War Situation Last Night

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON, Associated Press War Analyst)

Moscow's claims that Russian lines below Voronezh and around the great Don bend to the rim of the vast salt marshes in the northeastern Caucasus are holding well seem confirmed even by the Nazi war bulletins; but Berlin reports another advance southwest of Salsk. It says a German "tank army" has pushed below Belaya Glinka to "approach the upper course of the Kuban River."

Berlin's mention of the upper course of the Kuban as an important objective leaves little doubt that the river plays a big part in Russian strategy. Moscow now reports that Cossacks of the Kuban as well as of the Don tribes are being thrown into action. They are the shock troops of the Red army of the Caucasus, reserved until now. The implication is that Marshal Timoshenko is preparing to make a stand on his left flank above or upon the Kuban, as his centre has breached from Salsk northeastward to the Don bend and his right along the Don to Voronezh.

The immediate danger point, however, is on the left-centre sector of his indicated line. The weak spot is east of the bend of the Kuban at Temijbekska. There is a 50 mile span of open steppe country there, suitable for mechanized operations, down which the Germans are driving in evident hope of turning the probable Russian front along the Kuban.

The Kuban River is an ultimate defence front not only because it covers the Maikop oil field, the only Caucasus oil source as yet in jeopardy; but because it also offers protection from a Nazi flanking move from the Crimea across narrow Kerch Strait.

Even should the Nazi thrust from Belaya Glinka reach the north or east bank of the Kuban in the vicinity of the bend, the river has strong defensive possibilities. Its defenders, facing northeastward below the bend and northward above it, would confront the foe with difficult barriers well served with roads and backed by the Caucasus foothills.

Southward, the terrain of the right bank, toward which the Germans are pressing, grows increasingly difficult. South of the Krasnodar-Stavropol railroad after it leaves the Kuban at Temijbekska to swing eastward southeasterly circle through the steppes, a confusion of small streams tributary to the Kuban drain the right bank.

Britain, 1942 - - People Keyed For Victory

(By Drew Middleton, Associated Press Staff Writer) LONDON, Aug. 3 (AP)—After nearly three years of war, Britain is like an army post in the front line, waiting efficiently within sight of the enemy and amid rumbles of battles now past but not easily forgotten.

Looking at the face of Britain in this dangerous summer of 1942, but find neither the "merrie England" of childhood nor a nation weary of war and work.

Most of the holiday travellers were flouting national appeals to "holiday at home."

Take a look at Britain's fishing and shipping ports on the northeast coast. Grimsey men were not driven from the seas by the invincible armada of the frigates of Napoleon and the German.

They shot up locomotives of several freight trains and hit damage caused in important industrial areas and big fires burning 12 hours after the bombing.

The publishers were addressed in the forenoon by Labor Minister Mitchell, who told them of the manpower situation. Later E. M. Little, director of National Selective Service, explained plans for meeting the situation.

The meeting continued in the afternoon when a general discussion ensued among the publishers and officials of the selective service organization.

Chaloult Acquitted

MONTREAL, Aug. 3 (CP)—Judge Edouard Archambault, in Court of Sessions of the Peace, today freed Rene Chaloult, Labour member of the Quebec Legislative Assembly, of charges laid under the Defence of Canada Regulations. The charges against Chaloult arose out of a speech made here on May 19.

Article 39 of the Defence of Canada Regulations, provides that "it shall be a defence to any prosecution to prove that the person accused intended in good faith to point out errors or defects in the government of Canada."

Of Position In Caucasus

GERMANS CONTINUE TO THROW HEAVY RESERVES INTO BATTLE IN SOUTH.

(By Henry C. Cassio, Associated Press Staff Writer) MOSCOW, Aug. 4 (Tuesday) — (AP)—Soviet troops fighting in the Don River elbow 80 miles northwest of Stalingrad and in the Salsk-Kushechka area of the western Caucasus were reported officially early today to have killed more than 9,500 Germans in a successful 24-hour stand.

In the area of Kletskaia northwest of Stalingrad the midnight communique said, two Russian units killed more than 1,900 Germans, and added that the Red peasant army still was dealing "counter blows against enemy tanks and motorized infantry."

Southwest of Kletskaia in the Timlyansk area of the curving Don, the Russians said the Germans still were throwing tanks and men across the river but the communique indicated the Soviets are standing firm.

"On one of these sectors," the communique said, "the Germans threw into battle several dozen tanks. The Germans lost up to 650 officers and men killed alone."

In the critical Salsk-Kushechka areas, 75 and 50 miles respectively south of the Don, the lines apparently were swaying back and forth. The communique said 400 Germans were killed in the Salsk region, and another 800 in the Kushechka sector.

"During the day one big pocket changed hands three times," the communique said of the Kushechka fighting. This toll of 3,150 Nazi dead

2nd Front Grips Russian Interest

Associated Press Staff Writer MOSCOW, Aug. 3 (AP)—Throughout Moscow, Ivan Ivanov, the Russian counterpart of John Jones—read an increasing display of "second front" news from Britain and the United States today seemingly with greater interest than anything else in his newspapers.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda carried on its foreign news page five stories on the possibility of a second European front and although the foreign news section is the back and not the front page of Moscow's four-page newspaper, it was this section to which readers were quickly attracted.

A favorite item seemed to be the story of the telegrams reported received by President Roosevelt urging creation of a new western front.

One of Pravda's articles, entitled "Hitler and his allies," dealt at length with the diversion of German reserves and the troops of Germany's vassal states to the Russian front, and declared: "This serves further to weaken the European rear of Hitlerite Germany."

"More than ever before it is necessary to exert and merge all the efforts of participants in the anti-Hitler front in order to thwart Hitler's bloodthirsty gamble and his plan of conquest."

In London a British military commentator said many German divisions had been moved from France and the Low Countries, exclusive of troops on guard in Norway.

Pravda said Hitler also had drawn heavily upon the troops of his Axis satellites Rumania, Hungary, Italy and Finland, and had withdrawn occupation forces from Yugoslavia and Crete that had been intended as reinforcements for Field Marshal Erwin Rommel in Africa.

The News Agency Tass distributed a dispatch dated lined Geneva which said German talk of strong forces capable of repelling invasion, Italy and Finland, and had withdrawn occupation forces from Yugoslavia and Crete that had been intended as reinforcements for Field Marshal Erwin Rommel in Africa.
