A King who shares his cigarettes with men he meets at bombing scenes and a Queen whose dresses are turned and made over to conserve cloth can't help being "tops" with their subjects and that's just how King George and Queen Elizabeth stands in Great Britain, says Virgil Pinky, B. U. P. news writer; I've been asking people for 10 days what impresses them most about their majesties and the substance of the replies is that "they are just like us." "They share the same dangers and undergo the same privations that I do," an old lady said. "Their home was bomber just like mine." The explosion that hit the house next to mine started a fire and it spread to my house," an auxiliary fire fighter said. "Within half an hour the King and Queen were there, seeing the damage, asking questions and cheering us all by their appearance. The King offered me a cigarete personally, right out of his own case." A tank captain said that when King George arrived to inspect his unit he was carrying his own packages of sandwiches under his arm for that day's lunch. The King, incidentally, is in excellent physical trim. He keeps up a schedule of exercises. An American diplomat told me that Queen Elizabeth was turning her dresses and abiding strictly by the food rationing terms. The King ordered the Royal Household to go on a war footing at the outbreak and he decided that for the duration he would wear a military uniform whether on or off duty. His favorite garb is the khaki uniform of a marshal. The Queen, however, still appears most frequently in her favorite gay colors but her wardrobe is by no means new. Rationing has placed a considerable strain on her supplies of hose and gloves, for she now walks miles in visiting hospitals, war projects and factories, and the wear and tear on gloves caused by the hundreds of handshakes daily is terrific. Every city district that suffered a major bombing attack by the Germans was visited by the King, and usually the Queen accompanied him. What the King saw in the midst of the bombs and fires and suffering caused him to say: "The greatness of any nation is in the spirit of its people." The children of the Royal House also are doing their share in the war effort and the fact that both Princesses—Elizabeth and Margaret Rose—remained in Britain and were not sent to the safety of Canada made an excellent impression.

APPLE BLOSSOM TIME

There surely is no lovelier sight
Seen in the month of May
Than groups of blooming apple trees,
Downwind, far far away
You catch their fragrance, as it floats
Upon the pure spring air—
And then you dream of heavenly things,
Transcendent, lovely, fair.

If you are the owner of a down quilt, cherish it, because down quilts will be really hard to get. Down is on the "scarce" list for civilian use. Go over the quilt carefully and see that any rips or tears in the covering are mended. If the cover is badly snot—by all means have the quilt remade. The filling is precious. And guard carefully against moths. Use plenty of moth preventive when storing, pack in a sturdy box and seal carefully with a gummed tape.

Eggs are among the vital foods in the diet and at the same time one of the most perishable. Therefore, special attention must be given to the egg, not only by the poultryman but by everyone who handled it from the time it is laid until it is taken from the carton in the consumer's kitchen.

GAMES FOR A SICK CHILD

Any child will have fun making little finger animals out of a piece of paper shaped and pasted to fit the finger like a thimble. Draw animal faces on them and attach flaps for the ears. Put the animal on the finger and move it about as if it were alive.—If you have any English walnuts in the house, clean out one half shell, cover the top with cardboard and poke a hole through it to hold a match stick. Now trust a triangular piece of paper over the match stick to make a sail and you have a little boat to sail in a basin of water.—Little dolls cut from tissue paper can be made to dance. Place them on the table and set two books on each side of them. Lay on piece of glass about two inches above the figures. Now rub the glass with a flannel cloth and watch the dolls cut capers.

SENERADE TO A STOVE

Everything in your house should be given special care these days, and your stove especially. Follow these few simple rules: 1. Wipe up spilled milk or fruit juice at once; it might stain the finish. 2. Let the range cool before washing or you may "craze" the enamel. 3. Keep spill wells of electric ranges and grates and burners of gas ranges clean with warm suds and let dry before using. 4. Open clogged gas ports with fine wire or stiff brush. 5. After using oven, wipe with a damp cloth and the same rich suds so grease won't bake on.

KEEP 'EM FLYING

Citronella, cedar oil or pine oil added to the final coat of paint will help to keep insects from settling on the painted surface while it is still wet. Usually a teaspoonful or two in a pail of paint is sufficient and this quantity will have no bad effects on the paint.

SHOULD BE THINNED

The proper thinning of shellac is a vital part of its correct application. It is seldom used as it comes out of the can, but is thinned to the proper consistency with denatured alcohol.

For good results in jelly and jam making, use fruit just under perfect maturity — when the pectin content and flavor are at their best

To keep hot fat from spattering, sprinkle a little flour into the pan before frying.

"JERKY"

Jerked meat, usually venison, is known as "jerky." It is lean meat, cut into strips, and dried over a slow fire or in the sun.

TO RETAIN COLOR

To keep beets and red cabbage from losing thier rich red color, add about one tablespoon of lemon juice to the water in which they are cooked.

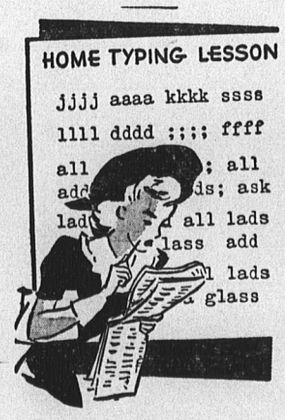
ODDITIES MADE USEFUL

There used to be a man in New York City who made it his business to go up into the forests in the northern part of the state and collect all the crooked sticks he could find. The more twisted and fantastic they are, the better for his purpose. Then he made them into chairs and other pieces of furniture, whose odd decorative shapes furnished constant reminders of the delightful, rough ways of the woods.

It is a tradition that our Lord, the Carpenter of Nazareth, was especially skilled in the making of yokes—yokes for the patient oxen as well as the soul yokes about which He spoke so beautifully. He must have taken peculiar interest in every crooked stick in a woodpile, just as we know He took the deepest interest in every crooked stick of humanity.

To speed up the completion of a pair of knitted socks, have both socks in progress at the same time. There will be times when you can pick up straight knitting while the other sock would be at the stage where it would need to have the heel turned or toe finished, jobs which need close attention. It means investing in an extra pair of knitting needles, but it speeds up the knitting when you are working for the Red Cross or foreign relief.

Business Typing Studied at Home



Exercises For "Touch" System

If you don't know touch typing, your chances may be limited in office work, for typing is expected in all sorts of jobs.

Yes, there are typing jobs—if you know the quick, accurate touch system. Bosses aren't hiring slow-as-molasses, one-finger typists!

Why not learn touch typing at home with our instruction booklet? A keyboard chart shows how to place your fingers on the eight "guide keys"—j, a, k, s, l, d, f and semi-colon

Then, as in the exercise pictured, you practice striking these keys. By moving only one finger at a time, striking sharply and lightly, you can work smoothly, evenly and tirelessly—as professional typists do.

Other exercises get you used to the other keys; each finger has its own section on the keyboard. But —no matter what key you type the finger must immediately return to its guide key.

This keeps you from popping all over the keyboard, willy-nilly, making mistakes.

Start learning with the aid of our 32-page typing booklet. Teaches touch typing with charts, exercises, speed drills. Gives rules for typing English; business, social and official letters. Can serve as a foundation for a business college course.

Send 20c in coins for your copy of "Teach Yourself Touch Typewriting" to The Guardian Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of booklet.

Dorothy Dix Says—

WIFE CANNOT FORGET MAN WHO JILTED HER

Many Women Spend Their Lives Grieving Over Cads

DEAR MISS DIX—I married a man I did not love, but whom I respected and admired, after I had been jilted very nicely by another man. I was fortunate in getting a husband who is a man of good character, kindly and generous and who has been devoted to me. We have been married nine years and have gotten along very harmoniously together, and have two children—all the setup for an ideal marriage, yet I cannot forget the other man.

I have tried to desperately—working hard at home, in civic activities, reading, societies, and so on, thinking I could starve him out of my life and supplant him with other things. Recently I saw this man for the first time in nine years and was so upset it just blew to smithereens all my theories about forgetting.

I am grateful for all the blessings of my home and want truly to be rid of this old love. I want to enjoy the life I now have, but I cannot forget the happiness I once knew with the other man.

There is nothing that can be done about it. He is married and has children. I would not want to break up his home, and I would not think of throwing my children's lives into turmoil by thrusting a broken home upon them. But what can I do to be rid of this inner conflict?

A LIFE DIVIDED.

ANSWER—The way a woman's mind works its wonders to perform is never such an insoluble mystery to me as when one goes on loving the unlovable and pining for one who has put upon her every affront and insult. Yet they often do. Every day I get letters from women who tell me that their husbands have starved them and beaten them and forsaken them for other women, yet they end up by saying: "I love him still."

MANY GRIEVE OVER CADS

You wouldn't think that it would take much ill-treatment to turn the sweetest love into clabber. About the time a man told his sweetie that he was tired of her and was leaving her for a new girl; or a husband gave his wife a black eye, or walked off and left her with a household of children to support, you would suppose that her romance would be spoiled, and that there would be no other human being in the world whom she would hate with such fervor as she did him.

But not so in many cases. There are thousands of women who spend their lives grieving over the cads who flouted them, and thousands of wives who wait patiently for faithless husbands to come back to them after they have gotten so old and rheumatic that they can no longer chase other women. And why God put this dog's heart in so many women's breasts, only He with His inscrutable purpose knows.

When that kind of a woman asks how she can forget the man who has betrayed her faith in him, no answer is possible. It is idle to tell her to look at the man and see him as he is—selfish, self-centered, unprincipled, utterly unworthy of her respect—because she has idealized him into a hero of romance so long that she cannot see him in his true character.

It is a waste of words to appeal to her common sense and try to make her realize that she was lucky that he jilted her before marriage instead of forsaking her afterward. It is foolish to point out to her how bootless it is to cry over spilt milk. She is joined to her idols and nothing will divorce her from them. And our only conclusion is that she enjoys having a secret sorrow.

NEED HOME OF THEIR OWN

DEAR MISS DIX—We are a young married couple and our marriage is being wrecked by the useless and senseless arguments we continually have. We both work and make fair salaries. Ever since we have been married we have lived with my husband's people, but I want to live elsewhere and he will not agree to that. Seems to think that he can't leave his family.

I like to dance, but every time I suggest our going out we have a row over it. We have a car and I would like to learn how to drive it, but he will not permit me to do so. It is just quarrel, quarrel, quarrel about everything until I have gotten to the point where I can't stand it any longer. It seems to me that if my husband loved me as much as he says he does that he would do something toward making my life happy. I love him and I hate to see our marriage go on the rocks. What must we do to save it?

A VERY UNHAPPY WIFE.

ANSWER—In the first place, get a home of your own. No young couple can ever get the married feeling as long as they live with their in-laws. You have to have you rown house of which you are the head to get a sense of responsibility. You have to have your own furniture, your own cups and saucers and cooking stove to have pride in your belongings. You have to build up a home together to get any feeling of permanency.

So start a home if it is only one room and a kitchenette. It will give you something to do and think about and it won't leave you so much time for arguing.

Certainly, as you say, if your husband loves you he should do something toward making your life happy, but what are you doing toward making his life happy? Are you considering his comfort? Are you falling in with his plans? Are you doing some of the things that he likes to do? Marriage is a fifty-fifty partnership, you know, and it is just as much up to you to make him happy as it is for him to try to give you a good time.

Don't worry about his not being willing to teach you how to drive a car. There won't be any car to drive in a short time and it isn't worth learning how to dent fenders now.

And quit arguing. When you disagree with your husband keep silent. That will put an end to any quarrel.

EDUCATION IS A WEAPON

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am aboy 14 years old. The way I hate school is a lowdown shame. I am thinking of running away from home. What I really love is fishing, hunting and rambling outdoors. Shall I quit school or not?

DISCOURAGED.

ANSWER—Listen, son, haven't you enough sense to know that an education is the weapon with which you will have to fight the battle of life, and that whether you succeed, or fail, depends on how good a one you get? There is nothing that you can do in life that won't be affected by what you know, so don't think about running away from school. Run to it and study hard so you will soon get through with your training.

If you love to fish and hunt and ramble outdoors, why don't you fit yourself to be a forest ranger, or an agricultural expert, or a deep sea fisherman? But before you can get into any one of these jobs you will have to have an education.

1 package lemon flavored jelly powder
1 1-2 cups apricot juice, hot or boiling
1-2 cup water
1-8 teaspoon salt
1 baked (9-inch) pastry shell

Dissolve jelly powder in hot or boiling apricot juice as directed on package. Add water and salt. Chill until it begins to thicken. Arrange apricots in baked pastry shell. Cover with slightly thickened jelly mixture. Chill until firm. This may be served with Honey Meringue.

For electric beater—use 1-2 cup honey to 1 egg white.

For hand beater—use 1-4 cup honey to 1 egg white.

THE COOK'S CORNER

MAPLE SYRUP ICE BOX CAKE

1 tablespoon granulated gelatine
3 tablespoons cold water
2-3 cup maple syrup
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
1-8 teaspoon salt
1-2 cup chopped nuts
1 cup heavy cream
1 1-2 dozen ladyfingers

Method: Sprinkle the gelatine over the cold water and allow to stand for about 5 minutes. Bring the maple syrup to a boil and add the gelatine to it, stirring until this is dissolved. Now gradually add this to the stiffly beaten egg whites Set this in a cool place to partially set, and then add the cream which has been whipped along with the salt and the chopped nuts. Arrange a layer of ladyfingers in the bottom of a mould and cover with a layer of the maple mixture, and continue in layers until all of each is used. Set in the refrigerator until thoroughly set. This can be served plain or with sweetened whipped cream, if desired.

The gelatine dessert is made in the form of a whip.

MAPLE WHIP

1 tablespoon granulated gelatine
1-4 cup cold water
1 3-4 cups maple syrup
Dash of salt
2 egg whites
1-3 cup chopped nuts

Method: Place the cold water in a bowl and sprinkle the gelatine on this. Allow to stand for 5 minutes. Add the salt to the maple syrup and bring to a boil. Dissolve the soaked gelatine in this. Chill until this reaches a honey-like consistency, and then beat with a rotary beater, until light and frothy.

Beat the egg whites until stiff and fold into the gelatine mixture, along with the nuts. Turn into moulds that have been rinsed in cold water and chill until firm. Unmould and serve garnished with chopped nuts, and sweetened and flavored whipped cream.

Hot biscuits and honey make a delightful luncheon dessert.

When making your next apple pie; Use 3 cups sliced apples: substitute 1-2 cup honey for sugar; sprinkle cinnamon and 1 tablespoon water over top and dot with 1 tablespoon butter.

A Job Only You Can Do!

Price Control Questions And Answers

Questions and answers on Price Control will appear in The Guardian as a regular feature for Saturday. The questions are those which have reached the Wartime Prices and Trade Board from housewives in this region. The answers are provided by the Board. Readers who have intelligent questions to ask on price control are invited to send them in writing to the Women's Regional Advisory Committee of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Chappell Building, Charlottetown.

QUESTION: Will the demand of fish goods for the British market overseas cause a scarcity and a subsequent increase in price here?

ANSWER: The effect of shipments to Britain will certainly be noticeable here. In the case of canned salmon and herring, for instance, they will vanish completely from the Canadian market after present stocks are sold. All supplies of these fish in 1942 are to be shipped to Britain, hence there will be no price to worry about in Canada. In the fish field generally, however, the United States market absorbs a far greater percentage of the Canadian catch than does Britain and it would be from this source that shortage would be likely to develop. In this connection the Canadian Government is presently keeping the whole fish situation under constant surveillance. Certain kinds of fish are under the price ceiling and there need be no worry about the prices of these. Other types are free from the ceiling restrictions due to seasonal and market conditions, but the Wartime Prices and Trade Board keeps a close watch on dealing in these types and any indication of speculative trading, or unjustifiable increase in prices is enough to prompt action reestablishing a ceiling on such commodities.

QUESTION: Is every single price covered by the "ceiling?"

A. The "ceiling" covers the retail prices of all goods with only a few exceptions.

Why are there any exceptions and what are they?

A. 1. Prices of some goods which normally fluctuate from season to season are excluded from the ceiling. To impose a low seasonal price as the rigid maximum price might result in supplies disappearing altogether during seasons in which the cost of such supplies are above the ceiling level. For many food products costs go up seasonally because a summer crop must be stored and, perhaps, processed in some special way, or, because at certain seasons imports must replace Canadian produce. For example, no one would expect to buy tomatoes, lettuce or potatoes at the same price all the year round. For this reason fresh fruits, vegetables and greenhouse products are exempt.

This does not mean that their prices are free to rise without restraint. They will be carefully watched and the Board will take action if they consider the rise excessive. Seasonal fluctuations will be allowed but throughout the year as a whole the retail prices of these products will go up unreasonably.

Eggs, with highly seasonal prices, are not exempt because the ceiling period was almost at the seasonal peak of prices. With a more plentiful supply, the retail price of eggs has fallen below the ceiling level.

Other normal seasonal price changes which have been sanctioned are changes in the prices of coal and coke and in railroad rates.

2. The prices of a few unstandardized commodities such as birds and animals, are exempt.

3. Because of peculiarities in the exports trade the prices of some kinds of fish and the prices of furs and fur goods are also exempt.

4. The prices of war supplies are exempt from the price ceiling since they are always controlled by the Department of Munitions and Supply.

5. The prices of farmers' and fishermen's products are exempt when sold to dealers or processors. This is necessary to allow for seasonal and other complexities. However, the retail price of these products to the consumer is fixed. The retail prices of some kinds of fish are exempt but the Board will take action to make sure that adequate supplies are available to Canadian consumers at prices which it will set if necessary.

6. The prices of goods sent out of the country for sale are exempt as the Canadian Government could not hope to control prices outside the Dominion.

A Morning Smile

NO WARNING

On a sentimental pilgrimage of their old home town an elderly couple lingered at a street corner.

"Do you remember, John," the old lady sighed sentimentally, "we always used to meet here when we were courting?"

"Yes, my dear," replied her husband, "but that sign wasn't there then."

And he pointed to the notice, which read: "Dangerous Corner: Go Slow."

THEY'RE PLENTIFUL

It was this first trip to London, and the man from the North was being shown round. The Tower and the Houses of Parliament left him cold, but he registered enthusiasm when they came to St. Paul's Cathedral.

"Bah gum," he said in an awed voice, "t' parson chap here keeps a champion lot of pigeons!"
