Exhume Body For Autopsy

(P. F. By Guardian's Special Wire)
LUNENBURG, N. S., Feb. 24.—Seeking signs of violence, Dr. H. A. Creighton performed an autopsy today on the exhumed body of Frank Cooper which was found under a wharf here last November. While parents of Cooper sought to establish their son's death was not accidental, Dr. Creighton said tonight he had not completed his report on the findings of the autopsy and that parts of the body might have to be sent to Halifax for further examination. It was understood he was investigating the bones for signs of violence which might have caused Cooper's death. A coroner's jury reported he had died from a fall to rocks below the planking of the wharf.

MAY BE TRIED ON SEPARATE INDICTMENTS

Bannister Cases Before Westmorland County Court Today.

(C. F. By Guardian's Special Wire)
DORCHESTER, N. B., Feb. 24.—Separate indictments against Arthur and Daniel Bannister, who were committed for trial on one information charging them with the murder of Philip Lake, appeared probable on the eve of the Westmorland circuit court opening according to authoritative information. The court will open here tomorrow afternoon with Chief Justice J. H. Barry, of the King's Bench division, presiding.

Heavy Docket

Another case on the unusually heavy docket is that of Mrs. May Bannister, mother of Arthur and Daniel. She is charged with having kidnapped infant Betty Lake, lone survivor when her father, mother and baby brother died at Pacific Junction Jan. 5. In event the grand jury returns three true bills, the Bannister cases will result in that many trials. Information tonight also indicated that other cases might be disposed of first, with the murder and kidnapping trials set over until next week, possibly Tuesday.

45 Witnesses

At the Bannister trials upwards of 45 witnesses will be called by the prosecution—P. J. Hughes, E. G. Fredericton, and G. F. G. Bridges, Moncton. Any of these witnesses may be summoned before the grand jury, according to the jurors' wishes. H. Murray Lambert, Moncton, is counsel for the three accused.

More Than 70 Talsmen Will Be In Court Tomorrow

Information tonight also indicated that more than 70 talsmen will be in court tomorrow, but if the Bannister trials are set over until next week most of the prospective jurors probably will return to their homes until then.

MINISTER SIDES WITH C.C.F. LEADER

Admits He Is Public Ownership Man In Backing Woodsworth Resolution.

(C.F. By Guardian's Special Wire)
OTTAWA.—State intervention in business to insure a square deal for labor and consumers was upheld in the House of Commons today by Trade Minister Euler. Governments, he said, sometimes must invade the field of business as a duty to the country as a whole.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP MAN

Mr. Euler admitted he was a public-ownership man but not to the extent outlined in the Woodsworth motion which he believed went altogether too far. "In certain cases," Mr. Euler said, "government intervention in business is an absolute necessity and duty, there are occasions—they exist today, I believe—when it becomes the duty of governments to intervene when a great business organization takes advantage of its power to oppress its workers or to exploit the consumer. If we have no statutes which enable the government to intervene it becomes the duty of the government to enact such laws so it can cope with the situation."

Cheered On Stand

Later the Minister said the government had every intention of meeting its obligations in this respect. His statement brought prolonged desk-pounding from Liberal members. The debate all day was academic and will form a strange contrast to the discussion tomorrow when the Canadian-American reciprocity agreement is up for ratification. Premier MacKenzie King is expected to move ratification, to be followed by Conservative leader Bennett who will oppose it.

League Must Be Supported With Force As Well As Sentiment Says British Foreign Secretary.

(By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer)
(C. P. Cable By Guardian's Special Wire)
LONDON, Feb. 24.—Britain's foreign policy remains one of active support of the League of Nations and a general acceptance of the theory of collective security.

In grave tones youthful Anthony Eden made this clear in his first speech in the House of Commons as Foreign Secretary today. In an extensive review of the British position in foreign affairs he summarized the various aspects of the complicated problems but concluded with the declaration that in the particular as well as in the general the British government found the solution through the League of Nations.

But the League of Nations must be supported with force as well as sentiment. And for its part Britain was prepared to play a full part in carrying out the League's decisions. "Britain must be strong" in spirit and fact for it is only by this method we shall achieve the international order and peace for which the world had grave anxiety.

Major Clement Attlee, leader of the Labor opposition, voiced his disappointment that the government had not made up its mind regarding imposition of oil sanctions. He asserted further that a case had not been made out for increased armaments.

Collective Security

The final objective of the British government was a world-wide system of collective security embracing all nations, said the Foreign Secretary. That ideal might still be far off but it could only be realized by strengthening the authority of the existing system by encouraging the cooperation of other nations.

"We must not be afraid of living up to the traditions of the past. Time was when Britain gave parliamentary government to the world. She must now be ready to play a part in building up a new world order. It is to that task we must apply ourselves. If we succeed, we shall have to bring others along with us and we shall not be able to do that unless other nations are convinced of our sincerity and our strength."

This "world-wide system of collective security" must attain an authority "unchallenged and unchallengeable." It must be made clear to an aggressor that the odds against success in any breach of system agreements, whether the aggressor be within or without the system, would be insurmountable.

"The British government will have no lot or part in an individual or minority policy of encirclement," declared Eden. (This was noted by some observers as a further indication of Britain's hesitation in forming a "ring of steel" around Germany. Britain has "not" definitely taken steps towards accepting Germany's right to rearm and regain a place of prestige in the international family providing the Reich will abide by the policies of the League of Nations.)
