"Where did your wife spend the summer?"
"Abroad."
"And how about yourself?"
"Went into bankruptcy."

"They're very formal people. Very."
"How?"
"They actually try to maintain table manners at their summer cottage."

"How's your garden, old man?"
"It's simply out of sight."
"That's good."
"It's anything but good. The grass and weeds are a foot high all over it."

The Boss: If a customer knows what he wants, sell it to him. I know that a star salesman can always sell him something else, but I have the theory that it will pay just as well to sell him what he wants.

"My husband always puts ten cents on the plate on Sunday."

What the Gray House Hid

The mystery of a haunted mansion
by Woodham Martin

"Here's another puzzle!" said Douglas. "To complete the work in that time he must have worked many more men than you paid for. I know prices and labor scales in New York state. It amounts to this—he went up to you to get the very job you pressed on him. Why? Search me, Hanby—search me! Another thing—he must have paid for extra workmen out of his own pocket, so that he could get the work done by a certain time. Again you may search me!"
Hanby frowned.
"He may have wanted the workmen off the premises for some purpose of his own."
"What purpose?" Douglas asked.
"How should I know? By the way, did you ever deny permission to a former tenant, a Miss Selenos, to go back and dig something up from the garden?"
"I denied her right to do some excavation. Appleton told me she was a maniac who wanted to bomb the place. I turned it over to him. Anything in what he said?"
Hanby told him of the affair of Miss Selenos and her pets.
"I don't mind admitting that Appleton has destroyed a lot of my faith in mankind," Douglas said presently. "He was the one man I would have wagered my soul on as being square and white."
"Did you ever see the woman?"
"That was how it all came out. I ran out of gas near Mineola, and had to go to a very third-rate road-house. There was Appleton, in a neat tuxedo, doing fancy steps with a good looking ex-actress. I looked at him very hard. I couldn't believe it was he." Douglas laughed a little. "He had the d-d insolence to say that if I annoyed his lady friend by making baby eyes at her, he'd knock my block off. Next morning he didn't try to make excuses. He had a hang-over, and he told me much of what he had concealed since 1890 or thereabouts. It appeared that he had always hated me and envied me my good luck." Douglas grew almost irritable. "No more about Appleton, or I'll change my table!"
Hanby did not get back to the Gray house until late. He said a few words to the younger people and then asked Dina and Bill to come to the library.

"I've had a great day," he announced. "Incidentally I have discovered that my judgment of character is no better, let's say, than Bill's."
"And me a house detective!" Bill cried. "Your reason totters!"
"We've all been deceived but Les." "Les?" cried Dina. "Oh, Hil, you're joking! That boy!"
"Dina, light of my life," said Hanby, "if there is a more thorough-going old hellion than Mr. Frederick Danby Pickwick Appleton, let me learn his dishonored name. I've seen his Joan this afternoon, and I know what I'm talking about. Listen! I'll begin with what Douglas told me and then come to my interview with that poor crippled old woman."
"It seems impossible!" commented Dina, at the end of her husband's narrative.
"I begin to suspect myself," Bill murmured. "Appleton!"
"It took me that way when I first heard it, but it cannot be doubted. He came here to get the opportunity to be in and near this house, and to see what was going on. He has always been coming and going. I've heard something that may bear on it a little later. I got it from Mrs. Appleton. Her brother was a very rich man, but he speculated and died in poverty. There were a few years when it looked as if she was going to be his heiress; and Appleton was going to use the legacy to buy the Gray house and make it a fashionable roadhouse. He said there was a fortune in it. Fishing, golf, swimming—everything that was needed for a residential hotel. Perhaps 'roadhouse' isn't just what she meant, but that was Mrs. Appleton's term."
"But if her brother died in poverty, where would he get the money to buy this place?" Bill asked.
"I don't know. I admit that it doesn't solve the question why he should still be interested in it. There is no solution, so far as I see, and yet we know that something is going on here, or something is planned to go on, and that we stand in the way and they want to remove us. I wonder if we ought to consult the police!"
"And get all sorts of notoriety! Oh, Hil, don't think of it! Nothing has happened—not even a tramp."
"D-n it," said Hanby, "I'm a simple type. If I like people, I trust them absolutely. I go the limit for them, and they can have everything I've got. This gives me pause—whatever that means." He put his hand on his wife's arm. "Come and dance with me, Dillah, ere I challenge Bill to mortal combat!"
"Not a care in the world!" said Cella, a little later, watching her parents and talking intermittently to Les.
"Why should they have?" he answered. "Come to that, why should you have any cares?"
"Life bores me," the girl yawned.
"I talked like that in the beginning of my sophomore year. It used to make quite a hit. You've forgotten to ask what is life. I always did that."
"Les," she snapped. "I hate you! Your apperceptions are nebulous."
"That's a new one, I admit," he said. "I'll use it."
"To other girls?"
"Why not? If you won't have me, I must try my luck somewhere else."

"You have an attenuated soul substance, Les."
"Feed it with affection. It will expand."
"The main trouble with you is that you couldn't surprise me in any way. I know all your mental reactions. You never jump off the road. I could surprise you, Les, and I've a good mind to." Cella paused. "Perhaps I ought to tell you the whole romantic affair."
Leslie Barron looked at her, frowning. The word "romantic" spelled danger.
"Let the clutch in," he commanded.
"You are not the only man here," she said. "Last night, when you were playing pool with Bill, I went out to the swimming pool. It was midnight. I went out to pick some asphodel."
"What's that?"
"A romantic blossom to be found in most gardens of verse. Les, I met a most adorable, godlike man. He looked at me like a wild faun and then disappeared in clouds of star dust."
