Is Bankrupt

NEW YORK, June 26.—Frederick Brown, real estate operator and art collector who has given millions to charity, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy Saturday. Assets and liabilities were not estimated in the petition, which merely states that Brown owes money he cannot pay.

He listed among his creditors "various and sundry religious, charitable and educational organizations to which I have committed myself to make voluntary contributions, from which commitments I do not wish to be discharged."

NOVA SCOTIA PREPARES FOR AN INVASION

HALIFAX, N. S., June 27.—(By The Canadian Press)—Nova Scotia as the playground of Scotch tourists is the vision of Miss Winnifred Wrench, director of Overseas Club activities in Scotland, and the first sight-seeing invasion of New Scotland from Old Scotland will take place in August. Through the activities of Miss Wrench a party of Scotch tourists will spend a holiday camping on the shores of Lake Sherbrooke, in Lunenburg County, where a lodge has been prepared for their use.

After several visits to Nova Scotia, as well as to other parts of Canada, Miss Wrench returned to Scotland "delighted with what she had found there," to use her own words, "and horrified at her own ignorance." She is once set about telling the people of the old country of her impressions of the Maritime Provinces, Nova Scotia in particular, declaring that in the nearest part of Canada to Great Britain could be found "all that the heart of man could desire in the way of an out of doors summer holiday."

The Overseas Club branch in Wolfville, N. S., co-operated with Miss Wrench in organizing the first visit of Scotch tourists, and they also had the co-operation of the provincial and federal governments. The hope expressed by Miss Wrench was that a great deal of the tourist business from Scotland that goes to the Scandinavian countries could be diverted to the Maritime Provinces.

Miss Wrench is a sister to Evelyn Wrench who founded the Overseas Club in 1906.

Britain A Patters For The Dominion

MONTREAL, June 27. (By The Canadian Press)—Canada still has lessons in self-renunciation and self denial that she may learn from Britain, and it is perhaps time for this country to get down to bed-rock in many respects, was an observation made by Hon. F. B. McCurdy, of Halifax, in an interview here today. He has just returned from five months in England and on the continent and is enroute home.

In discussing some of the Empire's problems, Mr. McCurdy said: "I have been deeply impressed with the courage and the determination of the Englishman who is so admirably facing up to his taxation and other problems realizing that the remedy of his country's embarrassment will largely come through the initiative and self sacrifice of the individuals."

"Britain," he said, "has with a great effort balanced her budget. Among other contributions, her tax payers have, in twelve months, contributed seventeen hundred million dollars in income taxes to be met at the end of the fiscal year by a statement from the Chancellor of the Exchequer that they will need to repeat the effort in the current year. It will be done, of course, for the Englishman understands that the only way out of the woods must rest with the individual who by his initiative, sacrifice, and determination must create a national total force that will overcome the lions which stand in the way of financial solvency and business recovery. With the consent of the great majority she has set on one side the traditional trade policies of near a century, seeking by fresh experiment to find that means of bettering her national conditions."

"To learn something from her inspiring example I doubt that we in Canada have yet truly accepted the new gospel of self renunciation and self denial. Are we not inclined to look too much to government or to external agencies to help us through difficulties, forgetting that the means of winning is within us, and that only in us as individual citizens in a nation, which is in the last analysis merely an association of individuals, lies the well spring of future progress. Had we not better, too, get down to bedrock and balance our budgets individually, and by our own self sacrificing efforts attack the volume of debt and deficits which have been overhanging our skies like threatening clouds."

Asked with regard to conditions in his native province of Nova Scotia, Mr. McCurdy's face lightened with a warm smile. "Nova Scotia is all right; she always manages to get along and I hear much less complaint there than in many other parts. Of course there are questions needing to be discussed. But the spirit of our people is admirable. For the most part they are engaged in developing natural resources. They did not share greatly in the industrial boom and financial inflation of the past decade, now passed into history, and have little cause today to regret it. In consequence the purchasing power of our people has been less impaired than in these places where the boom existed and burst. We look on the present rather as a testing time, when the work of today may be reflected in wider markets and renewed influence in the future, when general world conditions once more return to a more prosperous and stable level.

"Nova Scotia has always brought in much of her requirements from outside. She is actually and potentially one of the most fertile markets in Canada for you in the western provinces, in that she actually manufactures little of the finished products of industry and must receive from without the great bulk of machine made commodities. Manufacturers and others who are already acting upon this principle have found a substantial reward. We may in boom years have been regarded as a slow market, indeed we were, in contrast to other markets in which money circulated freely, perhaps too freely as we have since seen. But when other parts of Canada and the United States are suffering the very natural reaction from such a period of over production and over purchasing Nova Scotia and the Maritime Provinces are coming along very nicely. Her people have been thrifty, and mindful of the proverbial rainy day which outlook on life is standing the province in very good stead at the present time."
