TIME-HONORED PROVERBS
T. J. McInerney
It is difficult to find more glowing tributes to animals than those contained in proverbs. They are found not only in our own language, but in the Danish, Spanish, Portuguese, Sicilian, Chinese and others. Many of these proverbial sayings have come down to us through the centuries. The appeal of the proverb is its ability to literally speak volumes in a few words. A typical example is this time-honored proverb:

"A man of cruelty is God's enemy."
A wide variety of proverbs and axioms have been written about the dog. According to an old Chinese proverb, "The dog has no aversion to a poor family," and we know that there is no more truthful statement than that. There is a challenge as well as a rebuke in this one, from our own language: "He that strikes my dog would strike me if he durst."
The Spaniards of old obviously had their opinions concerning the proper feeding of dogs, for we find this among their ancient writings: "He who has not bread to spare should not keep a dog."
Here are some proverbs which perhaps are the most familiar: Money cannot buy the wag of a dog's tail.
The principal difference between a dog and a man is that if you pick up a starving dog and make him prosperous, he will not bite you. A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast.

IN MEMORIAM

MR. J.H.G. MURPHY
In the passing of John Hamilton Gray Murphy, whose death occurred in the Charlottetown Hospital Sunday, Charlottetown has lost one of its oldest, best known and highly respected citizens.
The late Mr. Murphy, who had reached the ripe old age of four score years and ten, was in his customary good health and about daily until about a month ago, when a fall sustained in his home necessitated his removal to the Charlottetown Hospital, where he received the best medical attention and attention. He failed to respond to treatment and peacefully passed away yesterday.
The late Mr. Murphy was born in DeSable, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy. As a young man he came to the city where he learned the barbering trade, after completing his apprenticeship he opened a business of his own which he conducted successfully until his retirement.
He was a great lover of horses and kept a number of speedy ones in his stables.
Of a quiet and unassuming disposition the late Mr. Murphy enjoyed a large circle of friends who will regret to learn of his passing.
He was a member of the Holy Name Society, the only organization to which he was attached.
He leaves to mourn, three daughters, Louise, of the Yvonne, Ann of the office staff of the Telephone Co. and Mabel, at home and two sons, Harry of the Office Department and Ernest of the G. S. Sorel. His wife predeceased him a number of years ago.

LEFT SECRET HOARD OF VALUABLE CHINA

MELBOURNE, Australia, Feb. 2 (CP)-Mrs. Agnes Howard, who died recently in a Melbourne suburb, had an almost morbid horror of publicity. To her next-door neighbors she was just a pleasant old lady who lived alone. But, unknown to them, her small house contained one of the finest collections of china in the world, valued at many thousands of pounds.
Even art dealers, whom she met every week to see if they had new specimens for sale, did not penetrate to her home museum. Few people visited her.
In the rooms, one could scarcely move for fear of knocking over a piece of Chelsea or Doulton. These beautiful things lay upon tables, and named,ayer upon layer, into glass cases.
When she exhibited a section of this treasure last year in aid of the Red Cross she insisted on remaining anonymous.
Mrs. Howard bought her china in Europe and America, as well as locally.

Dorothy Dix Says -

Now the opposite of this is also true. We can think ourselves out of love just as easily as we can think ourselves in love, and that is what you and your husband are doing. You keep mulling over your disappointment in your marriage, your lack of love, your unhappiness, your unhappiness. You keep each other's faults and shortcomings continually in your minds and you magnify your loneliness until you feel like travelers doomed to wander through an arid desert for years and years without ever being able to get in touch with each other, or speak the same language again.
You can change all this if you will make an honest, intelligent effort to break down the barriers between you and turn your marriage from a failure into a success. But you will have to do teamwork. So talk it over together and get him to agree upon a plan.
First, I would suggest that you get yourself some pretty clothes and a new hat and try to make yourself as attractive-looking as you were when your husband fell in love with you. No man will sit up looking at a pretty, well-dressed woman with a come-hither look in her eyes for a whole evening without speaking to her. It isn't in human nature to do so. And if he is slow on the uptake, start a conversation yourself. Talk about baseball, or golf, or his business, and when you run out of topics you can always fall back on the babies.
Don't say you have nothing in common. Congeniality is something that we can cultivate. We have to talk to strangers, then why not with our own families? Read the books your husband reads so you can talk to him about them. Listen to the radio programs that he always enjoys. Learn to mix cards if he is a bridge fanatic. It is no harder than it is to develop a taste for olives and candied fruit.
Don't surrender at your age to disappointment in marriage. Beat it. You can if you will.

CURE FATHER ONLY REMEDY FOR SOME (CASES)

DEAR DOROTHY DIX-For years my husband has gone with another woman. We separated over her, but I went back to him on his promise that he would give her up. However, he still goes with her openly and all my friends tell me that they don't see how I stand for it. I can't stop him.
We have five children and he provides well for them. Do you think I should leave him?
ANSWER: Let your friends decide your life for you. You know your own heart. Make your own decisions.
Certainly it is very mortifying to a wife for a husband to flaunt his infidelities in her face, but sometimes there is something more to consider. If he is a well-to-do man, he has a good home, plenty to eat, they are being given an education. Could you give them these advantages if you divorced their father and separated them from him?
Of course, you say you would have some alimony and he would have to make the children an allowance, but it wouldn't be what they get now. They would suffer by the change.
If your husband were free he would almost surely marry this woman with whom he seems to be infatuated and there would be another family of children. The income that is big enough to keep one family in comfort would be merged if out in half with, as always happens, the second wife and the second children getting the lion's share. So consider well before you leave your husband, not for his sake, but for the children's.

DEAR MISS DIX

I am in love with a girl. She wants to marry me, but an old maid says I should not. She won't take "no" for an answer. She gets angry and says I don't love her. What can I do? J. C. C.

ANSWER-Keep on saying "no." Don't let any girl force you into marriage until you are ready for it.

Mutual Life Optimism

When addressing the policyholders of The Mutual Life of Canada at the 73rd Annual Meeting at Waterloo on February 4th, Mr. R. O. McCulloch, President of the Company, pointed out that an unusually low interest rate was being responsible for a very substantial increase in insurance in force.
Mutual Life subscriptions to War and Victory Loans have totaled $49,668,500, of which the Company still holds $48,772,500.
Mr. McCulloch reported an increase in death claims occurring as a direct result of war operations and stated that if the Canadian Army became involved in large scale offensive operations a substantial increase in such claims might, unfortunately, be expected.
Referring to the increasingly favourable military situation, he called for a concerted and resolute effort on the part of civilians in all walks of life to give their utmost in time and energy. "1943 must be the year of the war's most crucial period, during which the National effort must be maintained and accelerated rather than relaxed. If the speedy and complete defeat of our enemies is to be accomplished," he said, "Mr. McCulloch dealt at some length with the government's revenue producing and price control legislation, and pointed out that it is of the greatest importance that all citizens give maximum encouragement and support to these undertakings. A constant reduction in consumption of non-essential goods is necessary to help prevent the evils of inflation. It is the greatest importance," he said, "that, in their own interests, life insurance policyholders should strongly support all anti-inflation measures undertaken by our Government. It is natural and desirable that a substantial portion of the purchasing power derived from the sale of government securities now in the hands of the public should be translated into protection through life insurance. It will thus be available for the support of the war by its investment in Government War Loans. If further inflation is to be avoided, this available purchasing power must not be expended on non-essentials and this hazard is definitely reduced by the steadily increasing application of these funds to the purchase of additional life insurance."
Dealing with post-war problems, Mr. McCulloch welcomed the signs, already abundant, that social security on a more liberal scale than previously attempted is receiving the serious consideration of high authorities in Canada, and in all the democratic countries. "I have little doubt," said the speaker, "that the institution of life insurance, which has rendered such benefits and secured social and economic service during recent generations, through successive periods of prosperity and depression, will prove equal to the demands which may be made upon it. The courage, integrity and ability in public and private life, which have produced the phenomenal development of life insurance during the past century will, I am convinced, continue to manifest themselves in the reconstruction period which lies before us."
At the reorganization meeting of the Board of Directors of The Mutual Life of Canada, following the annual meeting at the Company's head office at Waterloo, Ont., February 4th, Mr. R. O. McCulloch, President of the Company since 1928, was appointed Chairman of the Board, Mr. Louis L. Lang, Galt, Inc., was appointed Vice-President, and W. H. Somerville, General Manager of the Company, were appointed vice-presidents.

The Banger of Coughs Among the Children

In young children a cold or cough is not a thing to be disregarded, as it is often of a grave nature, and unless attended to immediately may, eventually, cause serious trouble.
On the first sign of a cough or cold the mother will find in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup a remedy to help get rid of the trouble.
Its promptness and effectiveness in loosening the phlegm, and stimulating the bronchial organs is such that the cough may be checked before anything of a serious nature sets in.
Price 25c a bottle; the large family size, about 3 times as much, 60c, at all drug counters.
