SUMMERSIDE and WESTERN GUARDIAN

—ARRIVED HOME.—Judge Arsenault, Rev. P. C. Arsenault, Rev. Father Gauthier, Adrien Arsenault, Emanuel Arsenault, and J. E. Gallant, arrived Saturday evening from Church Point, N. S., where they were attending the Acadia Convention.

—CREATES INTEREST.—The Guardian's Special Prize Phonola, on exhibition in Holman's Music Section, Summerside, has been the centre of a great deal of attention and interest during the past week.

—BRANCH STARTED.—The branch of the Catholic Woman's League of Canada has been started in Tignish. The following are the officers: President Mrs. Dr. Johnston, First Vice-President, Mrs. B. O'Connell, Second Vice-President, Mrs. Arch Gaudet, Third Vice-President, Mrs. C. F. Morrissey, Secy., Mrs. Frederic Conroy, Treasurer, Mrs. Michael Gaudet.

—PAID FOR JOY RIDE.—Seizing the favorable opportunity when the employer and other members of the household were away in the county, a Summerside cavalier appropriated the motor car which was idle in the garage at the house where his sweetheart worked as kitchen girl and treated her to a joy ride through the surrounding districts of the western capital.

—NOT THE RIGHT MAN.—From the barn came hoarse shouts of defiance while flames from a farm yard fire lit up the faces of the embattled farmers, standing about the structure with pitchforks, staves and other warlike implements clutched tensely in their hands.

—INTERESTING SCENES.—A visit to the Adagwaasook Fishing Club, and inspection of the fire devastated area of Richibucto and a cell at Buctouche were features of the holiday trip made in the schooner Maude Weston last week by J. LeRoy Holman, Vice-president of R. T. Holman, Limited, Summerside, and his son, Robert T., accompanied by Robert Gordon, of the office staff. Near the fishing club grounds the party was shown a young moose which is not yet a year old, as is tame as a lamb.

—TOOK PRECAUTIONS.—On the stilly night, to quote Mr. Moore, a housewife living in Summerside has been disturbed by protests and cackles of some of her poultry, in the back yard. These midnight noises were followed each time by a shortage in the roll call of chickens next morning. "Leave the matter to me" said friend husband, "and I'll soon settle the hash of that blankety blank chicken thief. That night he kept a midnight vigil at the dining room window which was wide open and overlooked the back yard, and was rewarded about one o'clock by seeing a stealthy form creep to the hen house. While giving the murderer time to select his chicken, the waiting Nemesis fitted a blank shell into the old reliable shot gun and when the hen-thief came into the open again, he was greeted with a blinding flash and roar that put him into high speed the first jump. "Guess he will run for a week," said friend husband, as he put away the fowling piece and retired for the night.

—Mr. Chas Livingston of Charlottetown and party passed through Summerside Saturday on their way to the western section of the Island.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Brundage, Halifax, spent a few days in town during the week-end. They were the guests of Mrs. (Capt.) James Walsh, Spring Street.—H.

—Messrs M. F. Tompkins, General Freight Agent, Moncton, and George Stephen, General Traffic Mgr., Montreal, were in Summerside last week on official business.

—George German, Roxbury Mass., who has been home on a visit to his mother, Mrs. Peter Gorman, Kensington, for some time, returned to Roxbury, Sunday morning. Mr. Gorman still has a kindly feeling for the dear little Isle, as he makes annual visits to the old home.

JOHN BELL

A deep shadow of gloom was suddenly cast upon Bonshaw and vicinity early in the morning of Aug. 15th when it was learned that one of its most promising youth, John Bell, had suddenly succumbed to complications following an operation for appendicitis. He went to town Friday, Aug. 12 in apparently good health, but shortly after two o'clock was taken suddenly ill which necessitated his removal to the P. E. Island Hospital where he was operated upon. Complications set in shortly after the operation and he passed peacefully away Sunday at midnight. He was cheerful up to an hour or so before his demise, but was suddenly called away to that land from which no man ever returns.

A loving quiet and genial boy was beloved by all who knew him, and was followed to his last resting place, besides his mother, who predeceased him by one year by many sorrowing hearts. His loss in the home of his uncle, Russell Boyce and his grandparents Mr. and Mrs. James Boyce is irreplaceable but they have the assurance that he is not lost, but just gone before.

The funeral which was from the Presbyterian Church was very large ly attended and was conducted by Rev. Mr. Fitzpatrick who preached a fitting discourse from Corinthians 15, "Where the Apostle ably treats of the resurrection, and exerts all to believe in Him who died to save us all."

To the sorrowing relatives and friends the Guardian extends its sincere sympathy.

"He will not grow old, like we that are left grow old. Age will not weary him or the sun will not burn him. At the going down of the sun and in the morning, We will remember him."

THE LATE R. MIDDLETON

(From the Queenscliff, B. C. Observer)

The death on Tuesday morning, July 19th, of Robert Middleton, one of the best known and most highly esteemed of our citizens, makes another break in the fast-diminishing little band of pioneers who worked so hard to open up the Cariboo for settlement. Mr. Middleton's end came with startling suddenness, after an illness of only two days, and before many of his friends had even learned that he was ill. Heart failure, following an acute attack of stomach trouble, was the immediate cause of his death.

Born at Charlottetown, P. E. I., in 1853, the deceased spent his early years there. 1876 he decided to go west, and started for California. After spending a year there he came to Cariboo, coming in via Yale. For the next ten years he followed various occupations before finally taking up land at Alexandria, where he developed one of the finest ranches in the district, the Western Slope. For a time he had as a partner Mr. Geo. Pickard, now a successful rancher near Soda Creek, and later on Mr. J. Hudson, now in New Zealand, who remained with him ten years. Mr. Middleton, then successfully conducted the ranch alone until three years ago, when he retired and came to Queenscliff to reside, disposing of the property to W. Webster, Esq.

The deceased gentleman possessed a very genial disposition, and made friends of all with whom he came in contact. While he never took a prominent part in public affairs, he was active in many of the local organizations, and at the time of his death was president of the Cariboo Farmers' Institute, and also of the Cariboo Agricultural and Horticultural Association. In religion he was a Presbyterian, and of late years a Liberal in politics.

In 1899 deceased re-visited his birthplace, and was married there to Miss Elizabeth Chowen, who survives him. Two nephews and two nieces also survive, all living in the west except one nephew, living in the home town. The funeral took place at 2.30 on Wednesday afternoon, the body being taken first to the church, where a service was held, and thence to the local cemetery for interment. The pallbearers were Messrs. Wm. Webster, Sr., Jas. Shephard, J. M. Yorston, D. H. Anderson, J. Craig and H. Moffat. The obsequies, despite the short notice given, were largely attended, many of the old friends of deceased from Alexandria and other points down the road attending to show a last mark of respect to one who was esteemed by all. The beautiful floral designs which covered the casket were mute evidence of the esteem of sorrowing friends.

The sympathy of the entire district will be extended to Mrs. Middleton in her bereavement.

Ex-Kaiser's Plea Of Poverty Angers People of Berlin

BERLIN, Aug. 20.—The former Kaiser's plea of poverty when he receives letters asking for cash donations for various causes is incongruous contrast to the disclosures made by the German press of the Kaiser's extravagance and his income in recent years. The increase in the cost of living in Germany intensifies a feeling of bitterness caused by these revelations. The German public now takes a less sympathetic view of the Kaiser's "notes with sorrow the need described, but circumstances have more than exhausted the funds available for such purposes, as the rate of exchange conditions are for the management here positively annihilating, for one gets on an average four Dutch guilders for 100 German marks, and as a result of the general increase in the cost of living in Holland, too, hardly the most urgent necessities can be covered with the German money."

But the newspaper disclosures tell the hoarding of foodstuffs during the war and of the payments to Doorn.

At the end of the war the cellar of the old palace overflowed with white flour, filling entire rooms besides. During the revolution a detachment of troops lived on these stores for two months and a surplus remained which was distributed to hospitals.

An inventory showed that here were 20,600 kilograms of white flour, 3,132 kilograms of sugar and trunks full of luxuries. During the military operations food was sent to the Kaiser at the front by special courier service, which included even the transportation of drinking water. The Kaiser's professed poverty conflicts with the known shipment of money sent from Germany to the Kaiser.

An official of the German Treasury department estimated that the total amount of money sent to the Kaiser up to 1921 was 69,000,000 marks. Part of this was from the family treasure and 40,000,000 marks from the sale of the Wilhelmstrasse property. The Kaiser in advancing him money for the purchase of his Doorn estate in August 1919, and threatened to return to Germany unless the money was promptly paid.

The Government's ruling allowing an increase in the price of bread and in rents will make even more difficult the intricate economic and financial problems under which Germany is staggering.

Having read with consternation the report of the National Bureau of Statistics which stated that the cost of living had reached the highest point since the war in July, for which the index figure was fixed at 963, as against 890 in June and 824 the preceding January, the German public received another jolt when experts expressed the opinion that the new high figure is only a forerunner of what is to follow.

But the rise in the cost of bread and rent will have an even stronger influence in prices, and it is apparent that instead of getting in to a quiet period of work, Germany is foredoomed to have another national trouble with the question of wages. The Government is already anticipating this and has suggested another jolt when experts expressed the opinion that the new high figure is only a forerunner of what is to follow.

The possible hope is that if salaries are raised now the increase will be smaller if deferred. Even so it will add a burden of several billion marks to the budget. One reason for the rise in the price of bread is to reduce the vast outlay the Government has been subjected to for maintaining an artificial low bread-price, and now it is doubtful whether the State will save more than it makes.

Permission is being granted to house-owners to increase their rents to sixty per cent, instead of the present thirty per cent over the peace time rate. This is the first slight relaxation in what had been general throughout Central Europe and which might be termed society's revenge against the landlords. Even this relaxation falls far short of bringing them justice since living costs have gone up about tenfold and gold values nearly twentyfold and the renting out of dwellings has proved a dead loss in most cases, as the income from the rents merely paid for the upkeep. But the new increase on all house rents in contracts renewed after June means that within a year the cost of living will have risen for virtually every renter in Germany, while the rise in the price of bread from five to seven marks a kilogram means immediate shrinkage in the purchasing power of wages.

How far reaching the results will be very few political prophets are willing to estimate. But one thing seems fairly sure that the great advantage in exporting due to the fall in the mark will be considerably diminished by the increased labor cost. And another apparent factor is that labor will gradually reawaken from its political lethargy.

"Oh doctor, I am suffering so much I want to die!" "You did perfectly right to call me."—The American Legion Weekly.
