more expensive in those days, and the boys' mothers or landladies used to fill them up with currant pudding and gravy before putting the most on the table.

"Umph! Roast beef and currant pudding, I must try it," Lorbrook commented. "Bleeson warmed to his subject. 'Of course,' he went on, 'most of the fishermen would rather have a good feed of fish than anything else.'"

"Whatever they eat seems to toughen them pretty thoroughly," Bleeson put in. "I saw a lot of them over the other side, and they are a fine bunch."

"The sea's in their blood, right enough," Bleeson said. "Sometimes they come out this way to settle down, but they don't stay long. We're not ten miles from the coast here, but to them it is the middle of a continent. They're an interesting lot."

"Interesting it may be," Lorbrook said, after the landlady had left them. "But it doesn't get us any nearer the end of our job—or does it?"

"Nor does the business about the Doctor's chickens," Benny added sourly. "That, I believe, is where you are wrong. And that reminds me it is about time we were moving."

"Hunting chickens?" "Indirectly," Bill conceded. "We are going to have another chat with the vicar. I want to look at the church tower again, and I want to talk about... What do you think?"

"Chicken?" "Exactly!" "The Reverend Augustine Lefevre had announced quite well a little before the two men left. He had been enjoying an afternoon nap, and Bill felt that the vicar did not greet them with a true Christian attention. He liked company, and obviously he also liked comfort."

"He soon softened when Bill asked him if it was convenient for them to visit the church tower again, and to complete the inspection that had been interrupted by the finding of Jane Whenbawne. Lefevre loved his nine-hundred-year-old church, and he eagerly assented."

"I'll take you at once," he said, "though I suspect it is not the fabric of the church that interests you. Churches do interest me," Bill answered, truthfully. "But I will confess that at the moment my interest is not of the usual kind. No reason why I should not be honest, sir. The fact is I am anxious to learn why somebody else is interested in the tower."

"The people who abducted Miss Whenbawne?" "Yes. Although they did not abduct her. She followed them there, and they tied her up merely to make their own escape. Of course, if we had not turned up they may have returned to remove her. We can't tell what may have happened perhaps they did intend to take her away, but were disturbed, or some more urgent job intervened."

"Nevertheless," Bill went on, "I believe that if they had known that the girl they had in their power was taken more drastic action."

As they talked, they walked towards the church. Suddenly the vicar stopped. "What is all this about Whenbawne? Why the mystery? "That, I am afraid, I cannot tell you at the moment," Lorbrook answered. "But later I may be able to explain. One thing, however, I can tell you, and I'm sure you will treat it as confidential. It is that what happens to Whenbawne and the men who were in your tower last night, is of the utmost importance, not merely to us, but to the whole country."

"Perhaps you realize that the history of Kent is the history of England," Lefevre said. "But I must not engage you in pointless discussion. Here we are, I wonder if we shall find anything on the clock tower this time."

They found nothing on the clock tower, nor in the two half floors above, nor in the tower.

As they approached the stone battlements Bill said: "On here we are probably visible for miles, and somebody may be watching. Do you mind keeping below the level of the battlements, sir?"

In Memoriam

MR. AND MRS. JOHN D. MacPHERSON

Within three days two funerals were conducted from the same home in Bellevue when on March 13th, 1943, friends gathered to the funeral of John D. MacPherson and on March 16th to the funeral of Mrs. MacPherson.

Mr. and Mrs. MacPherson were among the oldest residents of the community having reached the notable ages of 90 and 88 years respectively. Had they been spared together until next August they would have been able to celebrate the 58th anniversary of their marriage. Through the years they had enjoyed good health. In fact, for until last autumn did Mrs. MacPherson begin to fail in health, but from that time on she gradually lost strength. Mr. MacPherson, although crippled from an accident a number of years ago which made it very difficult for him to move about, continued to perform his daily round of work. Many a person of lesser spirit would have been confined to the house or even a wheel chair, but up to the evening before his death he was about as usual. Going to the room in the morning, his daughters discovered that his spirit had quietly passed on but a short while before.

Mrs. MacPherson was formerly Miss Christina MacDonald and was born at Upper Montague and was the last remaining one of her family. Mr. MacPherson was born at Bellevue and is survived by one brother, a resident of Hyde Park. They are survived by two daughters who came home to care for them—Margaret, some years ago and Maude, a nurse at Deaconess Hospital, Boston, coming home recently. They lost one son, Donald Alexander, in 1918, who was completing his medical course at McGill University. Another son, Neil, died in 1906, and two children at infancy.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. Milton Fraser with burial at the Valleyfield cemetery.

Full carriers for Mr. MacPherson were—Jno. S. MacPhee, Jno. Angus MacPherson, Archie MacPherson, Stewart MacPherson, Donald Ernest MacLeod and Jno. MacDonald; for Mrs. MacPherson, Jno. S. MacPhee, Jno. Angus MacPherson, Donald Ernest MacLeod and Alex MacLeod.

Mr. and Mrs. MacPherson were both members of the Valleyfield United Church and their qualities of life and manner of living won the respect and affection of all who knew them. There was a good home, and while their friends could not expect many more years from them, their tenderness and the hospital care their home will be greatly missed.

Claims Acadians Ignored Under Liberal Rule

Protest against the treatment accorded Acadians in the matter of appointment to war boards and other government jobs was made in the Legislature by Mr. Aeneas Gallant, First District of Prince, and a colleague of Premier Thane A. Campbell. Mr. Gallant was speaking in the Budget debate on April 1. He called attention to the outstanding contribution made by Acadians in this Province to the armed services, and demanded to know why they have been discriminated against. The time had come, he said, when it was necessary to speak out on this subject. He was disappointed, he said, in going through the offices of the wartime appointments, not to find a single Acadian in any of the positions, either in Charlottetown or Summerside. He

MR. AENEAS GALLANT

Head the Government responsible for this discrimination. As an example, he instanced the Reconstruction Committee appointed recently under the chairmanship of the President of the Executive Council, whose members attended a conference at Moncton last week. "I don't like the respect of that committee," he said. "I have come to the conclusion that there is too much politics in these appointments."

Mr. Gallant began by reading a newspaper account and the record of two Acadian families from his district, who had contributed to an exceptional degree to the armed forces.

Acadians Ignored

Referring to car ferry communication, he said that Mr. Andrew Gallant, Bloomfield, was the first person in this Province to suggest this service. He had called it to the attention of the late Hon. Benj. Gallant, who was the sitting member for the First District of Prince. Mr. Gallant brought the matter up in Council and the first to introduce it on the floor of the House was the late Joseph Read. The late Mr. Gallant, the speaker of the House, had been a Senatorship "on his dying bed."

Another outstanding Acadian, the late Hon. Jeremiah Blanchard, had sought a Senatorship and had a large number of supporters, but he was refused. A third prominent Acadian (Mr. Joseph A. Bernard) had met with similar ill success. He recalled also that an Acadian has never been appointed Lieutenant Governor of the Province.

He was grieved, he said, that the Premier was likely to leave this Legislature shortly. As the Premier's colleague he had run three elections in the First District, and both had come through successfully each time. The Premier had served his country nobly and had well earned the position that the Federal Government may bestow upon him.

Speaking of financing, Mr. Gallant maintained that "instead of spending the million extra that the Opposition says we spent over their expenditures, we should have spent them as much."

Mr. MacPhee "that is a correct enunciation of Liberal principles, all right."

Mr. Gallant maintained that "many people would agree that the Opposition was preaching economy." He mentioned some activities of the Fishermen's Loan Board, of which he is a member.

This Island, he believed, was an ideal spot for prison camps. That kind of labor could be controlled and would be of great service to the Province. We cannot get war industries here added, as a result of the big industrial provinces "having a bigger drag than we have."

"THE GLORIA"

LADIES' READY-TO-WEAR

TO HELP YOU SAFEGUARD YOUR WAR SECURITIES

You have made a patriotic investment in Victory Bonds... or War Loan Bonds... or War Savings Certificates... perhaps all three... to help your country in the war... and to help assure your after-war future. To enable you to preserve your war securities from danger of loss by fire or theft, Canada's Chartered Banks offer a safekeeping service. Here are the details: VICTORY BONDS and WAR LOAN BONDS—Take them to your bank... to any branch of any chartered bank... the bank will put them into safekeeping for you, will clip your coupons when the interest falls due, and will deposit the money to your name... If you haven't a bank account you can authorize the bank to open one for your convenience.

The total charge for this service and safekeeping is only 25 cents a year on bonds (no matter how many) up to $250... one-tenth of one per cent on amounts over $250.

WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES—You can lodge them also with your bank... which will take them into safekeeping and for just one small charge cover the whole of the time (or any part of it) from purchase to maturity. Here is all it will cost you — not just for one year — but for 7½ years:

For a $ 5.00 certificate.....	$0.10
For a $ 10.00 certificate.....	.15
For a $ 25.00 certificate.....	.20
For a $ 50.00 certificate.....	.25
For a $100.00 certificate.....	.50
For a $500.00 certificate.....	1.00
