the Ocean Limited which travels between Montreal and Halifax.

Mr. Fraser said the railroad's traffic department had studied the Maritime set-up recently and found that no further reduction in running time was possible. Under summer timetables he said 30 minutes had already been cut off "intermediate passenger traffic, and express and mails" presented the obstacle.

The C.N.R. official is in Halifax on an inspection trip.

(Frank T. Stanfield, Progressive Conservative M.P. for Colchester-Hants, had asked in Commons Saturday that the Ocean Limited running time be cut to 20 or 21 hours leaving the express, mail and smaller stops to other trains on the Halifax-Montreal run.)

Search Continues For Missing Man

(By The Canadian Press)

ST. MARTINS, N. B., Aug. 20—Missing for two days and a night, Fred Bennett, 60, was still being sought tonight by search parties working under an R.C.M.P. constable.

Bennett, who was reported suffering from heart trouble, left his home Monday morning for Bayview, a mile and a half distant, to harvest a hay crop. He took a lunch with him. When he had not returned at supper time, his wife became alarmed and reported his absence.

Inquiry disclosed he had not arrived at Bayview. A neighbor said he had seen Bennett walking on the Vaughan Creek road, which runs north of the village.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett came here three years ago from Waterford, Kings County. Inquiry disclosed he did not go there or to his native village of Alma, Albert County.

Police had planned to use a dog in the search but heavy rain made this useless.

MY AVIATOR

I am wafting to you "Happy Landings"
As you skim like a flash, thru' the blue
To conquer the night's myriad shadows
By your faith, as your course you pursue.

You will smile at the stars, as they beckon,
While the girth of the world you will span
As you sit like a silver winged angel
In the heart of a bird built by man.

You will thrill to the whir of the motors,
As the wind madly sings a refrain,
And tho' dank, swirling clouds frown a warning
You will zoom to the days dawn of flame.

You have proven man's grandest achievement
As you flirt with the scraggy tree tips,
While I stand in enchantment, still feeling
The impress of your kiss on my lips.

—Mary Catherine Christy.

OTTAWA, Aug. 20 — (CP) — Lt.-Col. Hugues Lapointe, parliamentary assistant to Defence Minister Abbott, said last night in the Commons the Brigade group proposed for the permanent army would include 7,260 men with the remainder of the total force of 25,000 fulfilling various duties at various points in the country. These would include engineers, signals, medical and workshop detachments.

Mobilization of the force in various parts of the country was the only way it could be organized. It would later be brought together for training.

Wing Cmdr. Lawrence Skey (PC—Toronto Trinity) asked if Brigade group was to be airborne, and Col. Lapointe said it was proposed to train the Brigade in airborne operations in co-operation with the R.C.A.F.

Elaborating on co-ordination training of the Brigade group, he said Wainwright and Camp Borden were being considered for winter and summer training grounds.

Lt. Col. Cecil Merritt, V.C. (PC—Vancouver Burrard) asked for a definition of the purpose of Canada's peacetime army.

Mr. Abbott said it was intended the army should be representative of all branches as a permanent professional army which would be a basis for training a citizen army in time of war. Its size would obviously mean it would not be highly effective as a fighting force by itself. The policy was intended to be a flexible one.

Col. Merritt said he understood the Reserve Army was not getting enough recruits. He urged that Reserve Army men be paid better and more frequently.

Mr. Abbott said the "important role of the N.P.A.M." couldn't be overestimated. It had been the backbone of the army in two wars and would be again in any future war.

Reserve pay would be the same in ratio as for the permanent force. So far there was adequate equipment but accommodation was short. Storage space was short for mechanized equipment. Building shortages increased the problem.
