

A VIEW OF THE DINING ROOM AT WHITE HOUSE

Famous White House WEDDINGS

ONE OF THE FOUR MARBLE MANTLES IN THE EAST ROOM BEFORE WHICH IT IS EXPECTED MISS ROOSEVELT WILL BE MARRIED

THE OLD WHITE HOUSE AS IT APPEARED AT THE TIME OF THE FIRST WHITE HOUSE WEDDING

There can be little doubt that the wedding of Miss Alice Roosevelt and Representative Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, will prove the most brilliant event in the history of the White House. A number of nuptial ceremonies have been held in the historic Presidential Mansion during the century that this famous home has focused the attention of the American people, but none have approached in significance or universal public interest the event which will draw the eyes of the world to the first residence of America in February of this year.

The first wedding in the White House took place in 1829, during the administration of President Monroe, when Miss Todd, a relative of Mrs. Monroe, was married to Mr. John G. Jackson, a congressman from Virginia.

The most famous early wedding in the White House took place on January 31, 1812, when Elizabeth, the third daughter of President and Mrs. Tyler, was married in the East Room to Mr. William Waller, of Williamsburg, Va. Mrs. Tyler, wife of the President, who was an invalid, was downstairs on the occasion of this wedding, but it was the only occasion during her life in Washington when she was present at a large gathering. It is an interesting coincidence that the oldest son of the White House bride was during the Civil War, married to the youngest sister of President Jefferson Davis, in the White House of the Confederacy, at Richmond.

President Tyler's first wife died at the White House, and he married while yet serving as president. However, Miss Julia Gardiner, his bride, was desirous of avoiding any undue demonstration, and the ceremony was performed quietly in New York City.

The sons of the nation's presidents have, in only a few instances, wedded while their fathers were serving as chief magistrate. John Adams, Jr. son of the President of that name, however, married in Washington during his father's administration, to Miss Helen, his mother's niece, and history records that the dignified President Adams danced the Virginia reel at the wedding. Col. Abraham Van Buren led Miss Angelica Singleton, of South Carolina, to the altar during his father's occupancy of the White House.

The second wedding in which a daughter of the White House was the bride was that of Nelly Grant.

It may be of further interest to note that Aaron Charles Frederick Sartoris was 24 years of age when he married Miss Grant, whereas Representative Nicholas Longworth, who has won the heart and hand of Alice Roosevelt, is 36 years of age. The Grant-Sartoris wedding took place on May 21, 1874. More than 200 guests were invited to the wedding, including leading officers of the Army and Navy and diplomats.

The ceremony was performed in the East room, where it is expected Miss Alice Roosevelt will be married.

The most important nuptial event at the White House between the wedding of Nelly Grant and the Englishman who had won her affections and the coming marriage of Miss Alice Roosevelt.
