"SONG OF IDAHO" LATEST IN SERIES OF ACTION MUSICALS

"Way back in 1944, Columbia Pictures made an action musical film called "Cowboy Canteen." Packed with stars of the range, radio and recordings, it was to be the first in a popular series. Each and every picture following kept to the same formula—plenty of action, topnotch musical performers and homespun comedy. The result has been hours of sweet entertainment for every member of the family.

"Song of Idaho," coming to the Capitol Theatre today, is the sixteenth jamboree in this always-welcome series, and there's every reason to expect that Columbia has turned out another hit. Heading the cast of "Song of Idaho" are the Hoosier Hot Shots (Hezlie, Ken, Gil and Gabe), those talented comedians with the queer-looking instruments. The Hot Shots have appeared in every succeeding action musical and can be given part credit for the movie fans' growing interest in these films. Also important featured are Kirby Grant, who last appeared with Joan Davis in "She Wrote the Book"; lovely June Vincent, Tommy Ivo, twelve-year-old youngster who recently appeared with Irene Dunne in "Remember Mama"; Dorothy Vaughn and Emory Parnell. Specialty numbers are performed by such well-known radio and record favorites as the Sunshine Boys, the Sunshine Girls and the Starlighters.

"ROCKY" AND "JACK" AT THEIR BEST IN FIGHTING WESTERN

Allan "Rocky" Lane and his famous horse, Black Jack, are at their fighting best in their latest Republic western adventure film, "Oklahoma Badlands," which opens at the Empire Theatre today.

The famous pair embark upon their most dangerous mission when they speed to the Rawlins ranch to help an old friend of Rocky's. A mysterious plot is in operation against the family which owns the ranch and, while probing the contemptible scheme, Rocky is engaged in a battle of wits and fists with the wildest of foes. The villain, portrayed by 250-pound Gene Stutenroth, is a clever and smooth man. Rocky, a clever and smooth man, is a band of outlaws is expertly directed by that old favorite heavy, Roy Barcroft.

To relieve the tenseness of the script, comic relief is injected into the situation by Eddy Waller, playing an amiable but muddling sidekick of Rocky's. Mildred Coles, a newcomer to pictures, ably handles the leading feminine role.

Though Allan "Rocky" Lane's followers are used to his daring, they are in for new thrills as he heroically battles almost a most desperate group of rustlers. In true hero-fashion, Rocky wins out over the evil ones, thereby maintaining the standards his fans have set for him. Yakima Canutt directed the swift-moving western for associate producer Gordon Kay.
