

The "Flu" LEFT HER WITH A VERY WEAK HEART

Mrs. Beulah Demone, Pleasant River, N.S., writes:—"Having suffered with the 'flu' a few years ago, I was left with a very weak heart.

"I was unable to go about, and could not do my housework.

"I would get dizzy spells and would have to go and lie down.

"I could not sleep at night as the least little noise would wake me up.

"I tried different kinds of medicine, but they seemed to do me no good.

"Jealous Hearts"

By MILDRED BARBOUR

THE DEATH-BLOW

Millicent drove homeward slowly through a countryside flushed and fragrant with the breath of summer. From the distance, she heard the whistle of the train that was bearing Tony away from her.

Her pretty mouth tightened until there was no trace left of its winsome curve. She resolutely winked back the tears that threatened.

"It's not worth crying over," she reminded herself bitterly. "If he cared for me, I could wait. He won't see him again for months and months, but, as it is—I haven't really the right to cry. No more right than I had before we were married."

Her bitterness was not assuaged by having Aunt Het say, when she'd dropped in at Carver Hall for tea: "Such a pity Tony didn't take you with him! It would have been such a nice trip."

Millicent sipped her tea in silence, and Aunt Het's sister, the ever-tactless, made matters worse by chucking: "Pshaw, Het! You don't think young men like to take their wives with them when they're planning on a wild time in Paris, do you?"

Aunt Het's warning look was quite lost upon her, and Millicent went away shortly afterward.

It was the first time that anyone had put into words the thought that had been puzzling and distressing her ever since the day Tony had announced his intention of going to Europe with the polo-team.

Just why hadn't Tony suggested that she come, too?

Surely he must have known that she'd enjoy a trip abroad. The year of their marriage had been very quiet for her, except for the seasonal hospitalities that were a part of life at Lynnwood. She had really observed mourning rather punctiliously for Dan Carver. Her youth, despite her unhappiness and disillusion, was craving its own. For some reason, she thought bitterly, Tony hadn't wanted her to go to Europe with him.

"As if I would have bothered him, or prevented his having a good time!" Her mouth was twisted painfully as she recalled how he had hastened to Elinor, whenever she had summoned him, without a word of reproach from herself.

The following day she learned what she believed was Tony's reason for not wanting her in Europe that summer. Elinor's telegram arrived. It said, with characteristic brevity: "Sailing for Europe today."

No mention of the ship.

There were several sailings that day. Millicent waited stonily until the newspapers arrived the following morning. In the list of passengers on "The Fleuretania" was Elinor's name; a few lines below it was Tony's. There was also a picture of Elinor, posed in front of the life-boat, with roses in her arms, and her famous smile mocking the beholder.

There was no doubt whatever in Millicent's mind that Tony knew Elinor was to sail for Europe, that they had planned the whole thing when he was in New York. Now she knew why he had not asked her to go with him.

Millicent burned the papers in the empty fireplace, jabbing viciously with the fire-tongs the picture of Elinor.

Then she sat, for a long time, staring at the ashes. They seemed to her symbol. The lone wife beside the cold hearth! The ashes of love and happiness!

The last flicker of the old Millicent that had clung tenaciously to life while there was a scrap of hope.

NOTICE

Owners and Operators of Motor Vehicles

Please take notice that registrations and operator's licenses issued during 1927 expired on 30th April, 1928.

Warning is hereby given that licenses will be cancelled for the following reasons:

1. Operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor.
2. Reckless and furious driving.
3. Passing at high speed a stationary or moving vehicle.
4. Swerving to the left when turning a corner.
5. Passing a vehicle travelling in the same direction when view in front is not clear for at least fifty yards.
6. Passing a car when nearing the top of a hill.
7. Failure to give half the road to a passing vehicle.
8. Failure to stop when signalled by an Inspector under the Motor Vehicle Act.

The public will take notice that the provisions of Section 69 of the Motor Vehicle Act will be strictly enforced. For guidance of all concerned the Section is printed hereunder:

Sec. 69. In the event of any person holding a chauffeur's or an operator's license contravening any of the provisions of this Act by reason of reckless or negligent driving or by reason of the use of intoxicants or for any other reason becoming, in the opinion of the Secretary, unfit to act as a chauffeur or operator, the Secretary shall upon proof of his satisfaction or the fact or existence of such contravention or unfitness and without the necessity of holding any formal or public or other hearing, either cancel the license of such chauffeur or operator absolutely or suspend the same and all the rights of the licensee thereunder for such period as the Secretary may think fit. In the event of cancellation of license all the rights of the licensee thereunder shall forthwith abate and cease absolutely.

Tryon Tid-Bits

The Baptist Parsonage, Bedeque, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on Wednesday afternoon, May 9th when Mrs. Gertrude Mac-Vitie of Crapaud became the wife of Mr. James W. Morrison, of North Tryon. After the ceremony the happy couple motored to Borden, where they left by the Carvery steamer on a short wedding trip to Sidney. They arrived home on Thursday the 17th, and motored to Crapaud where a throng of friends awaited them to wish them many happy years together.

Mrs. Max Lefurgey left on Saturday for the U. S., called there by the illness of her father, who is seriously ill at his home near Buffalo, New York.

On Saturday evening the North Tryon Hockey and Athletic Club presented a very nice concert in Tryon Hall. The programme was mainly a musical one, consisting of solos, duets, etc., with an occasional recitation. The Crapaud Orchestra was present and needless to say helped in no small way to make a success of the entertainment. Hoping to be desired the audience was small, so small indeed, that the club will have barely enough to cover their last year's deficit. It is hard for the boys to make a showing in hockey or any other sport when so few of the people are given their little or no support being given to athletics in this vicinity, and then they wonder why "our team" as they put it, cannot do better. Believe me, more pushers less knockers and the Tryon boys might have shown up better. As it is with no money on hand base ball and other sports are a sudden death, and next winter will we have hockey and skating? Well! I wonder, and it is not much wonder that I do.

Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Dawson, Summerside, were motorists to Tryon on Sunday.

Mr. Morley Bell and Mr. John H. Bell, Summerside, motored to Tryon on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. P. Waite, Summerside, spent Sunday with Mr. Waite's sister, Mrs. Lang, North Tryon.

The services at the different Tryon churches on Sunday were well attended and good sermons preached in all churches. In the morning in the United Church the pastor, Rev. Geo. Somers, was the speaker. In the afternoon at the Baptist Church Rev. R. C. Eaton of Charlottetown spoke and in the evening Mr. Bergon was the speaker, the service being in the Presbyterian Church. Thus with this arrangement one could easily be at all three services as many were.

New dear readers we are all growing older
And as age descends I trust wisdom ascends
Or in other words as we older grow may

IN MEMORIAM

MR. PATRICK DOWLING

On April 23, 1928, the people of Nine Mile Creek and vicinity heard with a feeling of deep regret of the visit in the early hours of the morning of the Angel of Death who claimed for his victim Mr. Patrick Dowling, well-known and respected resident of that community in the sixty-second year of his age.

The late Mr. Dowling was the devoted father of a family of seven, five of whom are still living, his wife, one son and one daughter having predeceased him by several years. He was a man of admirable character and the memory he has left behind in the minds of his family, relatives and of the many who had the pleasure to call him friend, will not soon fade.

Although he was in very poor health for quite a number of years, he bore his affliction with great patience and all through his long illness as well as at the hour of death was calmly resigned to the holy will of God.

He was a faithful member of the Holy Catholic Church, and was attended during his last illness by Rev. Father P. Walsh, who administered its last rites and who also conducted the funeral services at St. Martin's Church, South Shore, in the cemetery of which all that was mortal of a loving father was laid to rest on April 25th.

Following were the pall-bearers: J. J. Murphy, Peter Currie, Neil MacQuarrie, Michael Murphy, Daniel Smith and Joseph Doyle.

He leaves to mourn their loss three sons: Dennis and James at home, Vincent in Lynn, Mass., and two daughters, Marquette at home and Jennie in Cumberland, designs and set on thick stems, which oddly shaped leaves of the same material as the flowers. A composition metal is pressed on the suade, giving an open-work effect, through which the soft pastel shades of the leather petals look most attractive.

May his soul rest in peace.

From 500 tons of coal a Russian scientist claims to have obtained 2000 gallons of motor fuel, 6500 gallons of illuminating oil and 3000 gallons of lubricant.

Defying Nature, new suede sports flowers make no pretense of realism. In contradiction of all floral species, they are cut along angular lines. Like modernist designs and set on thick stems, which oddly shaped leaves of the same material as the flowers. A composition metal is pressed on the suade, giving an open-work effect, through which the soft pastel shades of the leather petals look most attractive.
