Coal's Scarce in France and in the Good Old U. S. A.

Disagreement

Now, now, Mr. Farman," interposed Mr. Loper, raising a deprecatory hand. "I think I have the floor at this moment, as we say in the House. Farman, I'm sure none of us want to spoil this pleasant evening by an altercation. I hoped, by asking you here to dinner to-day, that you might act as a peacemaker. I rather pride myself on my message, even though this message since my mother has so far been prevented from joining me in Washington this winter. I am hoping that you will be coming down a little later, but in the meantime, I am doing my best to guide my household without her guiding hand, and on the whole, the results are fairly satisfactory. I think you'd say that was a creditable dinner last night, wouldn't you? And this Courtvoisier's really almost a collector's item. And now that you and Mr. Loper have met as fellow guests at my table..."

Angry

Daniel had risen from his chair. Despite his efforts, his anger was mounting again. It had never been so bad as far as Loper was concerned, and he was sure that kindling it anew. Besides, some-thing else had disturbed him. While Vaughn was talking, he had seen Jenness move from the chair in which she was sitting, and further on, to the drawing room, to one close to the French door, leading into the living room which stood ajar. The move had taken pace when Vaughn had begun to talk about his mother, and Daniel felt sure Vaughn had observed it too. He had noticed a flicker of annoyance on the congressman's urbane face. It disappeared as Daniel moved as quickly as it had come. But, he had been there. Daniel could have sworn that he had seen it.

never shirk my responsibilities

Mr. Farman especially when they are so unmistakably indicated. I really do not think there is anything more to be said on the subject. Shall we join the ladies? "There was nothing more to be said on the subject nothing at all. Daniel could say. He had been overruled at every turn. Jenness herself had accepted Loper's vaughn was paying him. Joe Macina's shrewd observation that money would make a difference had become valueless under the arrangement. The hearing before the grand jury was imminent. There was no time and there were no means for Daniel Farman to do anything.

NUPTIALS

A wedding of much interest to the younger set was solemnized in St. Dunstan's Church at 8:45 yesterday morning when Miss M. McCordie, cousin of the groom, united in the holy bonds of matrimony Lillian, daughter of Mrs. Peter J. McCarron and Miss Conductor McCarron, and Lieut. Judge C. Gavan Duffy and Mrs. Duffy. Father McCordie also celebrated the nuptial Mass. Servers were Henry O'Shea and Francis McDonald, of H.M.C.S. "Queen Charlotte". The bride, given in marriage by Mr. Ivan Reddin, was attractively gowned in a white lace frock with full veil, and carried a white prayer book with white streamers and forget-me-nots. Mrs. Roy McCordie, sister of the bride, as matron of honor, was becomingly gowned in turquoise silk with matching veil and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. The groomsmen were Lt. Cmdr. Charles MacKenzie. During the Mass, solos were rendered by Miss Lucy Blanchard, while Mrs. Joseph Duggan, organist, played softly throughout the service. The ushers were Lieut. T.C.B. and Lieut. Freeman of H.M.C.S. "Queen Charlotte". Carried-off-town guests were Miss Carrie McCarron, sister of the bride, Montreal; Sgt. Mary Williams, Halifax; Mrs. Larry McDonald, Montreal; Major Allison Rogers and Mrs. Rogers, Halifax. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the "Charlottetown," as when were intimate friends and relatives of the contracting parties. Lieut. and Mrs. Duffy left by plane for Moncton on their route to Quebec, where they will spend their honeymoon at Chateau Frontenac, Quebec, before proceeding to Antigonish, where they will reside.
