

NESTLÉ'S EVAPORATED MILK

(UNSWEETENED)
is easy to digest

By a process called homogenization, the large fat globules have been broken up into tiny ones—easy to digest and assimilate. That's one reason why Canadian mothers find NESTLÉ'S Evaporated Milk so satisfactory for infant feeding and for growing children.

The DOOM TRAIL

We walked in the water for more than a mile, when the stream turned to the north and we stepped out upon a rock and dressed. Afterward we caught the overhanging bough of a tree and swung ourselves onto dry ground above the bank, never leaving a trace of our course up to that time. From this point we traveled on through the forest, pursuing no settled path, but holding to the westward in the direction of Oswego on the shore of the Cadarakul lake.

We did not stop until after midnight. Ta-wan-ne-ars knocked over a wild turkey with his tomahawk, kindled a fire of dry sticks and broiled the juicy bird before the coals. He insisted that I should sleep first, promising to arouse me at the end of two hours—he reckoned time, I should explain, by the declension of the sun. But when he finally did arouse me the sun was close to setting, and I saw by the sunken look of his eyes that he had not slept during his watch.

"Why did you not wake me?" I asked angrily.

"Ta-wan-ne-ars had no wish for sleep," he returned.

"Nonsense," I retorted. "You cannot go indefinitely without rest." "I had my thoughts for company," he said simply. "They are not happy thoughts, brother. They would not let me sleep. Your search is ended, brother," he added.

"What do you mean?" "The soul you sought has been found. It is no longer sick." "Mayhap," I agreed, "but none the less 'tis out of reach and in great danger."

"We shall save it," he encouraged me. "Ta-wan-ne-ars knows. We must wait. The time will come."

He refused again to sleep, and we ate the remainder of the turkey—our hunger was prodigious—and pushed on, traveling most of the night. Not once did we see a trace of the Keepers, and when we halted Ta-wan-ne-ars said that we were on the marches of the hunting grounds of the Mohawks.

In the late morning we killed a rabbit, broiled and ate it and tramped the virgin forest until long past sunset. The following afternoon we caught our first view of the inland sea from a height of land, and the next morning we sighted the stockade at Oswego, the fort which Governor Burnet had established on the shores of the lake in his effort to divert the far-western fur trade from the French posts. The gate was closed, but as we approached it opened, and an enormous, pot-bellied figure in buckskin and fur cap sauntered out to meet us.

"Ja, idt is you," Corlaer hailed us. "What has happened? I have come here to scout der Doom Trail and learn how you died—and you are alive!"

So we told him, whilst the lieutenant in command of the post and his garrison of twenty lusty frontiersmen gathered in a knot to listen over each other's shoulders.

"Budt—budt," expostulated Peter. "You have been in La Vierge du Bois!"

"True."

"Budt nobody has efer been in La Vierge du Bois—"

"And come out alive," I amended. "I fear many poor souls have been sacrificed by these fiendish priests."

Peter insisted upon our repeating the tale with all details and I believed he would have required a third account had it not been for the interruption which came during the afternoon.

We were sitting in the commandant's quarters on the upper floor of the blockhouse when the sentries on the stockade announced a large fleet of canoes approaching from the west. The lieutenant promptly issued orders to get out the trade goods, and prepared for an impressive reception of the savages, deeming them emissaries of some tribe to exchange their fur catch of the winter.

But the leading canoe held on past the fort, and none of them which followed gave indication of intent to steer inshore.

"Hafe you a canoe?" asked Corlaer of the bewildered lieutenant. "Ja? Well, my friend; and I will go and ask what this means."

We launched the canoe from the water-gate, and with Peter and Ta-wan-ne-ars at the paddles, sped out into the lake. Some distance from shore we overhauled the rear squadron of the fleet, every canoe loaded with packages of furs.

"Ho, brothers," called Ta-wan-ne-ars. "The chief of the English fort, who commands here in the name of Ga-ne-gwa-ra-go, invites you to come ashore and trade with him."

Up stood a large, stout man with lank black hair, dressed in the uniform of the French marine troops, who had been ensconced behind a bale of furs.

"Ha, 'tis my friend from Arles," he shouted. "and his companion, the noble war chief! So the Keepers did not keep you?"

"No, Monsieur de Joncaire," I replied. "We are still alive to plague you."

"Ventre St. Remi, 'tis not sorry I am! Try it again, my lad. Only try it again!"

"What are you doing with these people?"

He roared with laughter. "No more than shepherding them past the temptations of the English!"

Ta-wan-ne-ars called again to the Indians in the canoes.

"Come ashore, brothers. We have rich goods to trade with you."

ANOTHER POMPEIAN GIRL

AFTERNOON TEA, people Dick had never seen before, and then—the one girl, the girl of his dreams! They met, she smiled at him—feminine—glamorous—wholly desirable. That was the beginning—Tam's secret is simple—she was another Pompeian Girl. It is your right—your privilege to make yourself as desirable as Tam.

For years beauty specialists have been perfecting Pompeian products—until today, while it is possible to pay more, it is impossible to buy better. His paddiers dipped their blades, and his bellows of laughter were wafed back to us as his canoe followed the fur argoxy down the lake toward the French posts on the St. Lawrence—posts whose magazines were already beginning to swell with the life-blood of English

CHAPTER XI

We Meet Red Death and Black Death

"We must scout the Doom Trail," I said as we carried the canoe through the water-gate and deposited it within the stockade. "I will write the governor at once of affairs at Jagara and La Vierge du Bois. But this last business make it necessary he should have sure intelligence of what passes to Canada." (To be Continued)

LIQUOR BANNED ON RAILROADS

MOSCOW, April 9.—Total prohibition has been decreed on all railroads in the Soviet Union as one of the measures for raising labor discipline in the transportation industry. Station restaurants and buffets have been forbidden to sell any sort of alcoholic drinks, including light wines and beer.

WE ARE ECONOMIC BARBARIANS

April 11th to May 1st

$1600 IN PRIZES

First Prize $500 cash Second Prize $250 cash Third Prize $100 cash

10 Prizes each of $50 cash
25 Prizes each of $10 credit
on the purchase of Dominion Oilcloth & Linoleum Co. products

How the Contest will be Judged

The eight eminent interior decorators whose pictures are shown above, have each been assigned one room and have chosen a pattern for it. Their selections are deposited with The Royal Trust Company, Montreal. Each interior decorator is in complete ignorance of the other seven selections. In fact, the complete choice cannot be known until the eight selections are withdrawn from The Royal Trust Company on May 7th.

Your eight-room selection will then be compared with the combined secret selection of the eight interior decorators. Selections coming closest to the eight interior decorators will win the first prize. The other prizes will be awarded in order. In event of ties, the prizes will be divided. Winners will be announced on June 1st.

This contest is a TEST of TASTE. Study each room carefully. Consider the colouring of drapes and furniture. Consider the nature of the room itself. Then, decide which pattern you would like best on the floor.

Look for a store with a Dominion Inlaid Linoleum or Floor Covering window display. There you can enter this Contest and obtain contest books.
