DEATHS

MCLELLAN — On June 7th, 1920 Angus McLellan of Indian River, aged 77 years. Funeral from his late residence Thursday at 9 a. m.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear mother Phoebe Reid who departed this life on June 9th, 1904 gone but not forgotten.

Inserted by her daughter. Mrs. E. Williams. 9596.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS

There is nothing so necessary as necessity.

It is far easier to look prosperous than to feel that way.

Grass widows are seldom as verdant as their title would in dictate.

However, the office never has occasion to seek the man on pay day.

To the wise an ounce of hint is worth a pound of subsequent advice.

A politician's idea of a fool is a man who affiliates with the other party.

More women would go in for vocal culture if they could buy things for a song.

When it comes to making a swift touch the glad hand is very much in evidence.

After singing the baby to sleep, a woman proceeds to talk her husband to sleep.

During the courtship a young man who affiliates with the other the girl says "No" three times.

An average man would soon attain perfection if he followed the advice he hands out to his neighbors.

When a man thinks he is a genius he allows his hair to grow long, and when a woman thinks she has a mission she cuts her hair short.

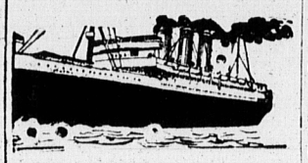
Canadian Government Merchant Marine



The new steamer "Canadian Miner," recently launched at New Glasgow, N. S., will sail from Montreal, May 25th, for Charlottetown direct. She will be due here May 28th, and will load genral cargo for St. John's, Newfoundland.

In order that we may have sufficient space on this steamer for shipment to St. John's, Newfoundland it is important that merchants here order their goods coming from Montreal by this steamer. This is necessary if our port is to reap a benefit from these steamers calling.

For all information apply to

JUST A GIRL

BY JANE PHELPS

IN SEARCH OF WORK

CHAPTER 29

What did the coming of this aunt, who really was no aunt at all, mean for me? As I heard Mother's sobbing gradually grow less, I distinguished the calm voice talking quietly. Then I went back to them.

"Zena, I am a lonely old woman. Don't you think it is your Mother's duty to come and keep me company for a while? You, too, if you will. I have no one to care for, no one who cares particularly for me."

"Would you like to go, Mother?"

"I think—so—Zena. I am so tired. Perhaps I could rest there." That had been her constant plaint—she was "so tired."

"Of course you can rest! No one could rest in a noisy place like New York with the street noises—even at night."

"But, Zena—?"

"I must get to work, Mother. I haven't been able to look for work even," I turned to Aunt Susan, "because Mother hated so to be left alone. But if she goes with you I must find a position at once."

After a good deal of talk—mostly between Aunt Susan and me—it was decided that Mother should go and stay with her for a few months at least. When she urged me, I firmly told her it was necessary that I begin to earn money. I had refused to allow Mother to visit. She would pay her board. Aunt Susan had very little besides her home, and it would not be fair to foist Mother upon her, even though she had invited her, without paying.

So we packed up our few possessions again, and Mother and Aunt Susan started up-state. I gave up the sitting room at once. I would retain the bed room until I found work, then I would move where it would not take so much time to go back and forth.

Not a doubt entered my mind that I would be successful. Not once did I think that I would not be in demand as a worker. Had I not a good education? If the girls I saw in stores and on the street at the time the workers filled them, were capable of earning, I surely would have no trouble.

I gave Mother—rather I gave to Aunt for her—all but $100 of what was left. When I said goodbye to them at the Grand Central Station, all I had in the world was hat $100, a lot of stylish clothes—too stylish by far for a working girl, I soon learned—and my faith in myself.

I bought all the papers and took hem home with me. I felt so sad to alone. I feared I would break town, and I realized I must waste to time giving way to my emotions. I was not particularly strong, and so must also conserve my strength.

It had been hard to let Mother go, while at the same time it was a relief. I had begun to be very anxious as to what we would do when our money gave out.

I thought many times of what Aunt Susan had said: "I guess he Lord sent me." I was sure he had.

I spent the entire evening searching the columns "Female Help Wanted." Surely when so many people were in need of help, I would have no trouble at all. I cut out dozens of the most promising advertisements, arranging them according to location as nearly as possible, so that I might save time and car-fare.

I, who had never used street cars, was anxious now to save the nickle a ride would cost!

I had decided I would try for a position as private secretary. I wrote a good hand, which I thought a requisite. So the next morning I started out on my search for employment—sans experience, sans proper clothes, sans everything save courage.

I called at place after place in the business district only to learn that the places had been filled; or that because I was neither a stenographer or typist I wouldn't do.

I did not get through the day without other unpleasant experiences also. One man told me I didn't look as if I needed work. He had looked me up and down. My clothes were not indicative of need, he said, with a sneer.

I didn't tell him neither Mother or I had put on mourning because Dad hated the idea. Neither did I tell him I wore stylish clothes because they were all I had, and could not afford others.
