BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES
(By Thornton W. Burgess)

Blessed he who seeks to share With less fortunate his fare. —Old Mother Nature.

To see another in trouble, suffering and helpless and be unable to help him gives one a dreadful feeling. It does to most folks, anyway—all but those who are completely hard of heart and merciless, such as those who set cruel steel traps for furry folk and then forget, or do not take the trouble, to visit them every day, having no pity for those held helpless in dreadful pain, terror and despair, hungry, thirsty and cold.

Contract Bridge
By Josephine Culbertson

A VIGOROUS DEFENSE
West's magnificent defense in today's deal was based to a large degree on the special considerations of match-joint duplicate.

West dealer. East-West vulnerable.

♠	K J 8 7 2	♣	Q 3
♥	5	♦	K 6
♠	6 4 3	♦	K 10 7
♥	A Q J 10	♣	8 6 5 4
♠	A J 8 2	♦	3 2
♥	10 9 5 4	♣	10 9 5 4
♠	Q 10 7 2	♦	Q 9 5
♥	Q 9 5	♣	K 7

At this particular table the bidding proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1♥	4♣	Pass	1♠
4♣	4♣	Pass	Pass

North felt sure that he would have to "save" at four spades in any case against the vulnerable opponents, and therefore took the plunge immediately in the hope of avoiding a double. East, however, was not to be cowed after his partner had shown a strong hand by opening the bidding and then doubling one spade informatively.

West opened his singleton club—an excellent beginning. Declarer won with the king in order to lead a trump toward dummy. West went right up with the ace, however, and then, after due thought, shifted to his deuce of diamonds. East won the trick and, having no difficulty in reading the club situation, returned that suit.

West ruffed the club return and now had to do some careful counting. Everything pointed to the fact that he could have made four hearts, for 620 points, if he had been allowed to pay that contract; hence, if he defeated four spades only 500 points, he would not do well in the match-point column. It would not be enough to collect the heart and diamond aces, nor even to get a third diamond trick—something else was vitally necessary.

His mind made up, West now boldly underled his heart ace! East took the trick and returned a diamond. West collected the Jack and ace, then led his fourth diamond, and East's spade queen automatically was promoted to a trick, even though it was now blank! Thus, West collected the 700 points for which he had fought so hard.

When Reddy left that hollow he began at once. He was hungry. He was very hungry. He was hard to find, that it was several days since he had had enough at one time. It seemed to him that never before had he been so hungry for so long. Now he hunted with eyes and ears and nose as only a smart Fox can hunt.

For a long time he had not luck. Then he caught a Mouse. He picked it up to eat. He put it down. He looked back the way he had come. Then he picked the Mouse up again. Turning, he trotted back toward that bushy hollow. He had remembered that helpless young Fox. Reddy continued to go hungry that night.
