the front."

The wisdom of the French general staff, now following a definitely defensive policy, in falling back to its present positions before the westwall without seriously attempting to hold them in the face of German attacks was held by military sources to have been amply demonstrated when the rivers in the Saar region overflowed their banks today.

The Saar and Biles brimmed threatened floods that would have made liaison with the former French outposts in that western area difficult if not impossible. If the German attack had been delayed a week, according to military experts, it might easily have found many French detachments marooned.

The German troops now have the problem of holding positions in water-logged territory, far in advance of their bases, it was added.

Immediate result of the floods, that followed two weeks of violent rains, was almost complete cessation of military activity along the whole front.

A few planes managed to take to the air again as the sky cleared slightly this morning.

The new defensive line, still well in advance of the Meuse line at most points, runs as follows:

From the Moselle River and the Luxembourg Frontier on the west, eastward along the Aachen Valley, through the broken country between Ritzing and Waldsiefel.

From there obliquely southwest to the Nied River sections, where a light line of advance posts still exists. In the Warden forest there has been a slightly renewed bend, but the French still hold the principle wooded heights.

South of Saarbrücken the positions have not changed. The French are still solidly installed on the slopes below Forbach. East of the Saar River the new line apparently follows the Biles River. There is no change in the line of the Oberrhein salient, which continues to threaten the German towns of Zweibrücken and Pirmasens.

Farther east, in the Petites Vosges region and on the Avestan front, as well as around Wissembourg and along the Lauter River to the Rhine, the situation is absolutely unchanged.

trawler—both badly injured. Three others were picked up by another trawler from a rubber boat early this morning, one of them being injured.

The flinders were reported to be suffering from immersion and shock. The eldest of the group was 25. Two spoke English.

"Our aircraft sustained no casualties," said a communique issued by the admiralty and air ministry. "No ship of the convoy or escort was damaged."

The engagement took place a short time before war minister Leslie Hore-Belisha declared in a broadcast that further eastward expansion of Germany had been blocked by Soviet Russia and Turkey. He warned that Germany would "pay dearly" in any mass attack to break the western land and sea blockade.

The evening's entertainment was opened with music of the highest quality furnished by the visiting Young People's Orchestra, "The Happy Gang," consisting of Mr. Wallace Moore, master of ceremonies, Mr. Keir Duggan, violin, Miss Mary Stewart harmonica, Miss Gienna Clark and Mr. Elwood Dunning.

Mr. Elwood Dunning entertained the gathering with one of "Gramma's ever ready stories," a poem which was greatly enjoyed.

This was followed by a solo by their guest, Mr. Elwood Dunning and several other members by "The Happy Gang." The remainder of the evening was enjoyed with a fortune telling game which although not giving out many correct facts, etc., proved to be both amusing and enjoyable, and after a spelling contest which was won by the Red's by a small margin and several other games of interest, a dainty lunch was served by the Young People's Union. Mr. Glen Cotton in a few well chosen words thanked those attending for their interest and help in this worthy cause and hoped that many of the younger set of our fair town would be seen at their future meetings. A feature attraction of the evening was the showing of lantern slides dealing with Finland, the country now negotiating terms of neutrality with Russia. The enjoyable entertainment, which continued to the singing of "The National Anthem."—H.

Party Platforms In Que. Contest

By The Canadian Press

The Liberal party seeks victory in the election largely on the record of 40 years of Liberal administration before Premier M. A. Duplessis' Union Nationale emerged triumphant from the 1936 campaign.

Liberal leader Adolphe Godbout has declared in his campaign speeches that his party offers the electorate the "safe and sane administration" which he says Quebec has advanced in former years to a pre-eminent position among the provinces.

The Liberals plan a broad agricultural program. Mr. Godbout has announced his intention to foster short-term loans to farmers.

Rural operation schemes which he encouraged to broaden their activities and the government would co-operate closely with them in managing farm projects.

Claiming that the Union Nationale administration in office is the only guarantee that the province will be run "by Quebec for Quebec," the government leaders urge a united stand by all elements of the population—English and French-speaking, Protestants and Catholics.

Union Nationale supporters describe their administration as Quebec's "only safeguard" against "desertion of manpower for the war," and "protection" for the province by all constitutional means.

Turning to the domestic scene, they contend that the record of their administration is a record of itself in its establishment of fair wages, assistance to farming, colonization and education, industrial development, increased revenues and pensions for aged and blind.

The province's big expenditures for pensions, highways, relief works and farm loans are described as expenditures for works of "construction and reconstruction." They are compared to the dominion's war budget described as "millions for destruction."

Quebec's third party in the provincial election campaign ending Oct. 25, Action Libérale Nationale, offers the electorate a touch of corporatism, a broad scheme of agricultural rehabilitation, and a firm stand against conscription.

Led by Paul Gouin, a young Montreal lawyer and son of the late Premier, Action Libérale Nationale is an offshoot of the Liberal party. Its members, mostly young men, were dissatisfied with party management and broke away to form the Action Libérale.

Militant Duplessis, in upsetting the Liberal regime, the new party turned against Duplessis, however, and had reorganized in the last two years, formulating a new platform.

OFFERS EYE FOR SALE

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20 (AP)—Mrs. Grace Davis of Alt Park, Tenn., offered today to sell the cornea of one of her eyes for $5,000. The offer was disclosed in a letter read to a meeting of the American College of Surgeons.

Many Pay Final Tribute To Clergyman

No greater tribute could have been rendered to a beloved citizen than that accorded to the late Rev. W. H. Harding when his funeral was held on Sunday afternoon from the Trinity United Church.

The spacious edifice was wholly inadequate to hold the people of all denominations and classes who came from all parts of the Province to pay their last tribute of respect to Mr. Harding. Many passed silently to have a last look at their beloved Pastor of the air.

Rev. L. E. G. Davies had charge of the service assisted by Rev. Wm. VerWolf who led the call to worship. Others assisting were Rev. Mr. Williams of the Christian Church; Rev. J. B. Wilson, Baptist Church; Rev. Mr. Jeffrey and Rev. Mr. Ayers.

The choir was assisted by members of the Presbyterian Choir. Miss Goldard of Coverdale, N. B., was the organist. The service was very simple but impressive. A quartette Messrs George Bowness; Albert Huestis; W. E. Orbes and Earl Schurman, rendered two appropriate hymns.

At the close of the service the members of the Hiram and Lebanon Masonic Lodge No. 3, Summerside, took charge and conducted their beautiful service for departed brethren. P. G. M. J. M. Nicholson conducted the Masonic service at the church and grave.

The honorary pallbearers were Messrs S. MacKay, M. L. Bradshaw, Samuel Kennedy and W. W. Smith. Active pallbearers were Senator Creelman MacArthur; L. F. Allen; R. E. Ellis; John W. Rogers; Dr. J. A. MacMillan; Dr. H. T. Colvin. Interment was in the Peoples Cemetery. Rev. Mr. Davies was assisted at the grave by Rev. Mr. Williams.

Military Implications

Decision to extend the airline despite the war was influenced, it is asserted by the military implications as well as the predominant consideration of providing the Maritime Provinces with the air communication enjoyed by the other provinces.

Apart from the airports at the eastern cities at which T. C. A. planes will land emergency fields are scattered along the line of flight every 50 or 100 miles and some of these possibly will be utilized to train Empire fighting airmen for overseas service.

T. C. A. has trained its own pilots in its Winnipeg training school and these birdmen will be added to the personnel at the eastern line.

For several months experimental flights have been underway almost daily from Montreal to Maritime airfields.

On the Toronto-Moncton flights, the planes will stop at Ottawa and Montreal, which then will have three different T. C. A. flights coming and going daily—the Tri-City Service covering Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto; the Trans-Continental flight and the Maritime Service.

These will contribute to making St. Hubert Airport, south of Montreal, one of the most important air fields in Canada.

German military experts expressed confidence they have the upper hand in fighting materials and could smash their way across the Rhine if it should become necessary.

ANKARA, Oct. 22 (AP)—Great Britain, France and Turkey today agreed upon a three-point program for protection of their interests in the Near East.

The program, mapped by diplomats and by military experts in joint staff talks held under closest secrecy, was believed by observers to include:

1. Co-ordinated action by the British and French forces in the Near East and by the Turkish Army in event of any aggressive action within the scope of the new-significant British-Turkish Mutual Assistance Pact.

2. Granting by Britain and France to Turkey a $100,000,000 ($20,000,000 credit) as reliably reported Saturday of which $25,000,000 ($100,000,000) is earmarked for arms, ammunition and other military supplies.

3. Recommendation by French and British experts on the type of military equipment to be purchased by Turkey to strengthen her position as guardian of the Dardanelles, strategic gateway to the Black Sea and Europe's "back door."

Having concluded their important military discussions with the Turkish General Staff, General Maximilian Weygand, Commander-in-Chief of French forces in the eastern Mediterranean, flew to his headquarters in Beirut, Lebanon and Lieut. Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, British Middle East Commander, returned to Jerusalem.

The Maritime airline climaxes efforts of the national airline to provide scheduled flights across the entire Dominion. Early this year mail service was started on the Toronto and Montreal to Vancouver route and on April passenger flights were inaugurated. The daylight mail flight will be T. C. A.'s initial venture in the Maritimes. It is expected that about Jan. 1 similar night flights will start and as soon as the pilots become sufficiently accustomed to the route, the airports and weather peculiarities, passengers will be carried as well as mail and freight.

The same 10-passenger, Lockheed "QR" planes which T. C. A. uses on its other flights will fly the Maritime route and similar radio and weather facilities have been provided as operate all across Canada at major cities.

This latter necessity has given rise to many ingenious schemes for insuring "business as usual." Emergency offices have been set
