Canadian Plays Boom In London

LONDON, July 27.—The author of "The Wrong Number", Mr. Harriet O'Higgins and Miss Harriet Ford, whose names are well known to Canadian theatregoers, have scored their second success in London the mecca of all playwrights. In 1917, when the war cloud was at its blackest, they enlivened the public gloom here with their bright little piece, "The Dummy", at the Prince of Wales Theatre. Now they have made an even more pronounced hit with the healthy, rollicking farce which is filling the Duke of York's Theatre every night. The play has been an eye-opener to theatrical managers, for it has demonstrated that a farce can be genuine success without relying for its laughter on bedroom scenes and the intrigues of adventurous husbands with naughty ladies. It is the first English farce that has been produced for many years. There is nothing American about it, and its unqualified success will be hailed with delight in Canada of which country Mr. O'Higgins is a native. Miss Ford, whether native or not, has qualified to be called Canadian by virtue of her many years residence in the Dominion. Unfortunately the authors of "The Wrong Number" were not in London to see the successful launching of their play, for Mr. O'Higgins is living in California and Miss Ford is in New York. Whether their further success will induce them to pay a visit to this country is a point of interest to many theatre goers, who are ready to extend a cordial welcome to the Canadian playwrights.

"But are you a British-born subject?" angrily demanded the official at the passport office. "My mother was British—" began the applicant. "Yes, yes—" "But she married a Frenchman—" "Yes—" "Yes—" "In Italy—" "Yes, but where were you born?"

Socialist Leaders Keep Sharp Eye on Russia

BERLIN, July 27.—The 20,000,000 Russian peasants who are threatened with starvation because help cannot reach them over the broken down railroads, are the centre of new political storms brewing in Central and Eastern Europe. Whether they die or not detract from the interest they have for the politicians. It is taken for granted no effective help can reach them where they are fleeing helplessly throughout the lower Volga region to the Ural mountains. Each day's flight accumulates greater hordes from every direction and leaves the country behind barren with the fallen littering the trail. However terrible may be the epidemic attacking the heart of Russia, political interest centres in what advantage may be taken from the situation. Both the communists and their enemies have in Germany, and the states bordering on Russia, an active political field in which both are active. The communists have started a campaign to help the starving peasants, and although it is patently a campaign in the interests of the Bolshevik Government, the other Socialists are forced to follow the same cry. The enemies of the Bolsheviks are meanwhile preparing to strike a blow if a portion of the vast hordes now fleeing from the hunger behind them succeed in reaching Moscow and overwhelming the Government as the soldiers fleeing from Riga overwhelmed the Korean Government in 1917. Boris Savinoff has been in active co-operation with Marshal Pilsudski in Poland for a year and has counter-revolutionary organizations through out Russia west of the Dnieper. He is only waiting for the Red army to be weakened by lack of food to start his operations. This time if Marshal Pilsudski marches on Kiev, the Bolsheviks will not be strong enough to resist, it is believed.

Preliminary Talk On Conference

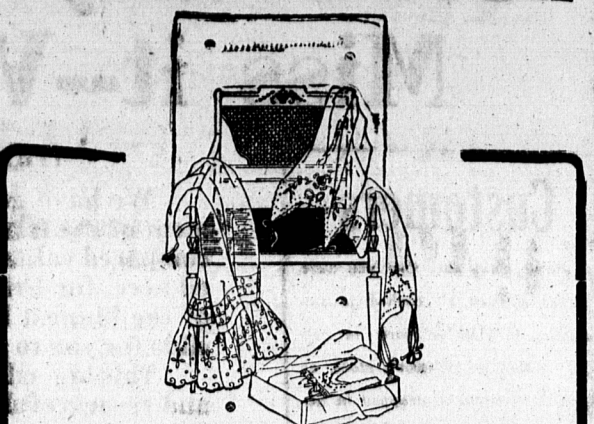

LONDON, July 27.—The London Times, while noting that there will be no meeting in London preliminary to the Washington conference, says it is probably there will be "preliminary conversations" here within the next month between accredited representatives of the powers which will be parties to the Washington conference. Premiers Hughes and Massey, according to the Times, probably will attend these conversations, thus "providing a sensible and practicable compromise between the Dominions' desire for representation in the Pacific discussions and President Harding's opposition to both, a preliminary conference in London and postponement of that at Washington until Spring." It declares that such conversations, though informal, would insure the wishes and feelings of Australia and New Zealand having full weight.

Stiff Fight Coming Over Tariff Bill

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Signs of insurgency against the extremely high tariff rates in the House Tariff Bill is developing in the Senate. A speech of Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota, veteran Republican warning his colleagues that this is a critical time for tariff making and that it will not do to follow old lines, and that their country must be given a chance to trade with the United States, is regarded as highly significant. Lines are forming in the Senate for a bitter fight against many features of the Bill.
