PRINCE ALBERT AND CADETS ENTERTAINED

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Rogers were at home yesterday afternoon, when they gave a delightful young people's dance in honor of the cadets of H. M. S. Cumberland. Thirty of the breezy young fellows were present, including His Royal Highness Prince Albert. In the early part of the afternoon the weather was rather unpropitious and prevented the majority of the invited guests from Charlottetown and district attending punctually, but the cadets were there promptly on time, and it was not many minutes after paying respects to their host and hostess before they were "tripping the light fantastic toe" with the youth and beauty of the island. And not at any of the other ports of call, where they were similarly entertained, did they meet so many charming young ladies, all elegantly dressed, smiling and amiable to the last degree. The cadets merrily revelled in the dances, of which there were ten and some extra, and rapturously enjoyed themselves between times.

The Prince went up only once, and said to say, his partner did not recognize him. For the rest of the evening he enjoyed himself immensely, in a secluded corner among one or two boon companions, laughing, chatting, and hiding himself behind one or other of his friends when his eye caught those of some inquisitive guests spying him from afar. No one sought to intrude upon his retirement and bluntly inquired whether he was the Prince. His Royal Highness blushing refrained from denying the soft impeachment, but as soon as the lady's back was turned, related the incident to his fellow cadets, and all seemed to enjoy a hearty laugh at his discomfiture. Otherwise everything went without a hitch; and it could easily be seen that all were heartily enjoying themselves.

Between five and six refreshments were served, and these were choice and varied. The cadets made excellent waiters, and were assiduous in their attentions upon the lady guests. While refreshments were being distributed and every other one was busily engaged, the Prince and a couple of friends took leave of their host and hostess, expressing in graceful terms their appreciation of the entertainment. The dance continued till seven o'clock, and the unanimous opinion expressed was that it had been the most enjoyable function held in Charlottetown for many a long day.

It should be added that His Honor and Mrs. Rogers received their guests in the drawing room, dancing took place in the fine, commodious ball-room, and refreshments were served in the dining hall and the ladies' drawing room; the refreshment tables were admirably situated in the open air were accommodated in the fine verandas surrounding the house.
