

Don't Let Constipation Drag On!

Do you often have days when you wake up tired—when you feel dull, sink, "fall bogged down"? It's not just a physical ailment, it's a sign that you are not taking a physical! You should get to the cause of the trouble!

If you eat what most people do—just bread, meat, potatoes—chances are that just this fact is responsible: you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the mass but leaves a soft "bulky" food in the intestines that helps a bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, what you need is crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains "bulky" plus Nature's great intestinal tonic, Vitamin B.

Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and see if your old sparkle doesn't come back! Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

DR. MACODRUM

gation are being discussed," he said, "there will appear with arresting regularity the conclusion of the whole matter: 'After all what the church needs is revival.'"

The Moderator said this applied to any department of the work of the church, finances, missions, the condition of the congregation. This general attitude should not be interpreted as a mood of despair, but as the prelude to reform and victory.

"When men are at their wits' end and cry unto the Lord in their trouble, he bringeth them out of their distresses," Dr. Munroe quoted. The Church, he said, is never farther from God than when it lives under the delusion that it is rich, and increased with goods and has need of nothing. The Church is nearer God when it prays "wilt thou not revive us again."

Tracing the history of the Church down the ages, the preacher dwelt on the revival periods. From the earliest times there had been revivals of theological learnings, revivals in social and moral reform, revivals influencing church music and art.

"When the need for better religious conditions is widely confessed, when pride and self-satisfaction have given place to the longing for something better, then the essential condition for revival is present," he declared.

"The revival of the church is humbled by seeming failure, when moral conditions alarmed the spiritually sensitive, then the revival is complete. The revival was answered in revival so marked that it was given a place in the annals of religion."

The Moderator said as constant characteristics of these revivals the appearance of great personalities and a new interest in the practical things of human life. The revival is marked by a new discrimination in moral judgments, there is a keener intellectual life, a warmer sympathy for the distressed and the suffering. Public life is lifted to a higher level of honor and unselfish service.

A fourth constant is the restoration of the true place of the church itself. A revival now would do that for which all are longing, restoring the church to its place of reverence and devotion, and filling the churches with true worshippers "for the Father seeketh such to worship him."

Noting that the assembly meets at a time of trouble and darkness, when dark clouds are on the horizon of many nations, Dr. Munroe said: "The Church was never so needed as now. It is now clear that organization and respectability will not of themselves save the church from the perils of the world. The Church needs some power outside of and above the merely human agency to revive the church and regenerate the hearts of men."

Immediately after the service balloting for election of Moderator began. Nominations were received from the floor of the assembly. Mr. J. J. Trainor, Minister of Finance, was nominated as a commissioner to the Assembly as well as nominated by a Presbytery. If no candidate receives a majority over all on the first ballot, the candidate with the lowest vote is dropped from the list and successive ballots are held until the candidate who receives a majority over all.

CONSCRIPTION BILL READY IN EMERGENCY

Chamberlain Declines To Reveal Details Of Measure Drafted In 1922.

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

LONDON, June 1.—Prime Minister Chamberlain today told the House of Commons the Government had a compulsory military service bill ready for submission to Parliament in the event of war; but that the Government was not committed to the bill and it would be for the Government of the day to decide what measures to present to Parliament should war break out.

The bill was drafted in 1922, he said, and was considered and amended by various Governments since and can be laid before Parliament at any time of emergency.

He said the draft did not provide for conscription of women, application of the compulsory service principle to industry or other non-military service—"although from time to time the Government has been given to the question of how to make the most efficient use of the nation's manpower in wartime."

ADDITION TO SPRING PARK SCHOOL
Messrs. James Ford and Roy Oakes have been awarded a contract for the construction of an addition to the Spring Park School, according to information received yesterday. The new section will provide two extra classrooms. It is planned to add a second storey to the present story and a half frame building which contains three classrooms and a gymnasium. The estimated cost is approximately $3,000. Mr. James E. Harris is the architect. A new heating plant is being considered. It was learned, in which an air conditioning system will be installed in conjunction with an oil furnace.

SUNDAY IS A DAY OF REST
The Government is to be asked to make Sunday a day of rest for all workers. The Standard Cubes are used for Sunday and emergency feeding. They are specially prepared for that purpose, though not recommended for every day.

"It is not the case that the Government are committed to anything in the nature of a compulsory military service. It would be a question for the Government of the day, in the event of war, to decide as to whether or not it is to put before Parliament proposals for compulsory military service."

But that would be only in the event of war. At the present time neither this House nor the Government are committed to compulsory military service.

What Sir James said meant to say, the Prime Minister explained, was that no one who enrolled in any volunteer services should think that he would receive an exemption from some other activity in wartime.

Should war come suddenly, however, he said, in which such a person could best serve which would probably be the way in which he had been trained.

"No one who has worked out," the Prime Minister said, "for the application of compulsion to industrial or other non-military services, should be misled by the time consideration has been given to the question of how to make the most efficient use of the nation's manpower in wartime."

Manufacturers Hear Tak On Mobilization

Three-day Convention Opens With Address By Defence Minister.

OTTAWA, June 1.—(CP)—Described by Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie as Canada's "Parliament of Industry," the 67th annual meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association today started its three-day gathering. Opening feature was Mr. Mackenzie's address on "mobilizing industry for defence."

After hearing the annual report by E. Brown of Vancouver, president, in which he stressed Canada's business decline in the last few months was due largely to influence of the United States on Canadian thought and activities, members considered reports of several committees and adjourned until tomorrow. A symposium on business-gathering opening feature was Mr. Mackenzie's address on "mobilizing industry for defence."

Addressing the Association's luncheon Mr. Mackenzie described development of production of war material in Canada but said he preferred to describe it as "emergency" material.

The development was attempted with two objects: to provide a source of supply which could be developed rapidly in emergency and which, during peacetime would provide a stimulus for Canadians; to provide facilities in Canada for such orders as might be placed in the country and which, during peacetime, would provide a stimulus for Canadians; to provide facilities in Canada for such orders as might be placed in the country and which, during peacetime, would provide a stimulus for Canadians.

The Minister discussed possibility of obtaining cellulose supplies for cordite manufacture from wood pulp rather than cotton; at present the nitro-cellulose used in this manufacture was imported from England because of the war. A suitable plant was available in Canada.

One of the most important defence developments was connected with the production of war material in Canada but said he preferred to describe it as "emergency" material.
