Plant Diseases And Treatment

Unfavorable weather conditions have increased the danger of late potato blight this season, state officials of the Dominion Experimental Farm. No blight has yet been reported, but the danger of spraying unaccountably, and all through the season at ten day intervals, is strongly emphasized. Now when the potato foliage is not dense, and all plant leaves can be reached, is the time to spray with Bordeaux mixture, spraying thus affords protection for young leaves. Spraying with about 250 lb. pressure and using 50 gals. to the acre is the general application rule.

Growers are warned to keep fumigant cylinders away from the piles. These when left to sprout, develop the blight disease and infest nearby crops. Consequently, it is advised to bury them away from the fields.

Vegetable crops generally such as beans, peas, carrots, and cabbages show freedom from blight. Peas show signs of mildew which is effectively treated with one of two applications of dusting sulfur. Wet conditions have made for quick development of apple scab. Spraying with Bordeaux mixture, is the most advisable treatment. Orchards which have been sprayed this show general good health and freedom from the disease.

The black knot of plum and cherry trees is developing. The best treatment here is the cutting and burning of all black knot growths then spray afterwards as for apple scab.

Generally grain crops are resisting disease, although wheat as shown in some fields, is being planted with treated seed are free from it. Rust of grains seems to be inactive but warrants watching.

Spraying of potatoes has occupied many days of this week at the Experimental Farm. Officials call attention to the Science Service circular number 100, which was issued recently by the Dominion Dept. of Agriculture, which treat of several potato diseases, and their control measures.

Will Bomb Military Targets In Rome Again If Necessary

LONDON, July 22 (CP) - The bombing of military targets in Rome will be repeated if and when military necessity dictates and regardless of world reaction, it was announced today by the British War Office.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's decision to carry the fight into the Italian capital was made with the full collaboration of the British government and British military leaders, the source declared, pointing out that American bombers were used because they were best suited for daylight precision bombing.

If Gen. Eisenhower decides it is necessary to bomb Rome's railroad yards again, they will be bombed, the source said emphatically.

House Likely (Continued from page one.) spoken "without reflection" when he said in the Chamber June 22 that he would draw a statement about judges to the attention of the senators. The consorship was not concerned with such civilian matters.

With war appropriation items passed, non-war estimates remain in the hands of the House and members looked for adjournment this week of a session which started in January.

Swiss Press Comments On Bombing of Rome

BERNE, July 22 (AP) - The Neutral Swiss Press expressed sorrow over the civilian casualties and reported wreckage of church property caused by the bombing of Rome but said it recognized the military necessity for the attack which the Berner Tagblatt said the allies have delayed "three long years."

Much as we regret the destruction of a beautiful church, we can not possibly feel so sorry as when we learned that Stukas had machine-gunned English children playing in front of a school house," the newspaper said.

The Gazette de Lausanne pointed out that Axis reinforcements for Italy were being held in the Balkans while both La Suisse and the Journal de Geneve recalled that Rome had not been declared an open city.

Promoted To Squadron Leader

SQDN-LDR. KEEFER

Word has been received here of the promotion of George Keefer to the rank of Squadron Leader. George spent many summers on Prince Edward Island the guest of his aunt, Mrs. Gordon Hughes. It was from this city that he enlisted with the R.C.A.F.

After proceeding overseas, he was transferred to R.A.F. and was among the first to be sent to Egypt. He returned to the platform where he was awarded the D.F.C. and was personally presented with the emblem by His Majesty King George VI on June 29, 1943, at Buckingham Palace.

Squadron Leader Keefer has seen plenty of action and his rapid promotion is a sign of his ability. George is in his 21st year.

PASTOR HONORED

Lord presented Dr. Miller with a gift of money from the congregation. Dr. Miller in reply spoke humorously in part and seriously in part. He referred to the difficulties and satisfactions of his ministry in Trinity Church, and expressed his confidence that the best years of Trinity Church history are yet to come. He called upon the congregation to give hearty and loyal support to the new minister, Rev. T. E. MacLellan.

Miss Sally Wood then sang a solo, "This is the Song" by Robert Frank. Mrs. George Bell afterwards called Mrs. Miller to the platform and on behalf of the Ladies Aid Society presented her with a beautiful bouquet. Mrs. Miller graciously expressed her thanks. This Society's June meeting had already presented Mrs. Miller with a pair of Kenwood blankets as a token of appreciation.

Dr. G. D. Steel, Clerk of the Session, spoke briefly on Dr. Miller's association with the Session and congregation. Among others who spoke were Kenneth Gaites, who on behalf of himself and visiting members of the R.A.F. expressed thanks to Dr. Miller and Mrs. Miller. Mr. E. M. MacLellan, W. P. MacLeod, Prof. Kendall, Dr. Carson, Miss Miriam Hughes, Mr. R. E. Mutch, Mrs. E. Mutch, and G. H. MacLellan. All of whom spoke of the devotion of Dr. Miller to the work of a Christian Minister during his pastorate here.

The congregation then joined in the singing of the Doxology and Dr. Miller pronounced the Benediction. At the close a opportunity was given to all present to wish Dr. Miller good bye and God speed. This ended a gathering that will long be remembered by members of Trinity congregation.

Text of Address

The address read by the Lieutenant-Governor follows: Rev. Hugh Miller, M.A., D.D., Pastor of Trinity United Church, Charlottetown, P. E. I.

Dear Dr. Miller: For the past nine years you and the people of this church have journeyed together in the fellowship of pastor and people; and as we reach the place of parting we review the way we have come.

In Presbytery Conference and General Council this church has had a spokesman and a representative who has given distinguished service. You renewed appointment to the Board of Home Missions, and the Board of Governors of Pine Hill Divinity Hall, your election as President of Conference and your elevation to the degree of Doctor of Divinity have brought you well merited honors and your people are proud of their pastor.

But it is in less conspicuous but more intimate relationships that the bonds which unite us have grown strong. The teaching of the communicants' class, the visitation of the sick and infirm, the oversight of all departments of our church life, the fearless and impressive preaching of the Word, and the personal example of a devout and consecrated life, have profoundly affected this pastoral charge. In a time of economic difficulty and moral confusion, and when circumstances had in some measure weakened our fellowship, your ministry exerted a heartening, steadying and unifying influence. Hundreds of men and women, young folk and the elderly, of every variety of circumstance whom you have led to the great Source of strength and inspiration, will remember you with grateful hearts.

The devoted services of Mrs. Miller, carried on year after year, in the Evening Auxiliary and the Chaminade Chorus, have done much to promote missionary effort and spiritual culture among the young people of the congregation. Her quiet work in many lines of activity and her gracious and kindly personality have won the affection and gratitude of our people. You will be remembered for your cheerful and unselfish service as well as your wisdom and devotion of life.

And now as you are about to depart we wish for both of you many years of health and happiness. May

CULTIVATION OR MULCH FOR FARM SHELTERBELTS? (Experimental Farms News) The merits of clean cultivation as against mulch for farm shelterbelts relate only to shelterbelts not more than 8 or 9 years old. It is usually only the life of shelterbelt trees, and or five years old. It is usually only the life of shelterbelt trees, and especially in war time with labor shortage, that planters look for easy ways of caring for them, and of keeping weeds in check, says John Walker, superintendent, Dominion Forest Nursery Station, Indian Head, Sask.

After the first few years cultivation within a closely-planted shelterbelt is not desirable and cultivation is not a rule, necessary, because the branches from trees in adjacent rows will more or less form a dense canopy over the ground and prevent strong weed growth. For the first few years after planting cultivation is recommended primarily for the destruction of weeds. Marginal weeds, however, should be controlled indefinitely.

Mulch is frequently suggested as an alternative to cultivation but in the prairie region of the Prairie Provinces it is generally agreed that the limiting factor for successful tree growth is the scanty annual rainfall. Moisture, to be of value to trees during the growing season, must penetrate the soil with the least possible delay and loss so that the water needs of the trees and needed food nutrients, may be changed into a soluble and usable form.

For this reason it would not seem advisable to consider mulching shelterbelts trees. Where a deep mulch is applied only the heaviest of rains penetrate the mulch and enter the soil. As to a mulch of straw, the same function is performed by a dry layer of soil formed by hoeing or cultivating the soil at the base of the trees.

Records show that well cultivated trees show decidedly greater average heights than trees not cultivated. A permanent mulch of grass or growing plants (including weeds) use and lose by transpiration large quantities of water which should be saved for the use of trees. Planters, however, should bear in mind that a mulch built up by the addition of leaves and other dead organic material amongst their trees will result in a more rapid accumulation of the same function is performed by a dry layer of soil formed by hoeing or cultivating the soil at the base of the trees.
