

LIFT OFF CORNS!

Apply few drops then lift sore, touchy corns off with fingers—No pain!

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little Freezone on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right out. Yes magic!

A tiny bottle of Freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

Freezone is the sensational discovery of a Cincinnati genius. It is wonderful.

HAVE ROSY CHEEKS AND FEEL FRESH AS A DAISY—TRY THIS!

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid that one week of inside bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.

NEIL'S CARELESS REMARK TO BLANCHE ORTON ANNOYS BARBARA

CHAPTER XIX.

What had caused Blanche Orton to make that remark? Had there been something said about her and Neil, and was she repeating it to him? Or, perhaps, he was retelling something to her. Neil always talked more when he had been drinking. That was the way I always knew when he had been indulging himself. He never showed it in any other way.

I had listened intently for Neil's reply to that speech of Blanche Orton's as we rose from the table. He had leaned toward her and said just two words:

"You rogue."

Someway those two words hurt me more than if he had said more. If I showed an intimacy of which I had not dreamed, I knew of Neil's manner with women, how he carelessly said flattering things meaning them for the moment, then forgetting the woman and what he had said in another instant. But this was different, this intimacy with Blanche Orton. I sensed danger to my happiness, yet I could not let Neil see how I felt. He was so wilful, so headstrong, that an objection on my part to his intimacy with her might drive him further, instead of halting it.

Not that I thought for a moment that Neil was seriously engaged or had in any way compromised himself with Blanche Orton; I trusted him too perfectly. But I also knew his disposition, I knew he was in a dangerous position. But she would have to make a fight for him if she was her idea—to take him from me I should not let go easily.

"You rogue!" The words, the manner of her saying, came back again and again as I continued to talk of oil wells, etc., with our guests, while Neil and Blanche turned over the music to find something they used to sing together.

"It went like this, Neil," I hear her say, then she hummed the tune "don't you remember? You should," laughingly, "you made desperate love to me that night."

Mr. Frederick, the man with whom I was talking, evidently also heard for he at once flushed and looked uncomfortable, while he talked more loudly as if he were trying to prevent me from hearing anything more. But they had found the song, and were soon singing. I had to confess that their voices blended wonderfully well, and when they had finished I told them so.

"You are very generous," Mr. Frederick said to me when they commenced another duet.

I had begun to quite like this bluff western, even though he lacked many of the graces possessed by men of society. He had interested me, wonderfully in his descriptions of big oil wells he owned in the west, and also in Mexico. He had some pictures of them in his pocket, and seemed pleased that I was interested. His little remark that I was generous made me like him all the more while it, in a way, embarrassed me. It showed he was not unobservant, and that if he were a bit uncouth, that he appreciated the poise which enable me to appear unconscious of her husband's flirtation with Blanche Orton.

After a little further singing, Neil sat down and talked a few moments with both the oil men, while Blanche Orton and I pretended to be interested in each other. But I found myself answering her at random while I listened keenly to what Neil and his guests were saying.

"I haven't a doubt I can put it though if you will not interfere," Neil remarked.

"I think you would be doing a very unwise and risky thing to try to manage it along the lines you suggest," Mr. Frederick said. "In the first place it is not the sort of affair that we can afford to have anyone who is shady mixed up in. In the second place if you do as you suggest and anything goes wrong, it will do us as well as you a great deal of harm. No, straight methods are the best. There may not be so much money at first, but in the end it always pays to be open and above board."

There was some more talk, then our guests left after Neil made an appointment to see them in the morning. We talked very little when alone. It was late. But I lay awake all night, once more with that foreboding sensation in connection with Neil's business affairs.
