On a cold, rain-sodden day in December, 1918, Canadians crossed the great Bonn Bridge, and were reviewed by their commander, General Sir Arthur Currie, as they moved as part of the army of occupation to establish a bridgehead on the east bank of the Rhine. For the Allies, history might have repeated itself, last week had the Hun not blown the mighty span. Pictured here is the Royal 22nd Canadians, one of the units of the army of occupation 27 years ago, crossing the Bonn bridge. —(Canadian Official War Photo).

Attention Young Mothers

Are you one of the mothers, who through your neglect or ignorance made it possible for twenty-two children to catch diphtheria last year in Charlottetown?

Some of these children died whilst others will remain semi-invalids for the remainder of their lives because they were not protected. Do you know that diphtheria can be prevented? Today parents should feel humiliated and disgraced if, because of their indifference, their children contract diphtheria.

Commencing next Monday, March 19th, vitally necessary prevention is to begin in the city schools. During next week every school will be visited by representatives of the Department of Public Health at times advertised in the local papers. We appeal to all young mothers, who have not already done so, to have their babies, pre-school and school children, protected against this enemy. We need your co-operation. Don't deny your children this protection. Canada needs healthy babies. Remember prevention is better than cure. Mothers, don't fail your children. It is your responsibility. Don't shirk your duty.
